MR. AND MRS. JOHNSTON
. . . quiet vacation

Perrin Celebrates Three Extra Years

TORONTO — Perrin Johnson, 57, and his wife Margaret are celebrating a very special anniversary. It was three years ago today that a St. Michael's medical team, headed by Dr. Clare Baker and Dr. James Yao gave Mr. Johnston a heart transplant. The Johnstons left Toronto Monday on a two-week vacation.

WASHINGTON — Alaska's fishermen are taxing themselves a penny a fish to finance a court action against the proposed trans-Alaska pipeline which, they claim, would dstroy their livelihood. "Oil and fish are not compatible," said Knute Johnson, a fisheries' union chairman. His 450 members say that heavy ship traffic through the Valdez arm would inevitably lead to spills destroying crabs, salmon and other fish.

GLENDALE, Calif. — "Captain Bligh met Mr. Christian again this week after a break of almost two centuries. Maurice Bligh, a fifth-generation descendant of the captain of HMS Bounty, met Thomas Christian whose famous 18th century ancestor Fletcher led the mutiny aboard the British warship. The modern Christian, now a book dealer in Kent, England, is on a Pacific visit to make contact with descendants of the Bounty mutineers of 1790.

VANCOUVER — Morality may not be the quality one usually associates with taxation. But, according to University of California professor George F. Break, the federal tax bill scheduled to come into effect Jan. 1 looks after some taxpayers' morality too.

'You can have a tax-free rollover with your wife but with no other woman" the professor told the annual meeting of the Canadian Tax Foundation. Accountants use the term rollover for the capital gains tax-free transfer of investment assets from husband to wife.

COLUMBUS, Ohio — A robber picked the wrong victim when he walked up to tobacco-chewing Bill Parsons and demanded money. "I had this big chew of tobacco I let it go right in his face," said Parsons, 74, who thought the man might have had a gun in his pocket. The frustrated bandit fled.

HENLEY ON THAMES, England — Dame Gladys Cooper, a leading British actress whose career spanned 66 years died at her Henley home today after a long illness. She was 81.

Thailand Coup

By PETER O'LOUGHLIN

BANGKOK (AP) — Premier Thanom Kittikachorn assumed absolute power in Thailand today by abolishing parliament, dissolving his cabinet and suspending the constitution.

Tanks surrounded the parliament building and paratroop reinforcements were brought into Bangkok, but the city was calm.

Thailand is strongly anti-Communist. The 60-year-old premier, who came up through the military and has the rank of field marshal, told the country he is heading a revolutionary council. He said its personnel will come from the armed forces and the police, with some civilian elements.

Thanat Khoman said some legislators' behavior had hampered the government. He has been attacked frequently in the lower house.

The premier's actions amounted to a coup d'etat against parliament and was in effect a return to the conditions that prevailed before parliament was reconstituted in 1969. There were 10 years of military rule before that. Thanom's predecessor, Sarit Thanarat, was also a field marshal. He died in 1963.

Escaping Charge Withdrawn

A 21-year-old William Head inmate had a charge of escaping custody withdrawn in court Tuesday because prison officials decided to treat the ease as a disciplinary matter.

Judge Edmond St. Jorre withdrew the charge against Howard Edward Riley on application of prosecutor J. W. Anderson.

After court, prison officials said the inmate was apprehended Monday evening immediately after climbing over the fence of the minimum security prison.

Prison superintendent Gamaliel Milner said the matter was before an institutional disciplinary court for hearing on attempted escape.

Riley, from Ladysmith, was serving two years, 11 months for theft, driving while suspended and driving without insurance. He recieved the sentence last March.

Three Parties For Children

Volunteers from the Canadian Forces Fleet School in Esquimalt will give three parties Thursday, Dec. 16 for physically handicapped, mentally retarded and underprivileged children in Greater Victoria.

The parties will be held in the dockyard gymnasium, beginning at 10 a.m., 1 p.m. and 4 p.m.

Senate Gives DISC Approval

WASHINGTON (CP) — The Senate Wednesday voted approval of the DISC proposal, a scheme Canada has said could hurt her export business and also add to Canadian unemployment.

Approval came as the Senate voted 59 to 28 against an amendment that would have knocked the Domestic International Sales Corporation idea out of the bill now under debate and replaced it with a more moderate idea.

The amendment, proposed by Senator Fred Harris (Dem. Okla.) would have carried little or no threat to Canada.

Canadian officers have said the plan as now written could harm Canada by encouraging U.S. exporters to export heavily to Canada and give the U.S. an edge in markets where the U.S. and Canada compete.

Finance Minister E. J. Benson of Canada has said that in influencing the relocation home of U.S. plants now operating in Canada, the plan could lead to a massive exodus of manufacturing jobs from Canada.

DISC A LOOPHOLE

Harris and other U.S. critics have charged that the DISC plan, under which firms manufacturing for export could defer tax payments on much of their income, amounts to a billion-dollar tax loophole for business.

His plan also would have encouraged subsidiaries to relocate back to the U.S. and employ Americans, but would have removed what DISC critics term a tax bonanza for big business.

Since the DISC plan was not included in the House of Representatives version of the tax bill it will come up for discussion at a House-Senate conference to reach a compromise on the two versions.

The compromise tax bill must be approved by both chambers and signed by President Nixon before it becomes law.

But since the Senate, House and Nixon administration all favor DISC in one form or another, some version is expected to gain final approval.

DISC critics have said that since the plan would permit tax deferral for maybe 15 years, it in fact would amount to a tax exemption

School Budget Up by 15.7%

Sooke School Board has approved a provisional budget of $5,388,514 for 1972, an increase of $732,881 or 15.74 per cent over 1971.

Despite the increase, the board predicted that the mill rate will "compare favorably with adjacent districts."

The increase was attributed to a 5 per cent rise in student population, unemployment insurance for teachers, electricity rates and debt charges.

HOW TO WRITE A GOOD CLASSIFIED ACTION AD

1—IT'S BEST to start your ad with the name of the article or service you have to offer. If you have an apartment, room, etc, for rent, or property for sale; start your ad with the location.

2—BE CLEAR. Readers respond more quickly and favorably when given complete, definite information. Always include the price in your advertisement. Don't allow the reader to speculate.

3—MAKE IT EASY for the reader-prospect to reach you. Always give your telephone number or your name and address. If you do not have regular hours, state a preferred time for the prospect to get in touch with you.

4—PLAY SAFE. You get the greatest reader attention by using consecutive insertions. A six-day order is best and costs less, and you can, of course, stop your ad as soon as you get the results you want. You pay only for the days your ad appeared. Lower yearly rates are available to those who wish to keep their services or products before the public every day.

5—PLACE YOURSELF in the reader's position and ask yourself what you want to know about your offer. The answer you give will make a good Want Ad.

6—GIVE YOUR PROSPECT every inducement you can with good copy. Classified action ad readers have the money and are already interested in buying the merchandise or service you have to offer; the details and information you give are the most important.

7—WANT ADS THAT FAIL TO bring the desired results do so usually, not through a lack of readership, but because they are poorly worded or contain inadequate information.

8—TO PLACE YOUR AD, call 386-2121, your direct line number to fast Want Ad action. A courteous, efficient ad-visor will be glad to help you word and place your order. And remember, Classified Action Ads afford you the most complete coverage. Telephones are open daily, Monday through Saturday 8:00 a.m. to 8:00 p.m. for you call.

MR. AND MRS. JOHNSTON
. . . quiet vacation

Perrin Celebrates Three Extra Years

TORONTO — Perrin Johnson, 57, and his wife Margaret are celebrating a very special anniversary. It was three years ago today that a St. Michael's medical team, headed by Dr. Clare Baker and Dr. James Yao gave Mr. Johnston a heart transplant. The Johnstons left Toronto Monday on a two-week vacation.

WASHINGTON — Alaska's fishermen are taxing themselves a penny a fish to finance a court action against the proposed trans-Alaska pipeline which, they claim, would destroy their livelihood. "Oil and fish are not compatible," said Knute Johnson, a fisheries' union chairman. His 450 members say that heavy ship traffic through the Valdez arm would inevitably lead to spills destroying crabs, salmon and other fish.

GLENDALE, Calif. — "Captain Bligh met Mr. Christian again this week after a break of almost two centuries. Maurice Bligh, a fifth-generation descendant of the captain of HMS Bounty, met Thomas Christian whose famous 18th century ancestor Fletcher led the mutiny aboard the British warship. The modern Christian, now a book dealer in Kent, England, is on a Pacific visit to make contact with descendants of the Bounty mutineers of 1790.

VANCOUVER — Morality may not be the quality one usually associates with taxation. But, according to University of California professor George F. Break, the federal tax bill scheduled to come into effect Jan. 1 looks after some taxpayers' morality too.

'You can have a tax-free rollover with your wife but with no other woman" the professor told the annual meeting of the Canadian Tax Foundation. Accountants use the term rollover for the capital gains tax-free transfer of investment assets from husband to wife.

COLUMBUS, Ohio — A robber picked the wrong victim when he walked up to tobacco-chewing Bill Parsons and demanded money. "I had this big chew of tobacco I let it go right in his face," said Parsons, 74, who thought the man might have had a gun in his pocket. The frustrated bandit fled.

HENLEY ON THAMES, England — Dame Gladys Cooper, a leading British actress whose career spanned 66 years died at her Henley home today after a long illness. She was 81.

Thailand Coup

By PETER O'LOUGHLIN

BANGKOK (AP) — Premier Thanom Kittikachorn assumed absolute power in Thailand today by abolishing parliament, dissolving his cabinet and suspending the constitution.

Tanks surrounded the parliament building and paratroop reinforcements were brought into Bangkok, but the city was calm.

Thailand is strongly anti-Communist. The 60-year-old premier, who came up through the military and has the rank of field marshal, told the country he is heading a revolutionary council. He said its personnel will come from the armed forces and the police, with some civilian elements.

Thanat Khoman said some legislators' behavior had hampered the government. He has been attacked frequently in the lower house.

The premier's actions amounted to a coup d'etat against parliament and was in effect a return to the conditions that prevailed before parliament was reconstituted in 1969. There were 10 years of military rule before that. Thanom's predecessor, Sarit Thanarat, was also a field marshal. He died in 1963.

Escaping Charge Withdrawn

A 21-year-old William Head inmate had a charge of escaping custody withdrawn in court Tuesday because prison officials decided to treat the case as a disciplinary matter.

Judge Edmond St. Jorre withdrew the charge against Howard Edward Riley on application of prosecutor J. W. Anderson.

After court, prison officials said the inmate was apprehended Monday evening immediately after climbing over the fence of the minimum security prison.

Prison superintendent Gamaliel Milner said the matter was before an institutional disciplinary court for hearing on attempted escape.

Riley, from Ladysmith, was serving two years, 11 months for theft, driving while suspended and driving without insurance. He recieved the sentence last March.

Three Parties For Children

Volunteers from the Canadian Forces Fleet School in Esquimalt will give three parties Thursday, Dec. 16 for physically handicapped, mentally retarded and underprivileged children in Greater Victoria.

The parties will be held in the dockyard gymnasium, beginning at 10 a.m., 1 p.m. and 4 p.m.

Senate Gives DISC Approval

WASHINGTON (CP) — The Senate Wednesday voted approval of the DISC proposal, a scheme Canada has said could hurt her export business and also add to Canadian unemployment.

Approval came as the Senate voted 59 to 28 against an amendment that would have knocked the Domestic International Sales Corporation idea out of the bill now under debate and replaced it with a more moderate idea.

The amendment, proposed by Senator Fred Harris (Dem. Okla.) would have carried little or no threat to Canada.

Canadian officers have said the plan as now written could harm Canada by encouraging U.S. exporters to export heavily to Canada and give the U.S. an edge in markets where the U.S. and Canada compete.

Finance Minister E. J. Benson of Canada has said that in influencing the relocation home of U.S. plants now operating in Canada, the plan could lead to a massive exodus of manufacturing jobs from Canada.

DISC A LOOPHOLE

Harris and other U.S. critics have charged that the DISC plan, under which firms manufacturing for export could defer tax payments on much of their income, amounts to a billion-dollar tax loophole for business.

His plan also would have encouraged subsidiaries to relocate back to the U.S. and employ Americans, but would have removed what DISC critics term a tax bonanza for big business.

Since the DISC plan was not included in the House of Representatives version of the tax bill it will come up for discussion at a House-Senate conference to reach a compromise on the two versions.

The compromise tax bill must be approved by both chambers and signed by President Nixon before it becomes law.

But since the Senate, House and Nixon administration all favor DISC in one form or another, some version is expected to gain final approval.

DISC critics have said that since the plan would permit tax deferral for maybe 15 years, it in fact would amount to a tax exemption

School Budget Up by 15.7%

Sooke School Board has approved a provisional budget of $5,388,514 for 1972, an increase of $732,881 or 15.74 per cent over 1971.

Despite the increase, the board predicted that the mill rate will "compare favorably with adjacent districts."

The increase was attributed to a 5 per cent rise in student population, unemployment insurance for teachers, electricity rates and debt charges.

IF YOU DRIVE . . . DON'T SMOKE

BRISBANE, Australia (Reuters)—Heavy smokers have been warned to think twice about driving.

The Queensland director of air pollution control, A. Gilpin, says anyone who smokes 20 or more cigarettes a day suffers from impaired vision and judgment.

He told the annual conference of the Australian Automobile Association Tuesday: "If you smoke heavily, think seriously before taking your car on the highway, and if you smoke and drink you shouldn't be able to drive at all."

Gilpin said that road safety campaigns concentrated on alcohol and ignored the hazard of the smoking driver, but a smoker at the wheel breathed in more carbon monoxide from his cigarette than from his car.

Nemetz Report Awards Union 15.8% Pay Raise

B.C. Hydro 'Disappointed'

VANCOUVER (CP) — British Columbia Hydro electrical workers will receive a 15.8 per cent wage increase over two years under the terms of an arbitration report issued today by Mr. Justice Nathan Nemetz of the B.C. Court of Appeals.

The binding decision gives the 2,400 members of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers a 7.9 per cent increase retroactive to last April 1 when their previous contract expired and another 7.9 per cent starting Jan. 1.

The appointment of Mr. Justice Nemetz brought about the end of a province-wide strike earlier this year after months of fruitless negotiations. The union had sought a 22-per-cent increase and Hydro had originally offered 12 per cent.

In his report, Mr. Justice Nemetz said both sides agreed to the two-year term of the new agreement.

On the issue of contracting out by Hydro, the crown corporation must in the future require contractors using unorganized labor to maintain the same standards of wages and working conditions as the union agreement.

"It is apparent that the Hydro is now distributing its work among larger numbers of small contractors, many of whom have no collective agreements with organized labor," the report said.

On isolation allowances, Mr. Justice Nemetz ruled that it would not be advisable to make any change in the index prior to a scheduled review of the system next year.

"I have every confidence that after receipt of that (review) the parties will be able to establish an equitable cut-off point on the revived isolation index before the termination of the new agreement," he wrote.

In Vancouver this morning, a B.C. Hydro spokesman said: For Hydro, this award is a great disappointment."

"It will add greatly to inflationary pressures and will increase costs to our customers, who must pay an additional $3.3 million per year in wages alone to our 2,000 electrical workers — the most highly paid of any electrical utility workers in all Canada."

Partridge Quits UVic Presidency

By BRIAN BUTTERS
Times Staff

Bruce Partridge announced his resignation Tuesday as president of the University of Victoria, saying his effectiveness "has been impaired by personal attacks."

Partridge made his announcement to a special meeting of the university faculty. He leaves the post Jan. 31, 1972.

Lloyd G. McKenzie, chairman of the UVic board of governors, said Partridge had reached his "outer limit of endurance" after a series of "sustained, remorseless, venomous attacks."

HIS OWN

Asked if Partridge's decision was influenced in any way by members of the board, McKenzie said: "Really, it was his personal decision.

"But, in a case like this, the decision has to be a collective decision. The board was conscious of the situation at the university and so was the president. For that matter, so were the faculty, the public and students."

McKenzie said "generous" arrangements had been made with Partridge concerning terminal salary.

Asked if Partridge will receive something besides the proportion of his yearly salary due to the end of January, McKenzie said: "Yes, there will be something extra. There has to be in terminal arrangements like this."

REASONABLE

"They have to be reasonable arrangements and, in fact, they have to be generous," McKenzie said. "It can't be done in any other way."

Partridge said he doubts very much that he'll stay in academic life but has no job to go to. Dean of education Dr. Hugh Farquhar has been appointed acting president until a replacement is found.

Gill Auchinleck, vice-chairman of the board of governors, said he agreed with Mc-

'Now Is The Hour'

The following interview took place Tuesday night in the office of University of Victoria president Bruce Partridge, who had resigned earlier in the evening:

Times: Was there any single turn of events which influenced you into deciding to resign?

Partridge: No, not really. From the time I came to the University of Victoria it was a question not of whether I was going to resign but when I was going to resign. I don't think a president of a university should stay on in his job too long. It just seems that now is the hour.

Times: Do you have any other job lined up now?

Partridge: No, I do not have another job waiting. I felt it wouldn't have been fair to the university to seek something else before announcing my resignation. Some people will think I'm crazy not to, but I'm not.

Times: Do you plan to stay in academic circles?

DO OTHER THINGS

Partridge: No, I doubt it very much. I will now literally start thinking about other things to do.

Times: Do you have any specific location in mind for the future?

Partridge: That depends on what turns up, but we do like B.C.

Grits Probe Leak

OTTAWA (CP) — The federal government Tuesday launched an investigation into the leak of a confidential cabinet document on foreign domination of the Canadian economy, regarded as one of the most serious security breaches since Prime Minister Trudeau took office three years ago.

External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp said the government would call in the RCMP if necessary in efforts to find out how the document, dated July 29, was acquired by Southam News Services.

Trudeau said today he personally ordered an investigation into the leak about cabinet discussions on the issue of foreign ownership.

He added in an interview that he instructed Revenue Minister Herb Gray to start an investigation.

He declined to say whether the RCMP is involved.

Initially, the investigation concerned publication by The Canadian Forum, a Toronto monthly magazine, of a version of the report on foreign ownership made to the cabinet by Mr. Gray.

The prime minister repeated that the cabinet wants to make an announcement on foreign ownership as soon as possible. This had been held up by the Aug. 15 U.S. imposition of a surtax on imports.

Trudeau said he still hopes an announcement can be made this fall. But a lot would still depend on U.S. economic moves.

Trudeau was asked whether the government policy will still include some sort of screening mechanism for foreign investment.

He said the public will just have to wait and see.

He was careful, however, not to deny that the cabinet had approved in principle a screening agency, at least initially, or that such an agency will be part of the policy announcement, whenever it is made.

The Gray report was a study prepared by civil servants for cabinet consideration while the document published Tuesday was an actual record of cabinet proceedings, usually the subject of stringent security safeguards.

Hundreds of civil servants had access to the Gray report, but only the prime minister, his 29-man cabinet and a handful of aides, advisers and top civil servants had access to the cabinet document.

Quebec No 'Have-Not'—WAC

OTTAWA (CP) — Premier W. A. C. Bennett of British Columbia today continued his opposition to equalization payments, especially those to Quebec, as the federal-provincial conference on the economy and fiscal arrangements entered its final day.

He said in an interview before entering the morning session that Quebec should not be considered a "have-not" province because its natural resources are as great as any other province.

He blamed the federal government for the situation, saying "at the present time we haven't got a national government in Ottawa, we have a government of Quebec."

Mr. Bennett's comments followed what Quebec Premier Robert Bourassa termed a "lively exchange of argument" between himself and the B.C. premier in the closed conference room Tuesday.

In an interview outside the conference, Mr. Bourassa said Mr. Bennett appeared to regard Quebec as the "coddled child" of Confederation.

"I don't know what he has against Quebec or against the equalization formula," Mr. Bourassa said. "He said that we should abolish the equalization payments formula."

In his opening brief to the conference Monday, Mr. Bennett said the equalization payments, which redistribute wealth from richer to poorer provinces, should be replaced by a national guaranteed income plan for individuals to be paid for by Ottawa.

However, a predicted fierce battle over Canada's equalization payments turned into a mild skirmish Tuesday. It apparently ended after Prime Minister Trudeau firmly announced there was no new territory up for grabs.

The present system of channelling tax money from the richer provinces to the poorer ones will continue as it has. And if the warring provincial premiers were disappointed, they were also relieved that they didn't lose some of their existing grounds.

IRA Vows Revenge

BELFAST (AP) — The Irish Republican Army threatened today ruthless reprisals against British intelligence men whom it accused of torturing guerrilla suspects. (See also page 41.)

An IRA statement, commenting on a British government inquiry into interrogation methods, demanded an investigation by a team of international jurists.

It added: "Torturing by British troops is still going on and nothing short of a full disclosure of the truth will shock the British public into disowning the infamous policy of their government.

"The Irish Republican Army has compiled a list of names of those engaged in torturing. Ruthless action will be taken against them in due course."

In Dublin, the Irish Republic's prime minister, Jack Lynch, said he is considering taking the issue before the European Court of Human Rights in Strasbourg, France.

HEFTY SHAKE URGED FOR UN

NEW YORK (UPI) — A top United Nations official called today for "shock treatment" — including staff cuts of up to 50 per cent — to revitalize the world organization.

Maurice Strong, the Canadian secretary-general of the UN conference on the human environment, described the United Nations as "a flagging organization which is somehow out of the tune with the needs and the moods of the times."

Pakistanis 'Repulsed'

NEW DELHI (UPI) — Government spokesmen today charged that a patrol of Pakistani troops invaded India's west Dinajpur district but was repulsed by Indian soldiers. They also said shelling attacks along the East Pakistan border killed 11 Indian civilians.

Old Fire Back At Labor Meet

VANCOUVER (CP) — The British Columbia Federation of Labor snapped out of an introspective mood Tuesday to adopt an aggressive set of policies on economic, environmental and political issues.

The old fire crackled most briskly over a resolution flatly rejecting any form of wage-and-price controls as an affront to working people.

It also flared up, however, in a standing ovation for David Barrett, leader of the provincial New Democrats, at the end of a frankly nationalistic speech attacking the free-trade proposals of Premier W. A. C. Bennett.

The opening Monday of the week-long convention was largely a self-criticism session with federation executives and delegates listing the shortcomings of the labor movement.

In the debate on wage and price controls, U.S. labor was damned for the extent of its cooperation with the economic policies of President Nixon.

U.S. labor's acceptance of a three-month wage-and-price freeze was as severe a blow to working people as its earlier support for the war in Vietnam, the convention was told by Ray Haynes, secretary-treasurer of the B.C. Federation.

Also approved was a resolution urging the Canadian Labor Congress to assist affiliates seeking greater autonomy.

Bowl Suit Filed

A number of B.C. companies and businessmen associated with the now-defunct plans for commercial development of Cypress Bowl in West Vancouver have been named as defendants in a legal action launched by another B.C. firm.

The plaintiff, Valley Royal Development Company, seeks damages in excess of $1 million for what it claims is breach of warrantees under which the firm would have developed Cypress Bowl into a recreation centre.

The writ was filed Oct. 28 in the Supreme Court of British Columbia but was brought to public attention today by Opposition Leader Dave Barrett.

Mafia Friends Vital to Sinatra

By NICHOLAS GAGE
(Third of a Series)

"Friendship is everything," says the Mafia don in Mario Puzo's novel The Godfather. "Friendship is more than talent. It is more than government. It is almost the equal of family. Never forget that."

The Mafia leader addresses this advice to a character named Johnny Fontane, an Italian singer who revives his sagging career with a straight action role. Many readers consider the career change to be one of numerous similarities between the fictitious Johnny Fontane and singer Frank Sinatra, who revived his career in 1953 with his Academy Award-winning performance in From Here to Eternity. (The successful comeback allowed Sinatra to announce his retirement early in 1971 while at the top of his profession.)

But those who know Sinatra well would realize that the similarity between Johnny Fontane and Frank Sinatra is superficial. Sinatra, for instance, would not need the lecture on friendship from the Mafia don. For Sinatra has, for 30 years, honored his friendships with Mafia leaders even though they have tarnished his image, damaged his business interests, and cost him his amiable relationship with the late President John Kennedy.

It is not at all unusual for singers to have to deal with gangsters, who have a stake in many of the nightclubs where entertainers get their start. But no other entertainer has ever built such acquaintances into enduring friendships.

Although Sinatra has never been accused of participating

Lively Passage Cut From Hansard

By PETER McNELLY
Times Staff

British Columbia's 1971 Hansard was published last week, seven months after the legislative session ended, with one of its liveliest exchanges missing.

The provincial Hansard, called Debates of the Legislative Assembly, routinely does not include debates of estimates or third reading of bills.

The debate took place March 23. Had the omitted section been included, it would have appeared on Page 766 of Hansard.

In the printed version of the debate, Barrett was asking Bennett to take a second look at the bill. Hansard records that Barrett was interrupted after which the Speaker is recorded as saying:

"I don't intend to threaten any Member, but I'm going to get back to the principle of this bill"

The deleted material shows Barrett was having a heated exchange with Bennett who was interrupting and ignoring calls for order from the Speaker.

This is what has been omitted:

Speaker: Order please.

Barrett: Mr. Speaker, may I submit humbly, obviously nothing stops the Premier speaking any time he wants. He breaks the rules of this House by jumping up when he doesn't have the floor by interrupting when he doesn't have the right.

Speaker: Order please.

Barrett: He doesn't understand the rules of the House. He makes his press conferences here in the House.

Speaker: Order please.

Barrett: He breaks the rules and he sits down and smiles about it. You know, Mr. Chairman, we see the Premier abusing the House time and time again.

Bennett: Oh no, we know who gets thrown out.

Speaker: Order please, We're on the second . . .

Barrett: We know who's got the authority.

Speaker: Order please.

Barrett: Do you want to threaten to throw me out, again? You run the House that way, threatening the Members, threatening to silence them, threatening them all the time.

This statement is followed by the Speaker's printed comment about not wanting to threaten anybody.

Questioned about editing procedures Tuesday, Murray first said "Nothing was taken out of the text, nor was anything added to the text."

Murray later said he checked a typescript of the debate for March 23 and found a section had been omitted because it was "con-

CS Threatening Walkouts

VANCOUVER (CP) — Although any walkouts would be illegal, a strike vote will be taken in January among provincial employees if the provincial government does not enter them in the federal unemployment insurance plan.

Notice that the vote would be called was served Tuesday by John Fryer, secretary of the 26,000-member British Columbia Government Employees Union at the annual convention of the provincial Federation of Labor.

Provincial law does not give public workers the right to strike. Fryer said, however, he has heard reports that some provincial employees are already planning to stage wildcat walkouts if the government does not act for them before the Jan. 1 deadline.

6,000 WORKERS

Some 6,000 public workers — employed in the provincial ferry service and highways department and as casual labor — now are covered by unemployment insurance.

Under the terms of amendments to the plan approved in June, provincial governments have the choice of including all their employees or none of them after Jan. 1.

Fryer indicated wildcat strikes would be the answer of the ferry and highway workers if they lose their coverage under the plan. He warned that liquor store clerks likely would take part as well.

OPPOSITION

Inclusion of all provincial workers in the plan would cost the government an additional $2 million a year, Fryer estimated. "It seems that there's some opposition to paying the federal government any money at all," he said of the provincial government's position.

Quebec has already indicated it will not include its government, school board and hospital workers in the federal plan. Leaders in the province have said it would cost Quebec an additional $18 million in premiums each year and they have promised an alternative plan for some of the workers denied federal coverage.

. . . PREMIERS

ers expressed optimism today that they can work out the machinery for joint federalation.

Prime Minister Trudeau, launching discussion at the final session of the conference, said he believes that "some measure of agreement and general support has been reached on the principle of this form of consultation and that significant progress has been made towards establishing new mechanisms to bring it about within a continuing format."

He called consultation between the three levels of government a pressing issue.

"No one level of government can alone deal with the causes and consequences of urbanization. The policies and activities of all levels of government have an impact on the urban environment."

SET TO BARGAIN

Also in Ottawa today Health Minister John Munro said the federal government is ready to negotiate changes in its proposed formula to limit rising expense for shared-cost health programs.

Several provinces have objected to the proposed new formula that would limit federal contributions.

Munro told reporters that the premiers generally supported the federal desire to put some limit on cost increases and to make the whole program more flexible.

But the limiting system proposed — which would have put a ceiling on federal contributions tied to increases in gross national product — stirred some opposition at the conference.

Munro said meetings would be held in the next three weeks to begin developing the basic cost-limiting agreement into a specific new formula.

NOT FOR SALE . . . at any price. Butch Bennett, 2, and Teresa Cox, 3, were "sold" to a Jacksonville couple Tuesday by two men who claim to be from Oklahoma, the home town of the children. The pair were arrested in Jacksonville after receiving $7,000 and a used car. Held are Wilford Bennett (also known as William O'Hara, 37), and Robert Westenhaver, 22. With the children after their rescue is Sgt. J. I. Suber of Jacksonville. The girl's mother is believed to be Mrs. Dorothy Cox of Oklahoma City.

Connally Retains Hard Line

WASHINGTON (WP) — Treasury-Secretary John Connally sharply criticized Japan and Western Europe Tuesday night in a hard-hitting speech that suggested American efforts to win trade and monetary concessions overseas have so far made little progress.

Connally, who returned Saturday after a swing through the Orient, made no mention of any success in the worldwide talks.

Nor did he indicate any softening in the three-month-old general tariff or the unilateral U.S. decision to let other currencies float against the dollar.

Rumors had been rife that the secretary would announce some loosening in these policies or even withdrawal of the tariff altogether in his address to the Economic Club of New York.

As it turned out, he indicated no retreat from the tough stance he took toward U.S. trading partners immediately after President Nixon announced his new economic policy Aug. 15.

Centre Planned

VANCOUVER (CP) — City council decided Tuesday to negotiate a cost-sharing agreement with the provincial government for the establishment of a temporary detoxification centre to be operated in conjunction with the Salvation Army until a permanent alcohol and drug treatment centre is set up.

PAIR SHARING MILLION DOLLARS

LONDON (AP) — A garage mechanic and a factory worker today shared a world-record soccer-pools prize of more than $1.25 million.

Michael Turton, a garage mechanic who lives near Rugby in central England, received $634,295 for his skill at forecasting the results of last Saturday's soccer matches throughout Britain.

John Heald, whose job up to now has been repairing mine cars in Mexborough, Yorkshire, won $719,147 for showing equal skill. Heald, 63, and in poor health, will retire.

Turton, 37, plans a round-the-world trip for himself and his family, starting off with a safari in South Africa.

"What a great feeling knowing we need not work again," he said. "We have worked 80 hours a week for 10 years and now we will be able to pack it in."

Pools prizes are paid to those entrants who predict eight matches in which both teams have scored but tied.

Chabot Raps Labor

Municipal Affairs Minister Dan Campbell and Labor Minister James Chabot today charged the B.C. Federation of Labor with taking an irresponsible position against the province's job opportunities program for welfare recipients.

The charge was made in a telegram today to the federation at its convention Vancouver. Tuesday, convention delegates said the job opportunities program was meant to force people "off welfare to work at sweat shop and non-union wages."

In a press conference, Campbell said no welfare recipients are being forced into the scheme.

"There is no element of force whatsoever connected with this program. There never has been," Campbell said.

Latest figures from job opportunities committee staff show more than 4,500 persons have voluntarily applied for opportunity certificates. Campbell said more than 400 employers have made direct requests for employees through the plan.

A breakdown of Greater Victoria statistics shows 253 certificate holders and 68 employers are interested in the Victoria welfare office district, 83 certificate holders and five employers in the Saanich district, 69 persons and four employers in Langford and 10 persons and seven employers in Sidney.

N.S. Liberals Win Majority

HALIFAX (CP) — Nova Scotia has a majority provincial government today for the first time in 13 months. Premier Gerald Regan's Liberals won only one of two byelections Tuesday but that was enough to give them a margin of two seats in the legislature.

The result all but ended the prospect of an early provincial election. If they had lost both contests the Liberals would have been left with only half the 46 seats in the house, exactly where they stood after the October, 1970, general election. Standings now: Liberals 24, Progressive Conservatives 20, NDP two.

Liberal Frank Bezanson, 43, was elected Tuesday in the Annapolis Valley ridings of Kings West on his second try. He lost to a former Conservative cabinet minister by one vote last year after a recount. That result was later declared null and void due to voting irregularities.

On the Nova Scotia south shore the Conservatives led by Opposition Leader John Buchanan had no trouble retaining a seat in Queens held by them since 1953.

Dr. Floyd MacDonald, a 36-year-old physician, more than tripled the 1970 PC majority in that constituency. He gave Liberal candidate Harley Umphrey his second defeat in a row and left an NDP hopeful far behind. Queens was left vacant by the resignation of former Conservative finance minister W. S. Kennedy Jones.

Premier Regan, in Ottawa for the federal-provincial conference, said he is pleased to see his government attain a majority in the legislature, even though "just barely." The Liberals would continue to govern as if they had a larger margin in the house.

Kings West had been held by the Conservatives since 1963. Opposition Leader Buchanan blamed the defeat of PC nominee Fred Chisholm on the armed services vote at Greenwood air base. It went mostly to the Liberals.

He said the Queens result showed "total displeasure with the Regan government and its policies."

It was the first election test for Premier Regan and for the new Conservative leader since each assumed his present position.

The Bezanson win gives the government a working majority of one after providing for the legislature speaker. Opposition vacancies due to illness, resignation and the voided Kings West election saved the Regan administration from any serious threat of defeat during its first year in office.

sidered an interruption and not related to the bill under discussion."

He added that many interjections are entered in Hansard simply as interruptions because of the difficulty of hearing them on the tape recording of the debates.

STATEMENTS DELETED

Murray said he was not able to produce the typescript, but it could be made available to an MLA on request.

Miss Norah McNiven, a professional editor who worked this spring editing typescripts of the debates, told the Times her work was reviewed by staff in the Speaker's office who sometimes deleted critical statements made by various MLA's.

In her opinion, she said, more government members' remarks were deleted than those from the opposition.

Miss McNiven, who has done editing for Princeton University Press, Charles Merrill Publishers and Judson Press, is not proud of having worked on the provincial Hansard.

"I thought it would be what I consider an honest editing job," she said. "It was, when I did it, verbatim."

She said after she saw some of the deletions she "just let it go on," because she found she did not have the final word on how the copy of the typescript looked before it went to the printer.

Miss McNiven said she remembers that an exclamation — "deliberate unemployment, deliberate unemployment" — was stricken from a typescript copy of Columbia River MLA James Chabot's speech moving adoption of the Speech from the Throne.

She said she also remembers seeing that a remark had been writen into the typescript by Murray which quotes Burnaby-Edmonds MLA Gordon Dowding interrupting Chabot's speech to say:

"You wouldn't know a Maoist if you saw one."

The statement appears on page eight.

MAYBE MISSED

This happened during an early stage of her work on Hansard, said Miss McNivin, so she thonught she might have missed the quote on the tape. She said when she checked again, she could not hear the statement attributed to Dowding.

Miss McNivin came to B.C. last year from Atlanta, Georgia, where she had been public relations director at Atlanta University.

A United States citizen, she has no political connections in B.C.

ILLITERACY

Her experiences in B.C., she said, are part of the reasons why she intends to return to the U.S.

"When I heard the illiteracy of the members of the parliament and especially of the cabinet members, I almost got sick to my stomach," she said.

She added that the legislature under former Georgia Governor Lestor Maddox was better behaved and more democratic than the provincial legislature.

Copies of Hansard are available at the provincial Queen's Printer. This is the second year a Hansard has existed in B.C.

Murray said he is not happy with the late printing date and expects to get the volume out earlier in 1972.

'Some Diddling'

Opposition Leader Dave Barrett said today the Hansard deletion shows the B.C. government has been "diddling" with records of the House.

"I'm shocked. It was a matter we had intended to investigate. We had heard that there may be some irregularities or alterations in the record.

We had not had the opportunity to do our own checking at this point. We await an explanation from the premier," Barett said.

He refused further comment.

U.S. Market Idea Backed by MLA

John Tisdalle, MLA for Saanich and the Islands, today came out strongly in support of Premier Bennett's stand that a common market should be established between Canada and the United States.

Likening Canada and the U.S. to "two lungs" needed to function properly on this continent, Tisdalle said to ignore this fact was "to be economically ignorant and biased for the sake of nationalism."

He asked, "What makes the U.S. buck a foreign one?" when it is invested in Canada while funds from Russia, Japan, Sweden and other countries were not considered foreign.

Panning those who criticize the ULS for influencing other countries through their investments. Tisdalle pointed out that 15 of B.C.'s "giant" corporations have heavy foreign investments.

er that the controversy over proposed development of Cypress Bowl would lead to legal action.

The controversy reached a peak after the B.C. developers of the bowl sold out to Benguet international interests which were also active in the business of running gambling casinos in the Bahamas.

Resources Minister Ray Williston ruled the Benguet interests unacceptable to the government in late November, 1969, a few weeks after the takeover of the bowl venture.

Cypress Bowl is currently being developed as a public park by the provincial government.

In the writ, Valley Royal states that its rights to develop Cypress Bowl were breached as a result of Williston's ruling and another by West Vancouver municipality refusing to allow road construction to the bowl area.

The writ cites letters written by Williston to the former developers and by the West Vancouver municipality as evidence of the development rights which it purchased when it bought all the shares of Alpine Outdoor Recreation Resources in 1969.

. . . INTERVIEW

Times: You spoke a few minutes ago of a feeling of cynicism you were beginning to experience. I presume this had an effect on your decision to resign.

Partridge: We, my wife and I, began to note this cynicism a few weeks ago. We decided we don't want to be soured by a job. I never have been, you know, either soured or cynical and I don't intend to start now.

ANY REGRETS?

Times: Do you have any regrets about the job, any things you would like to do over a different way?

Partridge: Oh sure, one always has regrets, the feeling that things possible could have been done differently, but there was nothing overwhelming.

Times: Had you thought seriously about quitting much before now?

Partridge: Sure, I thought about it quite often. My wife and I have talked about it a lot this fall. There are days in any job when it seems that it's just too much.

Times: Do you feel that the report of the advisory board on the tenure issue vindicated you?

Partridge: The tribunal report was a one hundred per cent vindication of the actions of the administratin. It wasn't a personal vindication; I'm not talking about myself when I say that and I haven't been all along. What we wanted was an impartial review of the situation. We had it, the report came down, and I stand by it.

There has been a very great change here recently. A great many professors have said they're just fed up with campus politics and they've settled back down to work. This is good. And it's something this university has needed for a long time. A settling down.

Cruise for Addicts

MARSEILLE, France (Reuter) — Twenty-two young drug addicts will be given a Mediterranean tour next January in an attempt to help them kick their habit, a French official said here. Joseph Comiti, secretary of state for youth and sports, defended the project against critics, saying he preferred to give addicts a sea cruise than locking them up.

UVic Officials Urged To Remain at Posts

Following is a statement by Lloyd McKenzie, chairman of the board of governors of the University of Victoria, delivered to a meeting of staff and faculty of the university Tuesday afternoon:

The board of governors announces, with regret, that it has received and accepted the resignation of the president of the university, Bruce Partridge, effective Jan. 31, 1972.

In view of this development, the vice-president academic designate has decided not to confirm his acceptance of the appointment.

In light of the above decisions, the prospect of changes in other senior administrative offices, and the state of instability in the governance of the university, the board of governors has decided to request incumbent senior administrators, in so far as possible, to remain in their present positions until Jan. 31, 1973.

McKenzie

STABILITY

The board will be reluctant to make any administrative appointments, particularly of external candidates, before that date or until a higher degree of stability becomes apparent on the campus.

The board of governors announces the appointment of Dr. Hugh E. Farquhar, dean of the faculty of education, to the position of president, pro tem, effective Feb. 1, 1972. Dean Farquhar will work closely with Partridge over the next two months to ensure a smooth and effective transition of responsibility within the president's office.

CO-OPERATION

The board of governors seeks the co-operation of all members of the university community to ensure that the University of Victoria is going to survive.

Besides the formal statement issued to the staff and faculty, McKenzie released the following statement:

"My formal statement as chairman of the board of governors describes the steps taken consequent upon the resignation of president Bruce Partridge. This is a sad occasion. He brought to his most difficult office the highest intelligence, experience, enthusiasm, energy and integrity. He possesses man's superior qualities to the highest degree. Despite this, in the weird world which is the contemporary university, he has found it impossible to continue.

"He has been exposed to sustained, remorseless, venomous attacks and has withstood them with the utmost manliness. All men however, have their outer limits of endurance and this has been reached.

"I have supported him from the beginning and I support him now and wish him well. I will support Dr. Hugh Farquhar when he assumes, for the time being, the president's chair, and I ask this community and this university to do the same. We cannot stand to lose another good man."

Statement by Partridge

Following is a statement by Bruce Partridge, president of the University of Victoria, who resigned Tuesday.

"During the past two and a half years a number of changes have occurred in the university. Changes are never easily made; they exact a toll in personal relations and in the sense of confidence and security of those most directly affected. In the past year my effectiveness as president has been impaired by personal attacks, which have also diverted the attentions and energies of many from the important tasks of addressing and solving the fundamental questions which confront the university.

"If we could anticipate a continuation for a year or two of the pattern of growth we have enjoyed in recent years, it is probable that institutional composure could be readily regained. We know, however, that the years immediately ahead hold severe tests for this university as well as for other universities. Difficult decisions will have to be made, and their application will demand all of the patience and good will a university can muster in even the best of circumstances. With anything less it is doubtful whether the university can adequately respond from within to meet the external pressures which will develop.

Partridge

"In such times, it is more important than ever for the president to look to the future and to ask himself whether he can function at optimum effectiveness. If not, then to continue would be to do the university a disservice.

"I have concluded that it is now best for the university, for me, and for my family, that I resign, with my resignation to become effective as soon as the board can conveniently make appropriate arrangements for transfer of responsibilities.

"I arrived at this decision with some sense of regret because it would have been more satisfying personally to have seen the university completely through the transition which is now under way. I would not have left last spring because to have done so would have been to undo much that had been done by the many who have been working to build a strong university. As I see the mounting evidences of a constructive mood on the campus, I no longer feel that constraint.

"At its regular meeting yesterday, the board of governors accepted my resignation, effective Jan. 31, 1972, and discussed arrangements to provide a smooth transition. These arrangements are described in the accompanying communication from the chairman of the board."

. . . PARTRIDGE

Kenzie that Partridge's decision to resign was a "collective" one.

"That's a fair statement to make," Auchinleck said.

DISAPPOINTED

"I'm disappointed and sorry to see Dr. Partridge go," he said. "I'm sorry that the pressure got too great for him to stay on. And I am hopeful that students and faculty will support Hugh Farquhar to the limit."

Auchinleck said Partridge's decision was "his own" but that "with the pressure he's been under, there was no alternative but to accept that decision. There comes a point when a man can't take any more and he should step down."

Partride said in a statement following his resignation: "It wasn't an easy decision, but I believe this is the time for it.

"One compelling factor was that in the past month or so my wife and I have seen signs in ourselves that we might be growing cynical or bitter. That would be a price we wouldn't want to pay.

CRISIS ENDED

"The university has passed through a crisis. Now is a good time for the university to seek new leadership, and for me and my family to build a new life."

UVic chancellor Roderick Haig-Brown said he is sorry to see Partridge leave.

"He has done a lot of good up there," he said.

Haig-Brown said he found the president's resignation "pretty surprising" at the time he first heard of it, but said the decision "had been well thought out."

NO REPLACEMENT

No replacement for Partridge is in mind at this time, Haig-Brown said.

Dr. Charles Doyle, president of the UVic faculty Association, said Partridge's decision was "the best thing that could have happened to the university."

Doyle said when the actual moment of resignation arrived "there was the realization that an individual was involved and I couldn't help feeling sorry for him. It must be very difficult."

But Doyle said the situation on the campus "continued to deteriorate since the advisory board report. I got the feeling, and so did many others, that there couldn't really be a change until there was a change at the top."

SOONER OR LATER

Doyle called the tenure dispute at the university "a big element" in Partridge's decision to resign. "It had to happen sooner or later," he said.

Partridge was appointed president in November, 1968, and took office in July 1969. Since that time, and even before, the university has been embroiled in various disputes over non-renewal of contracts of some faculty members.

The dispute came to a head late in the last academic year, when students and faculty both voted non-confidence in Partridge as president. In May, the Canadian Association of University Teachers, which had represented the faculty members involved, passed a motion of censure against Partridge.

BOARD NAMED

Also in May, a three-man advisory board was appointed by the board of governors to look into the cases of three non-renewed faculty members. Hearings took place over a month at UVic but the professors, the CAUT the faculty association and students boycotted them.

The advisory board released its report Sept. 22 and strongly backed the administration's poisiton in the dispute, while criticizing the CAUT for its role.

Doyle said faculty of the university were not satisfied with the report but had nowhere to go.

Less than three weeks ago, he said, Partridge was strongly criticized in a meeting of faculty for a speech he made to a local Rotary club on "the pursuit of excellence" and its interpretation at UVic.

"Until that moment, when the speech was delivered, I think the administration may have felt it had weathered the storm," Doyle said.

On Jan. 28, the university newspaper, the Martlet, reported that Partridge's doctorate degree had been obtained from Blackstone College, a home-study college based in Chicago.

Partridge replied the next day that he had obtained both his doctorate in law and bachelor's degree from Blackstone as an external student. The UVic board of governers came out in full support of him.

Feelings of hostility on the campus grew to such an extent last spring that almost 90 per cent of the graduating class students at one meeting asked Partridge not to sign their degrees.

This request developed into yet another controversy when the omission of Partridge's name on the students' diplomas (used for ceremonial purposes) was noted on the students' academic transcripts (used for job applications).

Partridge came to UVic from Johns Hopkins University in Baltimore, where he had been a vice-president in charge of finance.

A Loss to the University

The sudden announcement of Dr. Bruce Partridge's resignation as president of the University of Victoria has taken both campus and community by surprise. Yet it could be only a matter of time before any man would ask himself if the professional challenge of the position was worth the almost daily barrage of vituperation and malicious abuse from a small but persistent segment of the faculty and student body. For Dr. Partridge that day came this week.

He arrived on the campus at a time when an able administrator was essential for the further development of the university; he was chosen by the board of governors for that function and he has performed it well. He worked continuously for the good of the university. Those who put that objective second in importance were few but vociferous.

It will now be up to them to assess what they have achieved through personal attacks which had the reverse effect of clearly demonstrating who was the better man and the better asset to the university. It would be well, too, for the majority of the faculty and the main body of students to review their position over the past two years and determine whether a democratic society can afford to remain passive in the face of a destructive minority.

Dr. Partridge feels that the tide has turned and that campus politics are again on the way to becoming secondary to academic endeavor. But the statement of the Board of Governors implies that the past two years of vindictive attacks, which far exceeded rational criticism or professional opposition, have created a situation here which may make it very difficult to obtain another permanent man of ability, and which may result in losing more of the top figures on the campus.

The Board mentions its reluctance to make further administrative appointments, and asks the co-operation of all elements on the campus to ensure that the university will survive.

That suggests that a great deal more unity and co-operation is going to be needed on the campus in the months ahead if the university is to come through without serious impairment of its reputation and its standing among Canadian institutions.

Shelve It Until Next Year

As a result of the meeting of City Council's planning committee yesterday the Reid project on Wharf Street is more or less back to Square 1. The promoter is open to submit another plan for development of the property; the city retains its options to let Mr. Reid proceed with a plan that is acceptable, invite proposals from other sources of private capital, or take over the property itself. Much, therefore, depends on what Mr. Reid may come up with as a third proposal.

In the eyes of most citizens at this point, however, the present council has disqualified itself as competent to deal finally with the matter. Certainly, after two years of argument and reversals it would be improper for the present council to come to any permanent decision in the dying weeks of its elective life.

The Wharf Street development is obviously a prime issue for the civic elections next month. There will be plenty of opportunity for all candidates to make their opinions perfectly plain to the voters before polling day — and those opinions should include a clear stand on the future of the whole Lower Town and harbor area, and the basic development of Victoria itself in the years ahead.

Arrested Evolution

From Austin, Texas, comes evidence justifying the concern of liberal-minded people over the application of censorship. Public schools in that state will be permitted to use eleven textbooks only after publishers edit out objectionable words and references to evolution.

In the perpetually unresolved fight against obscenity, many people object to the indiscriminate use of certain so-called "four-letter words" which they find offensive. But their protest immediately raises the question: If you start imposing bans, where do you stop?

The Texas answer seems to be; you start with deletion of words considered objectionable — and carry right through to any reference to evolution, a completely reputable scientific thesis in any number of countries in the literate world. In Texas, it appears, the successful argument in the famous "monkey trial" still trails clouds of glory to the dismay of reasonable people who may fear that evolution in that state has been arrested for almost half a century.

China: New Modest Approach

WASHINGTON — With the arrival of the Peking diplomats in New York, the Nixon administration is beginning to put aside its disappointment over the Taiwan issue and adjust to the new realities of dealing with mainland China.

Much remains to be done in preparation for President Nixon's trip to Peking. The agenda for his talks with Chou En-lai and other Chinese officials has not yet been completed. In fact the Communist government is apparently once more in turmoil, with the line of political succession still very much in doubt. This has introduced an element of confusion, if not of doubt, into the arrangements.

Also, it may give some notion of China's isolation to remember that the section of the Peking foreign office that deals with the United States is known as "the Australian, Western Europe and American Division." Most of the Chinese in the Peking delegation have never been in the U.S. before, so the immediate concern of officials here is to provide for their security and do whatever they can to make the transition into the New York community as comfortable as possible.

Even so, the initial period of transition places some delicate problems before the U.S. and Chinese governments. There may not be "two Chinas" in the United Nations, but there are still "two Chinas" in the U.S., with an aggrieved and even bitter Taiwan mission here in Washington, supported by many loyal followers who resent the arrival of the men from Peking.

Difficult Dealing

Dealing with Moscow and Tokyo in this transitional period will be almost as difficult as dealing with Peking and Taiwan. Nixon has to go to Moscow after his trip to Peking, and probably to Tokyo next summer, so while seeking the "normalization of relations" with the new China, he has to be careful not to appear to do so at the expense of U.S. relations with Japan and the Soviet Union.

After all, important as China is, the question of controlling the arms race, avoiding war in the Middle East, and keeping the lid on Berlin, are essentially Washington-Moscow problems, and the question of organizing a new monetary and trade policy in the world is more important in Japan and Europe, at this point of history, than in China.

Accordingly, Washington is now approaching these questions with less drama and speed than it did in the initial stages of its new China and new economic policies. It is more conscious now of the need for closer consultation with the Soviets and the Japanese, and it is beginning to protect itself on the home front by warning that the Nixon mission to Peking is just the beginning of a very long and complicated process and that it would be unwise to expect too much from the single visit.

This is a much more realistic attitude than the sudden diplomacy out of Washington in recent months. Nixon's opening to Peking is still regarded by both parties and most observers here as a wise, bold, and historic stroke, but it has created some tension in both governments and started a process of reappraisal in most of the capitals of Asia and Europe, so the tempo has been reduced here to give everybody time to adjust.

Fortunately, Chou En-lai seems to agree that this is a time for modest expectations. He told the managing editor of Tokyo's Asahi Shimbun the other day: "We must be very cautious. This does not mean that we lack self-confidence; it means that caution is required, and that we must not be indiscreet or haphazard." Earlier, he said in another interview: "We do not expect a settlement of all questions at one stroke. That is not possible. That would not be practicable. But by contacting one another, we may be able to find out from where we should start in solving these problems."

That is now precisely the new modest approach of the White House and the State Department. On the testimony of Peking officials, Henry Kissinger has approached them in this vein in his preparations for Nixon's trip, and now, with senior officials of the government of China in New York, a new line of communications has been opened for quiet and careful discussion of common problems.

Practical Function

This is one illustration of the practical function of the United Nations in New York. There were many arguments against locating the world organization in the commercial capital of one of the major nations of the world, but there are some advantages.

It is big enough to swallow even the UN, and to permit private discussion of even the most sensitive international questions. Which is perhaps another way of saying that only in mass and diversity, can diplomats elude reporters in a democratic society, and maybe this is not always a bad idea.

For through the UN, even though Peking and Washington are a very long way from establishing normal diplomatic relations, they now have an instrument for negotiations, if both sides choose to use it. It will be a long time before Peking and Washington move from hostility to understanding — maybe as long as their 21-year separation — and Peking's moralistic and ideological approach to world politics may very well make them more difficult than the Soviets and the Soviet vetoes at the UN over the past 25 years, but at least there is a change in attitude.

There is a new private avenue for negotiation, and a new opportunity for the Chinese to observe the West in New York. And if they can adjust to "Fun City" who knows, they might even be able to help bring some kind of common sense into the distracted world.

'Trifles and Nothings' Add Up

OTTAWA — Poverty in Canada, the report of David Croll and his 19 senatorial colleagues, heralds another round in the struggle to reshape Canadian society along more egalitarian socialist lines.

Senator Croll has been, all his life, a warm-hearted humanitarian and ardent social reformer. The report bears his authentic stamp. It is, first and foremost, a moral document, full of shock, indignation, rhetorical questions, passionate arguments, high resolve and a sort of damn-the-torpedoes approach to economic problems. This is its importance, because the broad propositions often appear to rest on very shaky foundations and doubtful (sometimes unspoken) assumption.

The major finding of the committee is that our whole vast welfare system has failed and that it ought to be replaced with a multi-dimensional program with the guaranteed annual income as centrepiece. This is not a new argument. What is startling and somewhat breathtaking, however, is the spirit of the Croll report.

We should, according to the senators, incorporate the right to an adequate standard of living (as defined, more or less, in the Universal Declaration of Human Rights) in the Canadian Bill of Rights. We cannot wait any longer. "What is needed is a commitment to proceed. The difficulties and problems can be tackled and solved once that decision has been made."

Same Idea

The late Mr. William Aberhart had essentially the same idea. In Alberta there was no problem about the difficulties. Many of our federal problems may also be attributable to the fact that we start with commitments, rush into programs and afterwards encounter difficulties unimagined by our pioneering bureaucrats.

Edgar Benson, in his career as minister of finance, has encountered among Canadians in the middle-income brackets (who are the principal supporters of government in the style to which it is accustomed) a strong conviction that they are overtaxed. Citizens in this mood will read with no little interest that: "The whole welfare system, at all levels, costs Canadians more than $6 billion a year, yet it has not significantly alleviated poverty, let alone eliminated it."

If $6 billion has made scarcely a dent in the problem, how can we be sure as taxpayers that the billion more demanded of us through the guaranteed annual income will do the job? This surely is a legitimate question since we are being pressed by the senators for instant commitment.

The answer, none too reassuring, is that it will not. "Finally, it is essential to recognize that the guaranteed annual income by itself cannot solve the problem of poverty in Canada. It is a first step, but must be supported by full employment policies, as well as by improved and expanded social services and opportunity programs."

We ought to be grateful for this candor. No one need imagine that we are going all the way with this billion dollar first step (actually the first instalment of the first step because Sen. Croll proposes to start with a scheme based on 70 per cent of the Senate committee poverty line and work up from there).

There is, however, an economic question, generally obscured — although here and there admitted — by a committee, which appears to attribute quite remarkable powers to government. Is there not some conflict between the burdens constantly being imposed on our economy and its power to deliver full employment?

Governments may be found in other parts of the world which are free of the constitutional and democratic restraints limiting our administration and have also freed themselves of what the Senators, in their old-fashioned way, refer to as "the system." Some of them have worked hard to defeat poverty but it is still visibly there along with difficult problems of unemployment and inflation. This presumably is why Mr. Trudeau, at the last election, discouraged the notion that a guaranteed annual income was a poverty cure-all.

The committee, optimistically in my opinion, estimates that the costs would amount to only about one per cent of GNP. This is the sort of defence that is invariably put forward on behalf of any program, reasonable or unreasonable, which happens to suit government in Ottawa. It is always a nothing in percentage terms, a mere few cents of the taxpayer's dollar. The difficulty for the taxpayer (and for business, which must provide jobs) is that all these trifles and nothings now add up to expenditures exceeding $14.5 billion annually.

Point of Fact

In point of fact the committee, which had trouble in obtaining adequate statistics, is none too sure of its own calculations. "It is extremely difficult to make realistic cost estimates for any national aid program." Senators were once considered cautious people, over-given to sober second thought. But this was before the age of commitment.

We are offered at one point, by way of argument, what could only be characterized — and then with charity — as a ball-park figure. "The inadequate participation of the poor in the economy, it has been estimated, deprives it of somewhere between one and two and one-half billion dollars a year." Of course the participation of the poor is inadequate, but if this is the best estimate the Senators can offer, they might as well draw their statistics out of thin air.

How much the multi-dimensional program of the committee would cost, it is quite impossible to say. For the Senators, like the government's youth advisers, do not think solely in terms of work opportunities. What is known as the work ethic (an odd set of notions entertained by backward, tax-paying suburbanites and others who keep government in business or at play) takes the now usual drubbing in this Senate report. At one point it is associated with the poor laws; at another we are told to "reassess our whole attitude towards work and stress much more an individual's contribution to society in other, less routine, ways."

If the Senators will curb their revolutionary enthusiasm until warmer months, we can all go fishing for the summer and find out what, if anything, this accomplishes for the solution of economic problems, including the war on poverty.

Utopia Through IRA Violence?

Having attended the Sean Kenny lecture at UVic Saturday night, and noted the press reports next day, I would like to make a few comments regarding IRA activities in Ulster.

First of all, it was a very one-sided viewpoint which Mr. Kenny presented. I would suggest that the university now endeavor to invite someone to present the Ulster side of the story — not an MP or anyone with very extremist views — just some ordinary citizen from the working class community.

During his lecture, Mr. Kenny dealt very forcibly with all the great social reforms they are aiming to achieve for the working classes of all Ireland. I would applaud their efforts to abolish the landlord and ground-rent systems, not only in Ireland but throughout the British Isles, archaic laws that should have been abolished a hundred years ago! However, Mr. Kenny took very good care not to mention any of the IRA's gun and bomb activities throughout Ulster, while pointing out very eloquently the outrageous acts of the British Army, particularly against the 408 internees at Longkesh.

He didn't tell us about the efforts of the IRA to prevent medical supplies reaching the Children's Hospital on the Falls Road. I have a close relative working as a nurse in this hospital complex and this is no "yarn!" Also, two bombs were found in the Samaritan Hospital, Belfast, and 100 patients had to be very quickly transferred to two other hospitals.

These are only two very insignificant incidents — I could mention many more and much worse atrocities perpetrated by the IRA. I just can't imagine how they hope to achieve such a Utopia in Ireland, as outlined by Mr. Kenny, by their present campaign. They are only adding another bloody chapter to an already very blood-stained Irish history! — Mrs. J. McCartney, 511 Comerford St.

Do Unto Others . . .

It was with a great deal of concern that I read a Times news item November 5 headed "Bureau Plan: 'Milk Tourists.'"

If such a project goes into effect it is to be hoped it will be free from any and all implications of our Canadian culture or image. It would be completely foreign to our Canadian character.

In my mind Pat Frumento has the most logical viewpoint of them all, and in agreement, may I suggest that nature be allowed to take its course. Those who want to visit us will.

In place of milking, treat visitors as we ourselves would like to be treated.

This I think would be the best form of advertising we could have, being expense-free except for local information offices. — Len Skelton, 4068 Grange.

From the Times of Nov. 17, 1911:

Hardly a day passes without some indication of the efforts being made by all the Pacific coast cities across the line to equip their ports to bid for the immense trade which will follow the opening of the Panama Canal, and the lesson is plain to those who are responsible for the port of Victoria that they must be equally active and aggressive.

A FEW of Stockholm centre's many levels: office towers rise from a terrace park overlooking the haymarket. There is also a complete servicing level underground for trucks, three levels of subway platforms, a sunken square, pedestrian overpasses and malls, tunnels and viaducts for cars.

A PIECE of the hottest real estate in Stockholm is devoted to sun worship, a favorite Swedish pastime. The five spacious rows of benches are testaments to the concern of the Swedes that their commercial centres still be people-oriented.

A City Where Technology Is Subordinated to Man

By CLEMENT CHAPPLE

(This is the second of a series of articles by the Times City Hall Reporter based on a recent trip to Scandinavia to study trends in urban development.)

When you hear a Swede say there is a "discussion" under way, proceed with caution. What he really means is that controversy is raging. To the English-speaking, short-term visitor who cannot read up on the matters for himself, it is difficult to get the gist of the many discussions that are a major part of Swedish life. Your Swedish guide won't be much help. The most he will reveal is the bare bones of the two prevalent points of view, never hinting at his own persuasion and leaving you wondering: why all the fuss?

But stand back for a moment on the balcony of Stockhomsterrassen, give yourself a few moments for it all to register, imagine it happening to your city and you will begin to understand why the rebuilding of Stockholm's central business district — Lower Norrmalm — created not a few discussions.

Five virtually similar 18-storey office buildings have risen on Lower Norrmalm in the last few years, leaving no doubt about the style of the city centre in the years to come.

The massive glass face of the new house of culture across Sergels Torg Square confirms the impression. Weaving and spiralling in amongst these structures are sidewalks, escalators, malls, traffic lanes, subways, tunnels, squares and overpasses, obliterating what was once the city's classiest garden apartment residential district.

Proud of History

Unabashedly contemporary in a city proud of its 700-year history, Lower Norrmalm may be the most complex and perfectly engineered piece of city planning in the world.

For some people I have talked to, the kind who apparently prefer traffic jams, smog, the absence of sunlight and the presence of dirt, all slathered with overhelming noise, Stockholm's downtown is too well ordered. Lower Normalm is not meant for these friends.

It was built far the other, tiresome sort of person who likes to take his downtowns with lots of elbow room, garden terrace, a choice of department stores and pushcart shopping, subways and parking at hand, theatres, government offices, library, good food, and so on. And, oh yes, five generous rows of benches, all facing south, on the hottest piece of real estate in the country, for that favorite non-profit Swedish pastime, soaking up the sun.

The benches are perhaps the most courageous example of how people-oriented is this, essentially commercial, city centre. But the whole redevelopment of Lower Norrmalm is a kind of working experiment in the theory that cities can, or must, be places that subordinate technology to man.

In smaller and older Scandinavian cities I visted the open and lively city centre seemed also to be an essential part of the civic experience, on which the people demand.

In little (pop. 185,000) Bergen, whose industry, as in most Norwegian communities, depends on its port facilities, the people of the town successfully protested a road-widening plan aimed at facilitating car traffic flow around the commercially active inner wharves. The widening would have also diminished the size of the popular outdoor fish and produce market, and the people wouldn't have it.

Gothenburg, on Sweden's west coast, has the most pleasant main street for a medium-sized city I have seen anywhere. The tree-lined, broad pavements are as wide as the street itself, with room enough for free standing displays and acres of loitering space.

Copenhagen's "walking street" is virtually car-free for a kilometer and boasts the city's most famous and best shops.

Town centres devoid of cars are the unbroken rule in Scandinavia's new suburban communities, where traffic, parking, walking, shopping and almost everything else are totally preplanned.

Another principle that has wide acceptance, mainly in Sweden, is the limitation of building sizes to what the planners call "human scale." The scale seems to have been set, in the case of downtown areas, by an earlier period, before the invention of the high-rise.

Soften Effect

The human scale construction is not a specific height of building, however, but an undefined ratio of building facade to open space that allows a man walking on the street to feel as if, with a little puff of the chest, he could hop to the high ground and take charge.

Even the five imposing highrises in Stockholm's Lower Norrmalm are more or less unnoticed by the pedestrian. They are staggered in a row to soften the effect, and built so they appear to rise out of a terrace park two storeys above the shopping levels. The most obvious one of the five is given a vast setback effect by the presence of the new Sergels Torg Square.

With typical Swedish forethought, Stockholm planners began discussing the need for a future program of renewal in the city centre as early as 1928, and in the following decade embarked on extensive paper preparations including an international town planning competition that attracted architectural giants like Le Corbusier and Alvar Aalto.

The result of that thinking was the basic decision in 1946 to transform the city centre, which was starting to disintegrate, into a modern and functional central business district.

Successive planning — from regional plans to detailed traffic engineering studies — led to what is today called the City 67 plan. City 67 will take Stockholm's centre city through to sometime in the 1980s, provides reserve office space to meet growth and lay the groundwork for the next big move.

The first phase of the plan, centred around a large open-stand market called the Hotorget, already has brought about a tremendous expansion of banks, offices, department stores and other retail trade. The stage now under construction includes the new house of culture, a new but maybe temporary — there's a discussion about this — parliament building, large hotels and government offices.

Beneath the centre are three levels of subways and almost nowhere in Lower Norrmalm is more than 250 yards from a station. The main car traffic artery, called Tunnelgatan, carries cars through town on a viaduct with easy exits for parking.

No long-term parking facilities are visible — they are all built into the centre of office buildings or below ground. Virtually every building facade at walking level is a shop or display, and despite the many levels, to walk anywhere in the centre is to sense terra firma underfoot.

Narrow streets formerly congested with trucks are now opened up some as malls, by the creation of a complete network of underground streets on different levels for loading and servicing the commercial and office buildings, and parking.

The planners believe in something called "pedestrian traffic standards," that only if pedestrian areas are segregated from car traffic will the downtown function "perfectly." A main shopping mall running north and south is the backbone of the pedestrian system.

Many Levels

Otherwise, two kinds of traffic separation have been used. One of them — "horizontal" — puts cars and people on the same level but in different areas. The other kind — "vertical" — puts cars and people each on different levels. Old street malls connect with newly constructed walkways, and in some places malls are both under and over the street level, with suspended walkways leading up to the terrace garden at the base of the highrise office buildings.

To the south, the main mall opens up by way of an escalator to the new square, Sergels Torg. It is designed on two levels, the upper for cars and the lower for pedestrians only. It has shops, restaurants, exhibition areas, exits to the railway stations and is the courtyard of the house of culture.

Planners have forecast traffic movement to 1990 and expect that by then there will be more than 250,000 city border crossings twice a day.

The standard aimed for is no more than a 45-minute trip from the suburbs to downtown — a distance of about 13 miles. The solution is public transit, which the city hopes to keep at its present capacity, moving 70 per cent of all commuters.

But the road system and parking are also projected. Ring roads built and planned send traffic not destined for the centre around the busy areas. Parking spaces planned number 30,000. Half of these will be in parking garages, 45 per cent in underground garages and only five per cent in the open.

The cost of the Lower Norrmalm project will come to about $1.1 billion. This is not including the cost of upkeep of the planning administration. Besides the nine members of the building committee elected by city council, there is a planning commission. The executive office of the building comittee has a staff of 450 people, a quarter of whom are university trained.

For carrying out the Lower Norrmalm plan, a special Master Planning Commission was formed. It has no legal authority to insist on anything, but is made up of key people from all sectors of the political administration of the city. Thus the recommendations that arise out of its debates come from the most influential men in the administration.

The only way to ensure the plan would succeed was for the city to buy all the land under redevelopment. Cost of land purchase, demolition, streets and piping came to about $130 million. Stockholm is an old hand at buying land to ensure orderly development. It began in 1904 and ended up buying 80 per cent of the land within the city, plus another two city sizes in the suburbs.

Before travelling to Sweden, I had read various progress reports of the new city centre with its futuristic shapes and seemingly breakneck pace. The reports were probably tinged with feelings of people who had to nurse their fears and doubts through what must have been something of a leap in the planning dark.

Seeing it in person did something unexpected. It opened up vistas of technology I had heard about but thought was probably a fraud. It also recalled a feeling about grand cities I had only read about in the civilizations of antiquity.

Narrow Streets

The clock-work modernism of Lower Norrmalm, of course, is not Stockholm. Only a few hundred yards from Sergels Torg, across some of the plentiful water that gives Stockholm an especially attractive setting, lies the "old town," on which medieval buildings survive and in which the streets are no more than five yards wide. It will never work as a modern part of the city because the law says it shall not.

Stockholm has not rejected its past in its search for the future. The old town is an island museum of architecture, kept alive at great expense, containing enough old world European milieu to satiate every camera-weilding tourist from North America.

For all their flair for modernity, the Swedes have a broad background for pursuing the unpractical.

It is not only a matter of beauty, though I would like to argue that the whole Swedish occupation is one of serving esthetics. Keeping everything in human scale, subordinating cars to people, preserving green belts and placing sunning benches on high-priced property are even in sheer economic terms preferable to the highest-use theory of real estate exploitation that governs North American development. Never mind the obvious example of a city run riot like New York. Never mind the tax dollars. Think of the poor suffering thrombosified owner of a downtown building in Victoria who gets cut out by a newer building next door, or the barber shop owner who loses his customers because a traffic engineer changes the parking rules out front to keep the traffic moving.

If the Swedes are really only a silent version of North Americans, they are still making cities that are far more pleasant places in which to seek the almighty krona.

Not everyone regards them as perfect civic creatures. A Finnish lady—and a Swedish Finn at that — said she was speaking for her nation when she told me the Swedes are economic status seekers who like to have everything done for them.

Yet, in this era of universal economic grasping, they have drawn the important distinction that economist J. K. Galbraith says is at the basis of North America's spectacular failure: we are privately rich but publicly poor. After seeing their cities, you can't say that about the Swedes.

Should We Be Grateful For One?

THE GLOBE AND MAIL
An Editorial

The appointment of H. Carl Goldenberg to the Senate is such an appointment as Canadians would always wish to see made to that chamber. Senator Goldenberg is a citizen of the first order, a man of great talents who has made tremendous contributions to the country.

It is, indeed, in every way a fitting appointment, for now Senator Eugene Forsey will have somebody to talk to; with the addition of Senator Paul Martin and Senator David Croll they may even get up a respectable bridge four.

To ensure, however, that Senator Goldenberg will continue to stand out in the future as he has done in the past, Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau has given us three other appointments in the more usual, or Pearsonian, tradition.

Nonentities, hangers-on, Liberal backroom boys, defeated Liberal candidates, unimpressive Liberal provincial ministers, Liberal bagmen; the usual assortment from which prime ministers — however they may talk about reforming the Senate — feel compelled to draw senators, because it is more important to them to pay their political debts than to give Canada a body which can be viewed, without ribaldry, as capable of sober second thoughts.

GOLDENBERG
. . . stands out

Grey, without talents, without valuable experience, without the sensitivity to recognize and serve Canada's deep needs.

Ah well; their presence will continue to make certain that the Senate remains the Other Place, other meaning different, having no relationship to anything else in the country.

THE TELY DEATH BENEFITS

By JOHN NICHOL

In the bull-ring of Canadian journalism the big death of the year was that of the Toronto Telegram. After 95 years of continuous publication, the Telegram was the loser in a long fight with the Toronto Star. The prize was control of the evening paper market in Toronto. At the end, the Telegram was bleeding to death at the rate of $1 million a year.

The final move was an offer from the Star to pay $10 million for the subscription list of the Telegram. This offer gave the Telegram shareholders a way out.

It seemed to most people that $10 million was more than enough to pay for the 200,000 names on the Telegram list — particularly in that the Star could not reasonably expect to pick up more than 100,000 of them.

On the surface the offer appeared to be either generosity or idiocy.

It was neither.

The death of the Telegram did many things for the Star.

First, it guaranteed that its circulation would jump from its then 398,000 to well over 500,000. It has since had printing runs of over 600,000 copies.

Second, the Star could expect its amount of advertising to increase greatly.

Third, because of the increased circulation, it would increase the rate it charges per line of advertising.

So even if the price for the list was high, it seemed likely that the Star shareholders would get their $10 million back in profits over the next few years.

As it turned out, they didn't have to wait that long.

On September 17, the day the Telegram announced it was folding, Star Publishing Class B stock was trading at a price of $25 a share. Trading in the stock was suspended on Monday the 20th to let the market settle down, and on Tuesday the 21st it went to $32. It is still there.

Thus, the stock went up about $7 a share on the news of the Telegram's death. Since there are 1,800,000 Star shares not only recovered the capital appreciation to the Star shareholders was $12,600,000. (This does not include the increased value of the 500,000 Class D and the 57,000 common shares that are privately held and not publicly traded.)

In the three days between September 17 and September 21, the increased value of the shares not only recovered the $10 million but added an additional $2,600,000 as well. Admittedly the shareholders would have had to sell some shares to get the cash, but the stock is listed and widely traded, so the conversion to cash would not have been difficult.

And there is one more important point. If the Star buys only the subscription list of the Telegram (and no other assets) the $10 million would, according to recent tax custom, be deductible from the Star's corporate tax. Thus the list would not cost the Star shareholders $10 million but only half that, i.e. $5 million.

So the calculation looks like this:

Capital appreciation to Star shareholders	$12,600,000
Cash layout by Star shareholders	$ 5,000,000
Net gain to Star shareholders	$ 7,600,000

The profits from the new circulation and the new advertising rates are yet to come.

BEFORE THE JUDGE

A Wilkinson Road jail inmate already serving a year for false pretences was sentenced Tuesday to another two months for obtaining lodging by fraud.

Daniel O'Donahue pleaded guilty to the offence that was waived from Vancouver to Victoria provincial court before Judge Edmond St. Jorre.

Court was told that the accused registered at the Hotel Vancouver Sept. 4 and left two days later without paying a $77.21 bill.

Arnold E. Odinson, 35, of Durkill Road, was sentenced to 14 days in jail for impaired driving and fined $200 for refusing to take a breathalyzer test.

He pleaded guilty to driving his car on the parking lot of a drive-in restaurant on the Old Island Highway about 7 p.m. Monday.

Court was told that Odinson had a previous drinking-driving conviction in Sooke in April 1970.

Belle Parker, 1151 Rockland, was fined $400 when she was guilty of fraud involving social assistance overpayments.

Evidence showed the woman received $349 in payments to which she wasn't entitled by making false declarations between Nov. 1, 1970 and June 1, 1971.

She was ordered to repay the money.

Dennis Wayne Rutherford, 28, of 2414 Dalhousie, was fined $300 for impaired driving and banned from driving for three months.

Ronald Ivar Davies, 33, of 1530 Pear, was fined $400 by Judge E. F. N. Robinson for impaired driving. He was prohibited from driving for four months except when working.

A 28-year-old city police constable was fined $300 by Judge E. F. N. Robinson when found guilty of impaired driving.

The verdict will be appealed.

Lawyer Dermod Owen-Flood asked Robinson to impose a lower penalty on Dennis Wayne Rutherford, 2414 Dalhousie, because it meant the end of his police career, a more severe penalty than most drinking-driving convictions.

Robinson said the accused should have been more "conscious" of the results of drinking and driving than the average person. He added that there had been no testimony about Rutherford's job.

Rutherford was driving a car that hit the rear of a vehicle stopped at a red light at Douglas and Fisgard Oct. 11. The other car was pushed about 100 feet.

Rutherford suffered head, teeth and other injuries.

Victoria Police Chief J. F. Gregory suspended Rutherford from the force after the incident and a disciplinary hearing was postponed until after the trial. Gregory said Tuesday the hearing will be held soon.

Breathalyser Reliability Judgment Set for Dec. 8

Judgment on the adequacy of Canada's official breath-analysis machine to do its job was remanded Monday to Dec. 8 by Judge E. F. N. Robinson in Victoria provincial court.

Defence counsel Dermond Owen-Flood has attacked the reliability of the Borkenstein Breathalyser, the only machine approved by Ottawa and listed in the Criminal Code as the authorized breathalyser.

DIABETIC

Owen-Flood said Pashley's diabetic condition may have affected his blood-alcohol reading last April 2, the date of the offence.

Owen-Flood said Monday Parliament "did not make the machine a god."

The defence supported its position of the machine possibly being affected by a diabetic condition on the testimony of leading B.C. pathologist Dr. Kenneth Thornton last week.

Thornton also contended that the machine is unreliable because of random errors and other reasons.

The pathologist said also more than one test should be given to any accused person and Owen-Flood introduced complex medical evidence.

Prosecutor Peter Birkett maintained that a finding of impaired driving could be made on the breathalyser test alone.

Teachers' Body Claims 'Interference' Costly

Interference by Education Minister Donald Brothers in the teacher-school board salary negotiation process could cost more than $325,000 in arbitration expenses, a B.C. Teachers Federation official charged Tuesday.

Adam Robertson, president of the federation, said the amount represents the cost in money and time for an estimated 50 arbitrations required to settle salary disputes.

The large number of arbitrations results from Brothers' "interference" in the bargaining process through imposition of a 6.5 per cent limit on teacher salary increases eligible for cost-sharing by the provincial government, and other cost controls.

The $325,000 cost to be borne by the teachers and the school boards is "a very significant cost factor," Robertson said, pointing out that a number of salary increases already agreed on in B.C. have been well in excess of Brothers' 6.5 per cent limit.

"In whatever form the proposed Capital Gains Tax becomes law, Royal Trust clients will get the facts."

"At Royal Trust, we've been planning for a variety of capital gains tax eventualities for some time and have designed our accounting system to provide for all the record keeping requirements of our clients to assist in the preparation of their tax returns.

We've also been playing a major role in making representations to the government with a view to clarifying many anomalies in the tax bill.

However, we feel it premature to make commitments to our clients until the provisions of the tax have been finalized and passed into law.

When this happens, we'll know how to act in the best interests of our clients and will be in an excellent position to provide the financial services required.

In whatever form the proposed capital gains tax becomes law, Royal Trust clients will get the facts."

MP Rejects Bid by City For Sea Terrace Property

—Victoria city's bid to have the federal government hand over waterfront property on Sea Terrace, west of Barnard, received no support Monday from David Anderson, Liberal MP for Esquimalt-Saanich.

He described the city's attitude as a "little too pious" in expecting to get the Victoria West property for nothing. Ottawa is asking $165,000 for the 3.77-acre site and is trying to sell it through its Crown Assets Disposal Corp.

Speaking from Washington, D.C., Anderson said that two years ago, if it got the property for nothing, the city had plans to turn the property over to a private developer for the construction of an industrial docking facility.

'Too Pious' 'Attitude

PARKLAND

Mayor Courtney Haddock said he knew of no such plans and that the city wanted the property for parkland.

"The city isn't interested in using this property for other purposes," he added.

To ward off real estate developers who might be willing to pay the asking price with the view to building highrises on the site, the city's lands committee has recommended that the site be rezoned for residential construction.

Anderson says he's willing to help the city get a reasonable price on the property but would have to know the city's exact plans for it.

TEDLIE

China Entry 'Chance for Peace'

The world has been given "a slight chance of peace" by the entry of China into the United Nations Maj.-Gen A. J. Tedlie said today.

Speaking at a luncheon meeting of the Victoria Kiwanis Club in the Empress Hotel, the recently-retired deputy-chief of the Canadian defence staff added:

"Now that China is in the United Nations it will now be possible to allow forces to be placed at the disposal of the security council under Article 43 of the original charter. This has always been blocked in the past. It is a good thing that the UN is becoming a big three (United States, Russia and China) rather than a big two."

He warned against complacency on the part of small countries and said there was always danger as long as there was war or civil disturbances, such as the one in northern Ireland the Quebec crisis of October 1970.

He said that smaller countries must take part in international agreements and inspections and not leave things to the larger powers.

GREAT THING

Stressing his point, he quoted the Russian proverb, "When nobles fight the peasants get covered with blood."

Tedlie saw another chance of peace in the progress being made in SALT (Strategic Arms Limitation Talks).

"Disarmament is a great thing," he said, "but agreements by the great powers — all agreements — must be policed and inspections carried out to see that they are actually done."

He said the USSR had been "very naughty" in not allowing inspection teams "to get into their backyard to inspect."

Tedlie said smaller countries should have representatives on the inspection teams, similar to the various truce commissions.

Tedlie warned against a false sense of security.

"Despite all the chances of peace we would be idiotic if we tired to disarm unilaterally.

"We have to keep our powder dry to make sure we're not left standing defenceless."

Canada works and you can be a moving force in creating jobs for Canadians.

Canada works when Canadians get involved together. So the Federal Government is putting 498 million dollars to work through a series of specific programs, to help create jobs for Canadians.

CANADA WORKS WITH YOU

You're a major force in making the program work. We're counting on you, either on your own initiative or through your community groups, to come up with ideas for the Local Initiatives Program. For example, you may have a social service project or an idea to expand a cultural program, or improve substandard housing, or assist the handicapped—just about anything that makes your community a better place.

The Training-on-the-Job Program will expand opportunities for training for those who are unemployed or have little work experience.

For those with some basic work experience, the Canada Manpower Training Program has been extended to help provide additional learning.

CANADA WORKS WITH BUSINESS AND INDUSTRY

Included in the Federal Government's plan is a program of tax credit or direct payments to employers to encourage them to add trainees to their staffs through the Training-on-the-Job Program. This will help the trainee get valuable work experience that he can apply in many jobs.

CANADA WORKS WITH MUNICIPALITIES

The Local Initiatives Program will help municipalities to create additional jobs through worthwhile community projects. Provincial governments will work with municipalities to use this program to support and spur community projects that will give jobs to people in your community.

CANADA WORKS WITH THE PROVINCES

There's a Federal-Provincial Employment Loans Program designed to finance additional capital works projects. Some projects may be done by the provinces, others by municipalities with provincial approval. We'll be speeding up the program of the Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation to get homes, student housing, and sewage treatment projects under way.

Loans will also be made to exhibition commissions, boards and associations to get people working on multi-purpose fair and trade buildings.

CANADA WORKS WITH FEDERAL PROJECTS

There will be more job opportunities in maintenance and improvement activities on Federal buildings, transportation facilities; forest and park projects; and many others.

WHERE IT ALL WORKS TOGETHER

It starts at your Canada Manpower Centre. For advice and assistance on any of the programs you feel apply to you or your community, contact your local Canada Manpower Centre. They'll be happy to help you.

When Canadians get involved together, CANADA WORKS.

U.S. Firm Suggests Freeze on Capital

TORONTO (CP) — A United States securities firm operating in Canada says the absence of national policies has led to an "undue concentration of foreign ownership in certain aspects of Canadian economic life."

Donald Webb of Toronto, chairman of Merrill Lynch, Royal Securities Ltd., said, however, that any attempt to "turn back the clock" would be "so offensive to international rules of fair play as to offend the world community."

Mr. Webb was testifying Tuesday at the final day of a series of public hearings by the Ontario Securities Commission on foreign ownership of Ontario's stock and bond firms.

The Investment Dealers' Association of Canada and the major stock exchanges have made proposals which would require such foreign-owned firms to sell most of their ownership to Canadian directors during the next 15 years.

Ned Ball of New York, president of the parent Merrill Lynch company, suggested an alternative—that his firm and others in the same position be required to freeze their capital at current levels.

He said this would assure that foreign-owned firms would not increase in size by importing additional capital.

Mr. Webb said proposals to Canadianize foreign-owned firms "are surely anti-competitive in nature." He said he knew of no legislative precedent for the suggestion that foreign-controlled firms be required to cut their degree of foreign ownership.

"From both an economic and fair play standpoint, the only policies likely to emerge, in our opinion, will embody the principle of 'keep Canadian what is Canadian today.'"

Computer Numbers Grow Fast

Growth of the computer industry in Canada has been so rapid it can't keep up with itself, even by using computers.

The point is made by Peter Darling, manager of the University of Victoria computing service, who also is secretary of the Victoria section of the Canadian Information Processing Society.

The society's new directory of computers — the Computer Census for 1971, assembled and printed using computers — Darling carries a reference on Page 29 to UVic's IBM 360-44 computer system.

But this original computer is no longer there, having been replaced in June with a larger, more powerful IBM 360-50.

In March 1964, according to the society, the whole country had only 502 computers, a figure which more than doubled in the next three years.

Amoeba-like, the industry saw another doubling in the following two years, and by May of this year the total number of computers in Canada had reached 3,548.

Two hundred and ninety of them were located in B.C., compared with 283 in Alberta, 764 in Quebec and 1,814 in Ontario.

More than a third of them were products of IBM — International Business Machines — its nearest competitor Digital Equipment Co., trailing 662 behind with 641 machines. Burroughs ranked third with 439 computers in the market.

The only territory in Canada without a computer as of May was the Yukon, and its neighbor Northwest Territories had only one.

Industry has by far the largest proportion of computers in this country, some owned, some rented, some leased. They total 846 in manufacturing, 714 in services, 301 in distribution, 268 in financial areas, the rest in transportation, utilities, construction, primary resources, communication and service bureaux.

Government had a total 453 computers, mostly in Ottawa.

The University of B.C. with 33 computers has three more than all industries, governments and agencies in the city of Victoria. The B.C. government has five IBM computers, two in its data processing centre, one in the finance department and two in B.C. Medical Plan.

MACHINES FOR CITY

The federal government here has seven machines, four operated by the department of environment, two by the Dominion Astrophysical Observatory and one by National Research Council.

The city of Victoria has two computers — an IBM 360-20 and a Data General Corp. Nova, Saanich has two Burroughs E4290s, and the university has two Digital Equipment Company PDP 8 machines.

Private data processing companies operating here have four computers — IBM with a 360-25, Data Tech Systems Ltd. with a Burroughs 500, Argus Computer Applications Ltd. with a Univac 1005, and Alpha Data Ltd. with a Univac 9200.

The remaining seven Victoria computers are operated by private firms for their own purposes, the largest of these being the Univac 9300 of Bapco Paint Ltd., which has a memory capacity of 16,000 bytes. A byte is a multiple of units of information a computer may store.

By comparison, the old IBM 360-44 used by Uvic had a capacity of 256,000 bytes, and an IBM 360-65 installed in Ottawa for the federal government can store 2 million bytes.

Seventeen of the 30 computers in the capital city were purchased, the others rented or leased.

Seagrams Splits Shares; Moves to Ontario Centre

By BORIS MISKEW

MONTREAL (CP) — A special general meeting of shareholders of Distillers Corp.-Seagrams Ltd. decided Tuesday to move the firm's head office to Waterloo, Ont., where the company's oldest distillery is located.

The company's executive offices will continue to operate out of Montreal.

The decision was among a number of bylaw changes adopted at the session held prior to the company's annual meeting.

The annual meeting was the first since the death last summer of Samuel Bronfman, company founder. It was conducted under the chairmanship of Edgar M. Bronfman, president of Distillers Corp.-Seagrams Ltd.

Charles R. Bronfman, executive vice-president, said after the meeting the change in the company's head office location will not involve the movement of any employees from Montreal.

OPERATE WORLDWIDE

He said Distillers Corp.-Seagrams Ltd. operates on a worldwide basis and, because of the label on Seagrams' products, many people outside Canada are under the impression the company's head office is in Waterloo.

The company, the world's largest distilling organization, acquired Joseph E. Seagram and Sons Ltd., established in Waterloo in 1857, in the late 1920s.

Although the parent head office will be in Waterloo, the House of Seagrams Ltd., which looks after operations in Canada and whose president is Charles Bronfman, will continue to have its head office in Montreal.

Another subsidiary, Distillers Corp. Ltd., will also continue to have its head office in Montreal.

EXPAND IN QUEBEC

To dispel fears that the company is moving out of Quebec, Charles Bronfman said it now is in the process of a $2 million expansion in St. Anne de Beaupre, Que., and hopes to open a wine operation in Quebec after obtaining necessary government approval.

The shareholders voted in favor of a directors' proposal to split the issued and unissued Common stock of the company on the basis of two shares of new common stock of no par value for each share of common stock of $1 par value.

Under the change, the existing 17,538,700 shares will be divided into 35,077,400 shares. Before the split, subject to federal government approval, the shares were trading at about $53 each.

Edgar Bronfman told the shareholders that sales in the first quarter will show an increase growth rate of about four per cent over last year's figure, and that earnings will be up about eight per cent over the first quarter last year.

Directors decided after the meeting to declare a dividend of 35 cents a share Dec. 15 to shareholders of record Nov. 26, 1971. The dividend, five cents more than the previous quarterly dividend, is on shares before the split.

Rail Jobs Show Steady Decline

OTTAWA (CP) — A young man launching a career with either the Canadian Pacific or Canadian National railways in 1923 could reasonably believe he was part of a growing and increasingly-profitable industry.

Road transportation was not a major threat then and planes were unreliable over long distances.

Today, the man could look back and see that railways have endured a troubled half-century.

Recently-released Statistics Canada figures show that employment on the CNR dropped to 80,528 in 1970 from 107,007 in 1923. In the same period, though, the payroll rose to $654,435,000 from $153,884,000.

CP Rail employment declined to 45,159 in 1970 from 68,778 in 1926, the first year for which Statistics Canada has figures for employment in that company. The payroll climbed to $348,138,000 from $102,336,000 in that time.

CNR SHOWS INCREASE

The number of revenue passengers carried by the CNR plunged to 13,433,000 in 1970 from 23,684,000 in 1923. The CP Rail passenger total dropped to 5,306,000 from 16,224,000.

The CNR recorded a slight increase in the number of revenue passenger miles while CP Rail reported a significant decline. Revenue passenger miles is the total distance travelled by paying customers.

CNR revenue passenger miles rose to 1.738 billion from 1.447 billion while CP Rail totals decreased to 428 million from 1.101 billion.

CP Rail passenger revenue has dropped to $12,350,000 in 1970 from $38,050,000 in 1923 while CNR passenger revenue has increased to $66,798,000 from $39,285,000.

The freight business has been the bright spot in the railway industry. CNR revenue freight tonnage rose to 107,427,000 in 1970 from 57,248,000 in 1923. CP Rail reported an increase to 77,400,000 tons from 32,939,000 tons.

CNR freight revenue jumped to $790,846,000 in 1970 from $185,241,000 in 1923 while CP Rail freight revenue climbed to $544,806,000 from $139,979,000 in the same period.

With all expenses and revenues counted in, though, net operating income was only slightly higher in 1970 than it was in 1923.

CP Rail showed an increase to $42,273,271 from $40,315,814 while CNR net operating income rose to $29,543,838 from $21,123,544.

Copy Firm Sells Assets

VALHALLA, N.Y. (Reuter) — Savin Business Machines Corp. said Tuesday it has reached agreement to sell the business, goodwill and certain assets of its Canadian marketing subsidiary to Murrett Photofax Ltd. of Toronto for 60,000 shares of Murrett common stock.

The company also said Savin and Murrett have entered into a new franchise agreement to replace Murrett's existing dealer agreement. Terms call for Murrett to be the exclusive distributor of Savin's office copier products throughout Canada and Alaska for a 10-year period.

Finalization of the agreement is contingent upon approval by boards of directors of both companies.

Ford Names New President

OAKVILLE (CP) — Roy Bennett, 43, president of Ford Motor Co. of Canada Ltd., was elected chief executive officer at a meeting of the board today.

Bennett succeeds Karl Scott who is retiring as chairman of the board and chief executive officer but who will remain as a company director.

Bennett, a native of Winnipeg, became president of the company last year. Ford of Canada has had a Canadian as chief executive officer since 1929.

The board also elected William L. Hawkins, a native of Hamilton, as a director and vice-president. He will be general manager of the sales division.

Sinatra Always Respectful of Mafia Friendship

in any illegal Mafia enterprises, he has visited the homes of Mafiosi, introduced them to women, and apparently allowed them to use his name to try to win fovars from government officials.

Sinatra did not limit his friendships with gangsters even after then shattered his carefully constructed contacts with John Kennedy. When Kennedy won the Democratic presidential nomination in 1960, the singer raised money for the young senator, joined him on campaign trips, and praised him to everyone who would listen.

When Kennedy was elected, Sinatra redoubled his efforts and devoted 10 exhausting weeks to planning a gala party in Washington for the eve of the inauguration. Tickets cost $100 to $10,000, and Sinatra's efforts erased $1.4 million of campaign debts in a single night. No one doubted that Sinatra would be the favored entertained at the White House. But after a time things began to sour.

The singer's relations with the president began to deteriorate after Robert Kennedy took office as attorney-general and launched a campaign against organized crime in the United States.

Report Ordered

Before long, veteran investigators at the justic department complained that they did not understand how the administration could both wage war on the Mafia and welcome at the White House a man as closely tied to Mafia leaders as Frank Sinatra.

Robert Kennedy ordered the organized crime section at the justice department to give him a report on Sinatra's Mafia associations. Although the department had never investigated Sinatra himself, surveillance of many of the leading gangsters in the country had produced indications of a relationship between the gangsters and the entertainer, and a justice lawyer was set to work compiling all the scattered information into one special report.

After studying the justice department report, Robert Kennedy felt it was significant enough to take to his brother. While president Kennedy was examining it, an incident took place that fuelled the fire.

A friend of Sinatra's — Sam "Moe" Giancana, a leader of the Mafia in Chicago — became irked at the continual close surveillance of FBI agents! He sent an aide to tell the agents that he, Giancana, wanted to confer with Robbert Kennedy himself about ending the surveillance. As for his mechanics of setting up such a high-level meeting, the aide told the agents: "Moe says that if Kennedy wants to talk, he should get in touch with Frank Sinatra to set it up."

Honeymoon Over

According to one of Robert Kennedy's assistants, the attorney-general not only disregarded the invitation but took the FBI report of the incident to the president.

The honeymoon between the president and Frank Sinatra was over. This became all too clear when JFK visited Palm Springs and stayed at the home of Bing Crosby. The special wing that Sinatra had added to his Palm Springs home, in anticipation of President Kennedy's visits, was to remain unoccupied.

Sinatra soon learned from firends in the Kennedy circle that it was Bobby Kennedy who had persuaded the president to break with him, and the singer never forgave him. As his mother once said of Sinatra, "My son is like me. You cross him, he never forgets."

Peter Lawford, the president's brother-in-law was no longer a welcomd member of Sinatra's court. And no one who knew the singer well was at all surprised when, in 1968, he announced his support for Hubert Humphrey for the Democratic presidential nominations soon after Robert Kennedy declared that he would be a candidate. "Bobby's jut not qualified to be president," Sinatra said.

There has been much speculation as to the contents of the justice department report on Frank Sinatra. As standard procedure, the department will not reveal its contents or even acknowledge that such a report exists. However, I have been able to secure a copy of the report through special sources.

It is a 19-page document dated Aug. 3, 1962, and titled "Francis Albert Sinatra, a-k-a Frank Sinatra." The information in it is based partly on the reports of FBI agents who followed gangsters associated with Sinatra and monitored their telephone conversations, and partly on information supplied by government informants, who are identified by code names like "LA T-79."

The report establishes the fact that Sinatra was in contact with about 10 of the best-known gangsters in the country in the late 1950s and early 1960s. It details exact dates when some of these gangsters telephoned Sinatra's home, using his unlisted number, and it enumerates special favors that Sinatra performed for some of them.

One of these favors involved a car dealer named Peter Epsteen. He tried to persuade Sinatra to record a singing commercial for his Pontiac agency in Skokie, Ill., but the singer refused. Then Epsteen brought the matter to the attention of Joseph and Rocco Fischette, cousins of Al Capone and leading Mafia figures, "after which Sinatra made the commercial as a favor without charge," the report quotes Epsteen's former wife as telling FBI agents. (Sinatra did, however, agree to accept two Pontiacs as a gift from the grateful Epsteen, the report adds.)

Sinatra's favors to his gangster friends have not been solely of a financial nature. The report indicates that sometime in 1961 a 28-year-old divorcee acquaintance of Sinatra's was introduced to Chicago mobster Sam Giancana, the man who later complained about the FBI agents tailing him.

Giancana, a short, bald man with a harmless-looking smile and a mild manner, was rejected by his draft board in 1944 as a psychopath. At 15 he was sent to jail for auto theft, and by the time he was 20 he had been questioned in connection with three murders.

Giancana does not look like a Don Juan, but he has an eye for beautiful women. He has been widely seen and photographed in the company of Phyllis McGuire, of the singing McGuire sisters. He was so pleased with the companionship of the young divorcee to whom Sinara introduced him that he showered her with expensive gifts, including a new Thunderbird sports car.

The justice department report also indicates that Sinatra may have been involved with gangsters in business dealings in Nevada. Early in the 1960s he owned a controlling interest in the Cal-Neva Lodge, a resort complex and casino on Nevada's beautiful Lake Tahoe.

Dramatic Events

The report quotes Sam Giancana as bragging to friends that he owned a piece of Cal-Neva through Sinatra. While the singer owned the lodge, he employed Paul Emilio D'Amato, a New Jersey underworld figure, as an overseer. The report says that D'Amato's actual purpose was to protect Giancana's interest in the lodge.

The Cal-Neva Lodge was the setting for some dramatic encounters in Sinatra's life. The report says that in the summer of 1962 the singer made "improper advances" to a cocktail waitress at the lodge who happened to be married to a local deputy sheriff. The lawman warned Sinatra to leave his wife alone, the report says, but the singer persisted in his advances. On or about June 30, 1962, the angry deputy sheriff walked up to Sinatra in the casino and punched him in the face so hard that he had to cancel his singing engagement.

The bruises healed, but a year later Sinatra ran into real trouble at the lodge. The cause of it was his powerful friend from Chicago, Sam Giancana, who arrived at the Cal-Neva with his travelling companion, singer Phyllis McGuire.

Giancana was missed by his faithful shadows in Chicago, and the State Gaming Control Board in Nevada soon traced him, through informants, to Chalet 50 of the Cal-Neva Lodge. Giancana happened to be one of 11 gangsters on the gaming board's blacklist—a black folder circulated to all casinos with the names, pictures, and backgrounds of the men considered personae non grata in the state.

Blacklist

The gaming board had warned that if any of the gangsters on the blacklist were allowed into any casino, its licence would be revoked. Therefore, when Giancana was traced to Cal-Neva, the chairman of the gaming board, Edward Olsen, called Frank Sinatra to his office for an explanation.

Olsen says that Sinatra admitted having seen Giancana at the lodge, but denied having invited him there. He promised not to associate with the gang leader in Nevada anymore, but said that Giancana was a friend and that if he wanted to see him outside the state, it was his own business.

Olsen says he replied that as long as Sinatra associated with gangsters at all while holding an interest in Nevada casinos, it reflected badly on gambling in the state. But Sinatra refused to yield, Olsen says, and the gaming board began to amass evidence to file a complaint against the entertainer.

Several days after the meeting with the singer, according to Olsen, Sinatra telephoned him at his office and invited him to Cal-Neva for dinner "to talk about this thing." Olsen replied that he did not think such a visit appropriate, since the board was investigating the lodge. "But he kept insisting," Olsen says, "and I kept refusing. The more I refused the madder he got, until he seemed almost hysterical. He used the foulest language I ever heard in my life."

"paternal"

Finally, Olsen says, Sinatra declared that if his invitation was refused, he would never talk to anyone from the board. Olsen says he was angry himself by this time and told Sinatra that if the board wanted to talk to him, it would subpoena him.

"You subpoena me," Olsen quotes Sinatra as replying, "and you're going to get a big fat surprise."

"It was clear to me he meant that as a threat," says Olsen. The gaming board never subpoenaed Sinatra, but not because of the threat. After the board initiated formal proceedings to revoke his gaming licence, the entertainer turned it in voluntarily and promised to sell his Nevada gambling interests, worth $3.5 million.

Before events reached that stage, however, gaming board officials and Nevada's Governor Grant Sawyer were subjected to pressures of a different kind. Paul D'Amato, Sinatra's right-hand man at Cal-Neva tried to slip two $100 bills to gaming board agents who were making a routine inspection of the lodge. The agents returned the money and reported the offer.

Then Governor Sawyer got several phone calls from people who spoke about making large contributions to his upcoming campaign while at the same time discussing the Sinatra problem. "I told them that the rules were made for everyone, including Mr. Sinatra," he says. (Sawyer, who served two terms as governor, lost the election and is now practising law in Las Vegas.)

Persisted

Sinatra's involvement in Las Vegas ended in 1963, although he continued to appear as an entertainer there. But his involvement with underworld figures has persisted unabated despite the adverse publicity he has received and the financial losses he has suffered as a result of it. In 1963, Sinatra and singer Dean Martin turned up as directors of the Berkshire racetrack in Massachusetts.

No one thought much about it until it was discovered some time later that Raymond Patriarca, the Mafia boss in New England, and Thomas "Three Finger Brown" Luchese, the late head of one of the five Mafia families in New York, had secret interests in the track.

In 1969 Sinatra's name was linked to several more gangsters. A Mafia figure named Angelo "Gyp" De Carlo was put on trail in New Jersey on charges of extortion. The FBI released some 21,000 pages of recorded conversations De Carlo had had with other Mafiosi, and Sinatra's name figured on several of these pages. At one point a loan shark claimed that he would get money from Sinatra to buy a hotel in Jamaica.

The De Carlo conversations were publicized at the same time that Sinatra was trying to avoid appearing before the New Jersey State Commission of Investigation, which had been looking into organized crime in that state, and the impact of the two events seriously hurt the singer's reputation. When he finally appeared before the commission, however, the furore had subsided.

Whether De Carlo really knew Sinatra or was just bragging (a frailty not uncommon amiong second-string Mafiosi) is uncertain. But it is clear that Frank Sinatra has long had relationships with a number of gangsters in his native New Jersey.

When he left his Hoboken home to pursue his dream of becoming a singer, performing for practically nothing in local roadhouses and clubs, Sinatra became fast friends with Quarico "Willie Moore" Moretti, a leader of the Mafia in New Jersey who, before his violent death, was involved in extortion, dope pushing and murder.

While singing with Harry James's band in 1939, Sinatra made his first hit recording "All or Nothing at All." When band leader Tommy Dorsey offered him $125 a week to be his vocalist, it seemed like a princely sum to Sinatra and he took the job. But his star continued to shoot upward, and crowds of bobbysoxers followed him everywhere.

The contract he had signed with Dorsey was shackling him. He could not take full advantage of his new-found fame. Suddenly and inexplicably the contract was cancelled and Sinatra was a free agent.

Gun in Mouth

Dorsey never explained why he let such a valuable property go, but the story, much repeated among the underworld, was that Willie Moretti showed up at Dorsey's dressing room one night, put a gun into the band leader's mouth, and suggested that he sell Sinatra's contract. The price was $1.

Moretti continued to take a paternal interrest in Sinatra, and 11 years later when the gossip columns were full of the news that the singer was going to divorce his first wife, Nancy, and marry Ava Gardner, the gangster fired off a telegram of advice to Sinatra: "I am very much surprised what I have been reading in the newspapers between you and your darling wife," Moretti wrote. "Remember you have a decent wife and children. You should be very happy. Regards to all. Willie Moore."

Shortly thereafter, Moretti, his mental health weakened by advanced syphilis, was shot to death by fellow Mafiosi, who feared that he would talk.

Friend's Fate

Sinatra may have reflected on the fate of his old frind with some trepidation, but long before this his contacts with the underworld had reached to the very top of the Mafia ladder — namely to Salvatore Luciana, the Mafia boss who was better known as Lucky Luciano. Luciano was deported to Italy after the Second World War and spent his final years in Naples, but he did not give up his influence in Mafia affairs, even in exile.

During one of his absences from home, Italian police found in Luciano's Naples apartment a gold cigarette case with this inscription: "To my dear pal Lucky, from his friend, Frank Sinatra."

In 1947 Luciano flew to Cuba from Naples in the vain hope of finding some way to get back into the United States. The arrival of the Mafia boss, only 90 miles from the United States, was such an important occasion in the underworld that 36 hotel suites were required to accommodate all the important gangsters who came to Havana to pay their respects. And along with the gangsters came Frank Sinatra to pay his respects to his "dear pal Lucky."

When he got to Havana, Sinatra said, he was introduced to a large group of people, who asked him to join them for dinner. And when he arrived at the dinner he discovered that Lucky Luciano was a guest as well. "It suddenly struck me that I was laying myself open to criticism by remaining at the table," Sinatra told the press, "but I could think of no way to leave in the middle of dinner without creating a scene."

In spite of his explanations, United States investigators learned from informers in the city that Sinatra did not just have dinner with Luciano and his friends, but spent four days with them, gambling and partying until the early morning hours. The only periods when Sinatra was not with the gangsters were when they held "business" meetings.

It is precisely because of such associations that Sinatra's contacts with gangsters affect American society, suggests Ralph Salerno, a specialist on organized crime formerly with the New York police department.

"People say to themselves, 'If Frank Sinatra, who knows presidents and kings, is friendly with Joe Fischetti, Sam Giancana, and all the rest, they can't be all that bad.' That's the service Sinatra renders his gangster friends.

Competent Specialists Advising Government

By FRANK SYMONS
Consultant
Kates, Peat, Marwick & Co.

During the past decade and especially during the Trudeau administration, there has been a tremendous growth of federal and provincial government involvement in fields which directly or indirectly influence both industrial and institutional organizations.

At both these government levels there has been a correspondingly large expansion in government facilities and staff.

The result of this development can be seen in the increased production of briefs, the rewriting of legislation into more complex forms, and increased investigation and organizational activities in the orm of tribunals, task forces and enquiry commissions. Many national associations continue to move to Ottawa or enlarge their staffs and capabilities.

On the surface it looks as if industry and institutional organizations are organizing themselves to keep in step with the increased amount and scope of government activity.

At the same time it is disturbing to note that many top executives are not familiar with the organizational changes taking place in government and, when they are, it is often second-hand knowledge, passed along in a fragmented form by industry association officials.

One of the main developments has been the creation at both the provincial and federal levels of research and development units comparable in staff and capabilities to their counterparts in industry.

The privy council office and the increases in its research staff is an example. Where formerly either the drafting of new legislation or the handing down of orders-in-council and changes in regulations was on the basis of a more or less informed political decision, now changes are the result of highly informed decisions.

More significant is the fact that the induviduals working to advise ministers and deputy ministers are no longer "bureaucrats": they are highly competent specialist.

This means that in the technical — but not the political — sense, they can influence decisions made at cabinet level. They can use advanced management techniques to build computer-programmed models that will help to project more accurately future events and evaluate the effects of alternative decisions or policies.

For these reasons, it is highly advisable for individual companies and associations to know what these research and development units are doing.

In addition, they should maintain continuous lines of communication with individuals at this level of government — where appropriate, on a mutual information exchange basis.

Management Memo

Even further, it is now advisable to maintain relations with government officials on a multi-level basis instead of the "top level only" approach that has been customary in relations with government in the past.

If this multi-tiered approach is not used, one runs the risk of suddenly and disconcertingly discovering that a particular research and development unit will be making its recommendations on new regulations or other legislative change to a minister before there is any chance of proposing an alternate recommendation.

It may be easy to know what is going on with tribunals, enquiry commissions and task forces, but it is also necessary to remember that there are other groups that are constantly sending up new recommendations to ministerial levels.

J. S. Bain, in his study of government intervention entitled Industrial Organization, notes that there are areas where a government can distinguish between a good or a bad performance of certain aspects of industry and-or institutions and there are ones where it cannot.

He notes for instance that a government can evaluate the technical and production efficiency of a firm and sometimes of different plants. A government also can now draw conclusions from changing industry structures involving, for example, financial, production and-or distribution integration.

On the other hand a government will have tremendous difficulty assessing marketing performance in such areas as selling costs, or product performance or the degree of technological innovation. It cannot accurately assess whether or not the consumer is getting value for his money.

And since these latter aspects of corporate activity include many of the most jealously guarded of marketing secrets, third parties such as governments rarely if ever manage to gain access to the real facts.

There is consequently, a limit to the information that government groups do obtain, and therefore to the validity of recommendations that will be made to a minister, which in turn can affect the appropriateness — for both government and business interests — of a decision ultimately made and implemented.

Similarly, how many professional managers know exactly what fields or areas of activity of their form and industry are being or could be scrutinized by a particular group of "technocrats" in government?

"Lobbying" is for some the key word and the only way to influence government without giving away too many secrets. But, in most cases today it is a thing of the past.

Industry and institutions have begun to realize this and are taking steps to establish the kind of communications that suit a new kind of business-government environment.

Unrest Grows In Irian

DJAJAPURA, West Irian (AP) — Two years after West Irian formally became part of Indonesia, this province on the island of New Guinea remains an uneasy political time-bomb which the Indonesians have been unable to defuse.

Although many insurgents have been killed, captured or otherwise subdued, the distant Jakarta government has yet to find a way of drawing the Irianese into the mainstream of Indonesian life. Indonesia faces the prospect of trying to govern by force a continuously discontented province or at worst eventually having to stave off a full-fledged fight for independence.

This piece of tropical real estate, approximately the size of France, holds an indigenous population of approximately 800,000 persons—a majority of them native tribesmen. Few feel any kinship with the military and civilian government which rules them.

SEEK FREE STATE

"We don't like Indonesians, we want to be free and independent," said a young Irianese who identified himself as a member of an underground separatist movement that calls itself the PBPM—the letters standing for the Indonesian words for a United Free Papuan State.

He claims, and this is confirmed by Indonesian intelligence sources, the group has about 200 members, mostly young people and students living in this scenic provincial capital.

"We are different men," the young man said. "Our hair, our skin, also our language is not Indonesian."

The Papuans have large bones, dark skin and kinky hair. Indonesians, more fine-boned, have olive skin and usually straight hair.

PBPM represents no immediate threat. The group has few if any guns and must content itself with secret meetings.

But it is a symptom of resentment. Except for a few Irianese in figurehead positions, such as Gov. Frans Kasiepo, it is difficult to find an Irianese who proudly proclaims himself to be Indonesian.

SHOW CONTEMPT

Aggravating this are the disinterest and sometimes outright contempt toward West Irian and its people. An assignment to West Irian for a military officer or a civil servant is usually regarded as a punishment or demotion.

This indifference combined with Irianese hostility has created a great social, economic and political gap.

Much of this is the inheritance of history. It would be unlikely that a people seemingly emerging from the Stone Age could be expected to have the skills and training to take their places quickly in a modern society.

The late President Sukarno claimed West Irian for Indonesia and fought the Dutch for it. They handed it over in 1963 with the provision that within six years the Irianese could decide for themselves whether to remain with Indonesia.

With the help of the United Nations in 1969, a form of plebiscite called the Act of Free Choice—which according to one UN official was "cynically and callously" rigged—officially made the area Indonesian.

All during this period fighting flared between separatists and Indonesian troops, who at one point numbered around 11,000.

Indonesia spends more money on a per-capita basis for development in West Irian than in any of the nation's other 25 provinces. But the effect has been that of a bucket of water on a mountain of sand.

Giving It Away Felt Better

MISSION, B.C. (CP) — To retire at age 34 after earning more than $1 million—that was a thrill.

To give away $2 million at age 53 and enter a monastery—that was a more profound experience.

It happened to Rev. Bede Reynolds, 79, once a Protestant civil engineer, who struck it rich in the oil fields in the 1920s and today is a senior Benedictine monk at the Westminster Abbey Seminary of Christ the King near here.

When Father Reynolds, born in Michigan as Kenyon Llewellyn Reynolds, met the woman who would become his wife it was the beginning of a spiritual odyssey which would eventually lead him to monastic life.

The first week he knew his wife-to-be he made a discovery:

"I learned that she was a Roman Catholic. What a blow it was for me. If she were a cripple or an invalid, that could be cured. But if she was anything like my brother Graham, a fervent Catholic then at a seminary, what was the chance of cure from Catholicism?"

They were married, notwithstanding. Later, it was Mr. Reynolds who was converted.

He was married at 23 and at 28 used his civil engineering skill to build a $1 million plant to extract gasoline from natural gas in Texas.

SALE MADE HIM RICH

Mr. Reynolds was part of Pacific Gasoline Co., a little company which sold only to wholesalers. But Standard Oil of California didn't consider Pacific Gasoline Co. so small —it handed over $20 million to buy the partners out.

"I was vice-president of our company at the time, and my share came to a little over a million dollars," Father Reynolds recalled. "And don't forget, that was in 1926. The transaction left me, at the age of 34, with more money than I ever expected to own. I had three cheques sent to me for my three stock certificates and deposited them in the bank—and if you don't think that it is a thrill, try it some time."

For the next 16 years, Mr. Reynolds and his wife lived at ease. They travelled around the world. They bought a summer home at McKenzie Bridge, on the McKenzie River in Oregon.

It was during this time that he became a Catholic.

"I observed the tactics of a Catholic saint of a wife for 18 years," he said. "This is how I found my way into the church the last seven years before my wife died, we were daily communicants.

"We had a chapel at our summer home, and a chaplain there who was a Benedictine from Mount Angel Abbey, 100 miles away. So this is how I eventually came to the order."

Mr. Reynolds volunteered his services in the U.S. Petroleum Administration during the Second World War, and just before the war ended, his wife died of cancer.

GAVE AWAY WEALTH

"As a married man, I figured that as God had given me the faith while I was married, it wasn't expected of me to break up my family to become a priest," Father Reynolds said. "But my wife and I both knew that I wanted to be a priest, when we knew that she had only a short time to live."

It took him three years to dispose of his assets—which had grown to some $2 million by this time.

"The money was distributed high, wide and handsome."

Mount Angel Abbey was establishing a daughter priory in B.C. and by the time he was ordained a priest in 1951, he had moved north.

Father Bede contributed $500,000 and his skills as a civil engineer when the $1.5 million abbey was built in 1953-54.

At 79, he is 15 years older than anyone else at the monastery, and is second in rank among the monks.

Time to Give CBC-TV Back to Its Owners

Having examined the schizophrenic dilemma of the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation in television —the ardent wooing of sponsors through peak-time, often United States, programs of inferior quality to raise money for the production of quality programs in times of minimal viewing — we now propose to show them the way out.

The way out is to re-tool the television apparatus in Canada into two distinct national networks, one commercial the other non-commercial.

Ideally the commercial network should be under public ownership so that its profits could be used for the subsidizing of the non-commercial network and to prevent the monopolistic private ownership of the single most influential medium of communication in this nation. But perhaps we've come too far down the road for such a structural change and let's put that, for the moment, at the bottom of the agenda.

This commercial network and its affiliates, as CTV is presently constituted, would remain responsible to the Canadian Radio and Television Commission in such matters as the duration and frequency of commercials and Canadian content. Its primary function would be to entertain and amuse, to cover sporting and special events, to satisfy the casual appetites of those who seek mainly divertissements. In news coverage, documentaries and magazine style programs it would have the same opportunity for excellence to complement its purely commercial output, the loss leaders that are already a part of the commercial television image.

The CBC, as the non-commercial television network, would be financed entirely by its share of the parliamentary grant which, for the past two years, has been fixed at $166 million. Hopefully this grant would be increased with recognition of the vital new role of the network to make up for the loss of some $47 millions that presently come from sponsors and that, as we've seen, accounts for the trash in the prime-time viewing hours.

In this new role the CBC would embark on a policy of educational, informative programming. There would be no attempt to judge the worth or determine the scheduling of programs on the arbitrary basic of their ratings, but simply on the assumption that there are a great many Canadians who think that it's time television grew up and that a sustained diet of serious, adult fare is long over-due.

Anyone who has been exposed to the television service of the British Broadcasting Corporation or the Scandinavian networks or, more recently and closer to home, the Public Broadcasting Service in the United States, will know that the words "serious" and "adult" are not to be taken as synonymous with boring or culturally pretentious. I have never had such pure enjoyment as a viewer since discovering the Seattle channel of PBS. The BBC, for all the jokes made about it, makes the mass of American commercial television seem downright infantile.

In its new, non-commercial format the CBC would abandon its pathetic and futile efforts to imitate or be competitive with the United States networks. There'd be no elaborate mounting of productions, no star system, no self-conscious show business, no effort whatever to pander to the viewer who turns to the small screen as an anaesthetic or escape from reality. The hours of transmission would be limited, depending upon the available budget. Each program would answer the test of whether or not it was a public service. The present staff of nearly 9,000, a truly ridiculous establishment, would be cut to the bone.

We need only look to the American Public Broadcasting Service to see what can be done for very little money with a direct, simplistic approach. Their instructional programs, using experts in every field, scientists, professors, musicians, artists, informed commentators, critics, are always absorbing. Each week Robert Cromie sits there with an author, just talking, and you learn more about current literature in a half hour than you'll learn from CBC-TV in a year. Far and away the most informative news hour on the screen anywhere is called World Press Review and consists of half a dozen qualified men and women analyzing the week's news as it has been recorded in the foreign press.

There are vast, virtually untapped resources for the CBC in this new format. Every major television network in the world, east and west, has a reservoir on film of drama, music and documentaries that could provide our own network with an international flavor to counteract creeping Americanism. The CBC does occasionally tap that source, as it did last week in the BBC's masterful presentation of Sean O'Faolain's "In the Bosom of the Country," only to emasculate it by a series of nauseating commercials.

Domestically we need a continuing series of hard-hitting programs on consumer affairs, nightly if possible, if only as an antedote to the poison of false and misleading advertising that pervades every channel.

We need national exposure of the undiscovered talent outside of Toronto and, more urgently, national exposure to some opinion-makers other than Gordon Sinclair, Pierre Berton, Betty Kennedy and that other small coterie of "personalities" who perform like a repertory company. It is probably CBC's greatest failure that it has provided no more than token representation to any area west of Toronto and east of Montreal.

Let the commercialism go on, in short, because there seems no way of ending it, because there may even be a demand for it. But, please, let's begin to think, at least, about returning the CBC to the people.

Harbor Fuel Tanks Nearing Approval

By CLEMENT CHAPPLE
Times Staff

Fuel storage tanks planned near fisherman's wharf are one step from approval by city hall despite a confidential report that says tank farms in Victoria harbor are a serious hazard to the city.

The Victoria Advisory Planning Commission on July 2, 1970, tentatively ruled out tank farms from the industrial zoned harbor shores, describing the facilities "a constant risk to the city."

But the APC in March of this year decided in favor of creating new tank farm zoning and at the same time approved an application by Imperial Oil Ltd. to build a 70,000-gallon facility on Huron Street on an abandoned Home Oil site.

Last Thursday council stopped short of approving the zoning changes when Ald. Peter Pollen requested a delay awaiting further information on safety procedures for the new tank farm.

At a B Committee meeting Tuesday, Pollen told officials and Imperial Oil representatives he was unsatisfied with safety precautions.

Pollen told fire chief Eric Simmons the latter had informed the APC last year that he was opposed to tank farms on the Harbor waterfront.

Simmons replied he did not recall such a meeting.

The APC report, in the form of notes taken from the APC meeting in July, 1970, calls for a written report from Simmons and his appearance before the APC, "at which time the whole matter will be given serious study."

The notes conclude: "because of the problems involved, the preceding information to be treated with strong security measures."

The notes say "it is felt that the harbor area is not the ideal place for heavy oil storage as it remains a constant risk to the city.

"Other places suitable for this use would probably require truck haul or pipe-line," the report says.

It adds that the fire chief "has been considering upgrading of standards" for tank farms.

"It was finally decided that the commission be asked to consider ruling out tank farms in the M-3 (heavy industrial) zoned lands within the harbor area.

"Existing farms would remain as non-conforming uses, and would come under direct control of the fire marshall."

The report also says the commission considered the "advisability of recommending amendments to zoning bylaw to incorporate a proposed M-3T zone (tank farm zone).

"M-3 Heavy Industrial, the present zoning, allows any heavy industrial use as long as it does not create pollution, noise, dust, hazard.

"Tank farms are considered a definite hazard."

Pollen, at that time community planning chairman, was recorded on the notes as being on vacation.

The meeting was attended by chairman Joe Cunliffe and assistant city planner Peter Crisp was present.

The report says the commission earlier rejected an application for a tank farm south of the Songhees Road after Simmons reported it would be difficult to fight a fire in the area.

"City's plans for the harbor" was also given as a reason for the rejection.

The report continued: "Fire control and servicing of the particular area can be maintained only by way of Songhees Road and Kimta Road.

"If tank farms are permitted down by the water this becomes extremely difficult and fire-fighting would require a barge job. Also to consider is spill-over danger, even with dykes."

The Imperial Oil farm planned for the old Home Oil site would replace one now in use on the McKay-Cormack waterfront which is closer to the city.

Imperial Oil representatives said Tuesday the precautions built into the new oil dispensing equipment were adequate and Simmons said he was satisfied with the plans.

The bylaw to allow the new tank farm went as far as a public hearing last week but council has yet to make a final decision on the measure. The Imperial Oil representatives said they wanted a larger tank farm than the 70,000-gallon structure now planned but they were settling for it.

Questioned by planning chairman Harold Olafson, they said they would be willing to give assurances in writing they have no intention of building a bigger facility.

Planning assistant Peter Crisp pointed out in a letter to committee that a larger farm could be built with approval from council and the fire chief.

Answering questions from Pollen, an Imperial representative said to install a tank farm well back from the shoreline would be economically "unfeasible."

Pollen replied that Imperial will pay "almost anything" to build a servicing outlet.

Pollen added that in the State of Washington, "this unit is obsolete" because of the possibility of an earthquake breaking open the tanks and sending inflammable fuels up harbors on a rising tide.

ELDERLY WOMAN THIEF'S VICTIM

A 70-year-old woman was the victim of a thief Monday when he grabbed her purse from a shopping bag she was carrying as she walked along Rockland Ave.

Mrs. Frances Wilcox, 820 Cook, told police there was about five dollars in the purse at the time.

Police said the purse-snatcher, joined by a friend, ran through a lane to Burdett and was chased to Yates by two construction workers who were working in the area.

The culprits escaped but the purse was recovered.

Indians Prepared To Teach Democracy

Indians some day may have to teach white Canadians all over again about democratic government, Tony Belcourt, president of the Native Council of Canada, told the annual meeting of the B.C. Association of Non-Status Indians at the Empress Hotel today.

Belcourt said Canadians have lost democratic government because of their apathy and lack of awareness of what is going on in Ottawa.

"The government today is nothing more than a power structure with backroom boys making the decisions," he said. "Both Liberal and Conservative parties have gone stale."

He said at one time party associations in federal constituencies met to determine policy. "They now only meet once a year or every four years merely to support a candidate who has been chosen for them by the powers in Ottawa," he said. "The associations mainly exist to prevent grass-root policies."

Belcourt said elected representatives mainly worked for their own interest or those of their friends.

"Oppose any efforts to rule from the top," he said. "Some day when white Canadians have forgotten what democratic government is, we may be able to tell them what it is all about."

Belcourt lives in Ottawa.

Brothers Can Have List ~~If He~~ Insists: Trustees

The Greater Victoria School Board will turn over individual teachers' salaries if Education Minister Donald Brothers insists upon it, chairman Allan McKinnon said today.

"Legally he is entitled to do it," McKinnon said.

He added, however, that he couldn't understand why Brothers wants a pay list now since the school board submits annually a list of individual salaries to the provincial government under the requirements of the Public Bodies Information Act.

On Tuesday Brothers said he was prepared to force school boards to give him such a list following a refusal by the Victoria board to comply because it feared the salaries would be published.

Brothers said he may publish the salaries in a booklet.

McKinnon said the board's opposition to Brothers' request was for the record and to show that publication of the salaries would be done "without complicity."

He said the board did not want to be party to the same kind of unpleasantness that developed between the doctors and Health Minister Ralph Loffmark when he published their salaries for the first time last year.

Byron Barker, president of the Greater Victoria Teachers Association, both praised and condemned Brothers' move.

He added that on one hand Brothers is continuing "to meddle" with school board affairs, but on the other, if the salaries are published, it will "serve to refute wild statements by employees of the school board that Victoria teachers are the second highest-paid in B.C."

He said it has been publicly stated that teachers here average $14,000 a year when in fact the highest a teacher can be paid is $13,975. He added that Victoria teachers are 51st in average pay out of 81 school districts.

Brothers said the Victoria board's budget last year was about $21 million, 51 per cent of which was covered by grants from the provincial government. He said 71 per cent of the budget was taken up by teachers' salaries.

Curtis to Set Up Centre Talks

Saanich Mayor Hugh Curtis said today he will arrange a meeting with members of the Gordon Head Mutual Improvement Society to discuss their complaints about the municipality's new Gordon Head Recreation Centre.

Curtis said he was "surprised" at the criticism expressed at the society's annual meeting earlier this week, as the group had made no approach to council for some months.

Jack Groves, past president of the society, told the meeting the rental rates for the auditorium at the centre were too high for youth and other groups to afford.

He also said the society has been informed the new hall was not suited "for our so-called rambunctious youthful activities," such as Scouts' and guides' meetings.

As a result, Groves said, the society had decided to renovate the old Gordon Head community hall on Tyndall Avenue at a cost of $3,980.

The hall is scheduled to open for rental Nov. 30.

In an interview Tuesday Groves said society members were "very unhappy" about the administration of the facilities at the Gordon Head centre.

"We feel the hall is not being used to the extent it should be, or for the purpose for which it was designed," he said.

"I understand it does a whale of a business for dances and wedding receptions but was the centre intended for a dance hall and as competition to private enterprise in catering?"

Saanich recreation director Bill Young said the society's youth activities were offered the use of the hall during certain hours, but it was thought they should not monopolize it.

Donors Exceed Day's Objective But Blood Shortage Still Acute

An impressive turnout of blood donors in Victoria Tuesday pushed the Red Cross clinic past its objective and a spokesman urged the public today to keep up the momentum.

Objective at each of the clinics this week is 125 a day. Monday's turnout was only 85.

Of Tuesday's donors, 167 were O group, effectively meeting a newspaper appeal from Charles MacNeill, supervisor of the Victoria donor program, to meet a shortage for this type of blood. There are currently three hospital patients, two in Vancouver and one in Victoria, requiring massive transfusions of O group blood.

"We're most grateful to them," MacNeill said today of Tuesday's donors. "This response to the appeal has helped relieve the acute shortage.

"But we still require donors at Thursday's and Friday's clinics."

The clinic Thursday is in the Georgian room of The Empress from 2 to 5 p.m. and 6.30 to 9 p.m. Friday the clinic will be at the Saanich fire hall on Vernon Avenue, from 9.30 a.m. to noon and 1.30 to 4.30 p.m.

Q: I understand the size of the official Canadian football changed this year. Could you tell me what are the new dimensions of the ball and where I could buy one?—G.R.G.

A: The official ball being used in 1971 is slightly smaller than those used in previous seasons. For several years the size specifications for the ball have allowed for a tolerance of ¼ inch in circumference. However, whereas the ball previously has been tailored to the maximum specification, this year the minimum is being used. The 1971 rule book lists the circumference, long axis from 28¼ to 28½ inches; short axis from 21¼ to 21½ inches and the length of the long axis from 11 to 11¼ inches. Any sporting goods store should be able to supply the ball.

He Robbed Atlantic to Pay Pacific

ALTHOUGH IT MIGHT BE unwise to get our hopes up too soon, it does appear that this could be our last centennial year for quite a spell. But before the lengthy procession ends, permit me a backward glance at the final moments of the big one which brought Canada to her hundredth birthday within Confederation.

As the New Year uttered its first hoot, the Rev. Harold Allen of 2140 Kings Road reached to his pocket for a carefully-stoppered plastic bottle. . . .

But we're getting ahead of the story, which began when retired United Church minister Allen set out for Expo and points east in the golden summer of '67 with that same container tucked into his luggage.

Expo visited, he continued on across a Confederated land to the Maritimes. Arrived at Sydney, N.S., he emptied the bottle into North Sydney Harbor.

"It held Pacific water," Allen explains this symbolic footnote to history, "and since it would be on my conscience if I disturbed the balance of the oceans, I borrowed a refill from the Atlantic and added it to Victoria's Inner Harbor at the stroke of midnight on New Year's Eve."

When a motion picture with Australian setting happens along, we're conditioned to expect a hearty, earthy, beery production in which lean men of the outback drive cattle or shear sheep. Something like The Sundowners, a film which lingers on as a TV perennial.

Now comes Walkabout, a subtle, brilliant Australian excursion playing at the Royal, to make hash of our pre-conceived ideas.

We hadn't much more than settled ourselves for an evening of uncomplicated Down-Under adventuring when it became apparent that we were in for a treatment that didn't go to the tune of Waltzing Mattilda.

What we got instead, in excellent color, was a movie sometimes nightmarish, occasionally idyllic, and never less than gripping. It gave us puzzles to solve and meanings to grope for, and sent us home talking a blue streak.

Its background is the Great Victoria Desert, a hostile and sun-cursed never-never land. Characters are a young white girl, her little brother, and an aboriginal of about her own age.

White meets black. For the black boy on "walkabout" a lone roving with spears and boomerangs which is his prelude to manhood — the journey ends in tragedy.

I'm not going to tell you more about the story, since to do so might lessen the impact of sequences that curled our toes. Enough that Walkabout, like it or detest it, is the strongest picture we've seen in a considerable time.

Question here. A poem figures in the payoff. Thanks to a candy-paper rustler in the next row, I caught only a few words . . . something about "an air that kills." Can any reader clue me on it?

This takes a little remembering, but there was a time when our front porch mailbox would open with a clang and close with a bang about midway through each Saturday forenoon.

It was kind of nice, having a Saturday suburban mail delivery, and I missed it when it ended. As a matter of fact, I still miss that visitation, and am wondering when, if ever, we can expect to have it restored.

A Post Office Department that is making a pretty good thing out of its customers should be able to work out a solution within the framework of a unionized service. It would be cheering to know that an attempt was being made.

At seven cents a letter — a rate due for a one-cent hike next January — I think we should be getting Saturday mail for our money.

Francis Lends a Hand, And the Canucks Grab On

It's nice to see that Emil Francis hasn't forgotten his old friends after all. The general manager and coach of the New York Rangers has shown some pity, and given the Vancouver Canucks a helping hand. And boy, can they use it?

But then why shouldn't he? He was a member of the Canucks during his playing days, was an all-star goalkeeper, too; and his high-flying Rangers don't appear to be suffering at the moment, either. Which is probably the main reason he said sure, I'll give you a couple of players that will help. But first I want something in return.

Part of that something came via St. Louis in the multi-player deal between the Blues, Rangers and Canucks. And Red Carr is certainly bound to be pleased up there in Nanaimo that his son Gene is going to get a crack with the best team in hockey right now.

Not that Gene, the first-round amateur draft pick by St. Louis, is going to crack the Ranger lineup the very next game. But he'll be heard from eventually. That's what Francis is obviously backing on. Better still, he has put the finger on Carr as a finer prospect than Jack Egers, who has been dealt to St. Louis.

And that was a bit of a surprise.

Also, Francis got himself Vancouver's best defenceman, Gary Doak. At least he was Vancouver's top rearguard a year ago, and was the Canucks' first expansion pick too. This year he hasn't been anybody's defenceman, really, having been out with an ankle injury until two weeks ago. So really, the Canucks haven't given up that much.

'Now,' the Key Word in Canuck Plans

Not for what they appear to be getting in return. Because what they need, they need now, and that means some good wingers. And that's what they got in Dave Balon, a 36-goal scorer last year, Wayne Connelly, a good solid checker, and veteran Ron Stewart, a penalty killer with few peers, even at age 39.

So, if Francis is pleased with Doak and Carr as his backing for the future, the Canucks have to be happy that finally they have a left winger. General manager Bud Poile has been trying to swing that kind of a deal since last spring.

Meanwhile, it may be noted that last year at a luncheon in Vancouver when Poile was attempting to make a trade with the same Francis, an inquiring reporter asked that if Poile was considering giving up Dale Tallon, wouldn't that contravene the NHL ruling that amateur draft picks couldn't be traded away for two years.

Poile said simply at that time; "There is a way." And apparently there is. Poile wasn't telling what it was. Now it is obvious that the rule isn't there any more. So what price the amateur draft? And why trade away your draft picks, if a player can summarily be disposed of later on?

For the Canucks what do the additions mean?

Possibly a stronger team overall. The defence may be weakened temporarily, but there are a lot of good young defencemen on the roster, and the impact of the trade may give them a boost.

Paiement Has Fired Only One Goal

If Balon and Connelly should add scoring punch, there still is a definite need for a strong skating centre; and yet another goal scorer, too, unless, of course, Rosaire Paiement comes out of his shell. He scored 34 goals last season, only two less than Balon. This year he has one. Enough said.

Besides, the original super-pest, Andre Boudrias, unfortunately has been little more than Mickey Mouse this season; the supposed mighty-mite Bobby Lalonde hasn't demoralized even one goalkeeper yet; and guess who is leading the Canucks in scoring? Super-Kurt, that's who! Orland Kurtenbach, 35, has seven goals and 16 points.

Which is a fine performance indeed for Kurtenbach, but overall an otherwise sad commentary on the general state of the Canucks.

The other possible deal mentioned Tuesday had former Canadian National star Fran Huck coming from St. Louis, via Denver, to Vancouver, for Jim Hargreaves of the Canucks, via Rochester.

If it has not been consummated, it is probably because there is a reported $30,000 salary that comes with Huck. And it may not be worth it for the Canucks. After all, Huck is only a fringe player at best, and he obviously hasn't been at his best lately, or he wouldn't be in Denver.

Hargreaves, on the other hand, once was regarded as having a bright future with the Canucks. He apparently has talent but so far hasn't exercised the will to use it properly.

Medicine Hat Tigers' forwards and Victoria Cougar defencemen have something in common. Both are capable of increasing the heart beat of Cougar coach Fred Hucul while operating in the same end of a rink.

Victoria's end, if you must ask.

Both did it again Tuesday before the Cougars came away from Memorial Arena with a 4-3 Western Canada Hockey League victory over Medicine Hat.

Big, superb skaters and well-groomed in positional habits, Medicine Hat's forwards keep Hucul on edge because of their constant scoring threats.

Victoria's defencemen create similar nervousness because of inconsistent clearing methods. The most obvious failing is the reluctance of Victoria defencemen to headman the puck up the ice to waiting teammates.

But the Cougar rearguards did their job better than the 'Hatters. Consequently, the Cougars have claimed their second straight victory and their fifth of the campaign, all on Victoria ice.

The result also enabled Cougars to jump clear of the Western Division cellar, and sets an interesting stage for a two-game series with the defending WCHL champion Edmonton Oil Kings.

The Kings make their first appearance in Victoria on Thursday and will remain for a return go Saturday.

BEST DISPLAY

But about Tuesday's game . . .

The Cougars survived their several ticklish defending moments because of a strong over-all performance.

"The Tigers caught us napping at the start, but the final two-and-a-half periods was the best the team has played this season," Hucul said.

SHORTHANDED GOAL

Robinson, playing his best game of the year, turned in the winner at 13:03 of the final period while the Cougars were playing shorthanded. Winger Len Chalmers set the play up perfectly and also earned an assist on Smith's goal earlier in the period.

But Chernos was the dominant figure on the ice. He picked up an assist to run his point production to five in two games since being acquired from Brandon Wheat Kings.

In addition to scoring, Chernos was big in the hitting department.

Picking his spots, he dealt out several good bodychecks to help slow down the speedy Tigers. The most devastating hit of the night was one Chernos applied to Tiger defenceman Bob Gassoff in the opening minute of the second period.

OUTPLAYED EARLY

Out-shot by a whopping 17-4 margin in the opening period, the Cougars skated on even terms with Tigers after Chernos dropped Gassoff. Victoria failed to get a shot on Medicine Hat goalie Jerry Thomas in the first seven minutes of play.

McDonald got his first goal by catching Victoria goalie Darryl Fedorak unawares from the side of the net. Fedorak unwisely kicked a rebound onto Kuntz' stick to give Medicine Hat its second goal, but, otherwise, the Cougar goalie played a strong game.

The game marked the return of Chris Riddell to Victoria's lineup. The 19-year-old signed a contract earlier in the day and gives the Cougars a total of six centres.

Pat Rookie Takes Over Point Lead

Times News Services

Dennis Sobchuk, outstanding rookie centre of Regina Pats, is demonstrating that he rates the value placed on his talents before the Western Hockey League season opened.

Saskatchewan Junior League scoring champion last season with Weyburn Red Wings, Sobchuk joined Regina after the Pats gave up five players to New Westminster Bruins for his playing rights.

The 17-year-old showed his class Tuesday night, scoring two goals and setting up a third as the Pats defeated Swift Current Broncos 6-1.

The three-point effort pushed Sobchuk into first place in the individual scoring race. He has 14 goals and 25 assists for 39 points, three more than Stan Weir of Medicine Hat Tigers. Weir, the WCHL's rookie-of the-year last season, was held pointless when Victoria Cougars edged Medicine Hat 4-3

CENTS CLIP KINGS

Elsewhere in the league Tuesday, Calgary Centennials grabbed a share of first place in the Western Division by shading Edmonton Oil Kings 6-4 while Vancouver Nats dropped into the basement after suffering a 9-2 beating at the hands of the Blades in Saskatoon.

Ken Marit also scored a pair of goals for Pats before 1,450 Swift Current fans. Terry Ruskowski scored the Broncos goal, wrecking Regina goaltender Bernie Germaine's shutout hopes with 90 seconds remaining in the game.

At Calgary, the season's larges turnout — 6,050 fans — came away satisfied as the Cents scored four times in the third period to defeat the Oil Kings. Right winger Bob Nystrom counted two of the third-period goals.

At Saskatoon, rookie Bob Bourne scored twice in the opening period to start Blades in their romp against Vancouver before 3,193 fans. It was Saskatoon's 10th victory of the season, and their eighth straight on home ice.

Yvan Has Thrived On Regular Work

Times News Services

Prolific scorers in junior hockey don't always make the grade in the National Hockey League. In fact, being the trigger man on a junior club can often work to the detriment of a player when he reaches the major leagues.

Yvan Cournoyer had a five-game whirl with Montreal Canadiens in 1963-64 while still of junior age and scored four goals. The next full season he notched seven goals in 55 games and earned demotion to the minors.

The sharp-shooting native of Drummondville, Que., learned his lessons well. Tuesday night he scored three times, putting him in the NHL's 200-goal club, as Canadiens downed California Golden Seals 7-2.

DIDN'T LIKE DEMOTION

Elsewhere, Minnesota North Stars romped 5-1 over Pittsburgh Penguins and Detroit Red Wings skated to a 2-2 tie with St. Louis Blues.

Cournoyer didn't take kindly to his demotion by then Canadiens' coach Toe Blake, and wasn't reluctant to talk about it.

"Some guys need minor league experience, others feel there's not much they can learn there," he said at the time. "If a guy is left in the minors past the time he can learn something, it can hurt his ambition."

By the same token, Blake didn't take kindly to some upstart questioning his methods and for a couple of years after Cournoyer's return he limited the winger to point work on the power plays.

With the Montreal fans shouting for more of the speedster, Blake finally relaxed his personal feelings and fitted the youngster into a regular rotation. Cournoyer has been potting them at a blistering pace since the 1966-67 season, with a high of 43 in '69 and 37 last year.

Cournoyer triggered two goals in the second period against California to give him 199 career scores. He admitted after the game his teammates were reluctant to talk about No. 200 during the intermission.

"We didn't talk about it between the second and third periods," he said after the game. "But I guess I was aware of it."

So were his team-mates. As they skated out for the third period it was obvious they were doing everything to set up the 5-foot-7, 172-pounder. He finally clicked at 17:30.

Cournoyer admitted later that he had changed his style for this game.

"I was thinking defensively for the last few games—but it's not my style.

PRENTICE SCORES 2

The Minnesota win, that moved them to within two points of Chicago, leaders in the West, was spearheaded by exPenguin Dean Prentice's two goals.

The goals were No. 350 and 351 for the 39-year-old veteran and resulted, as did the other three North Star goals, from loose defensive play by Pittsburgh.

Vida Blue Youngest

At 22, Blue is the youngest player ever to win an MVP honor in either league.

SOCCER BIRDS PROTEST, SHUFFLES BY VIC WEST

University of British Columbia Thunderbirds of the Pacific Coast Soccer League have filed an official protest against Victoria West-United allegedly making more player changes than permitted during a game played in Vancouver last Saturday.

League president Ken Howarth said today in Vancouver that UBC manager-coach Joe Johnson claims Vic West-United made six player changes during the match. PCSL rules allow for five changes only.

"I haven't yet all the evidence before me," Howarth said. "But I expect to reach a decision by Friday. The penalty for making too many player changes is forfeiture of points."

Hotelmen Surge Into Top Berth

An impressive 33-point performance by Mike Taaffe sparked Hotel Douglas to an overwhelming 106-65 victory over Restoration Services Tuesday night as the hotelmen snapped a three-way deadlock and took sole possession of first place in the Victoria Senior "B" Men's Basketball League.

The win give Hotel Douglas a two-point edge over Independents and Robertson's Men's Wear, who edged Metropolitans 63-59 in the first game Tuesday at Highrock Junior High School.

Taffee struck for 18 of his points in the first half — six of them scored from the free-throw line. Clubmates John Lauvaas and Corky Jossul turned in 23 and 22-point efforts as the hotelmen romped to a 54-29 half-time lead.

Jim Cunningham led Restoration with 13 points.

Robertson's led by only 32-30 at half time and held just a one-point margin going into the last few minutes.

STORMY TOMMY DOCHERTY ACCEPTS SCOTTISH POST

GLASGOW (Reuter) — Tommy Docherty, one of the most controversial figures in British soccer, has accepted the appointment as full-time manager of the Scottish national team for the next four years.

James Aitken, chairman of Scotland's international selection committee, said: "I am happy to announce that a satisfactory conclusion has been reached and that Mr. Docherty will take up his post on Monday."

Terms have not been announced, but newspaper reports said the stormy Docherty will be paid about $72,000 for the four-year period.

Earlier this season, Docherty was appointed Scotland's temporary manager. Under his guidance Scotland beat both Portugal and Belgium in European championship matches.

Tennis Hook Baited

LONDON (AP) — One of Britain's biggest insurance firms, Commercial Union, moved into tennis sponsorship Tuesday with $500,000 for the International Grand Prix over the next two years.

Alan Heyman, president of the International Lawn Tennis Federation, said the Grand Prix will carry considerably increased prize money.

The ILTF called a hurried news conference to announce the new plans — possibly as a bait to attract independent pros who might be tempted to join the World Championship Tennis professional group.

Money Increase May Tempt Pros

WCT has quarreled with the ILTF and its 34 stars are due to be banned from all ILTF tournaments as of Jan. 1.

The Grand Prix, run on an accumulative points basis and culminating in a Masters tournament involving the top players, has been sponsored for two-years by Pepsi Cola, which decided to pull out.

The ILTF issued a provisional list of about 40 tournaments which, a spokesman said, will probably count towards the Grand Prix next year. The series will start in early January and will include Wimbledon, the French championships and Forest Hills.

The Grand Prix prize money for 1971 totals $150,000 for men and $50,000 for women.

Basil Reay, secretary of the ILTF, sais next year the Grand Prix will start with $150,000 for men, $50,000 for women and $50,000 for the Masters tournament at the end of the series.

Four Canadian Dates

TORONTO (CP) The 32 professionals under contract to World Championship Tennis will compete in four Canadian tournaments next year, beginning in Toronto Feb. 13-20.

A tobacco firm is financing the Canadian venture with $50,000 for each of the tournaments at Toronto, Quebec City April 8-16, Montreal Sept. 10-17 and Vancouver Oct. 15-22.

No Canaidians are among the contract pros that include Australia's Rod Laver, winner of $262,517 on the pro tour this year, and Tom Okker of the Netherlands, 1971 Canadian Open champion.

World Championship Tennis, which announced the Canadian tournaments at a news conference, is organizing 20 tournaments in North America with $1 million in prize money.

Kraemer Top Rookie

WINNIPEG (CP) — Wingback Bobby Kraemer of the Winnipeg Blue Bombers has been named the outstanding Canadian rookie in the Western Football Conference, the Winnipeg club has announced. The selection was made by the Football Reporters of Canada.

Kraemer, 21, is a recent graduate of the University of Manitoba where he quarterbacked the Bisons of the Western Canada Intercollegiate Athletic Association to the Canadian college championship in 1969 and 1970.

'Fearful Trap' Snags Denver Olympic Group

By JOHN SAMUEL
The Manchester Guardian

DENVER — When one of the richest cities in the richest country in the world begins to find the staging of a Winter Olympic Games almost beyond its physical and emotional resources, then it is time the Olympic movement re-examined its priorities and needs.

This is the lesson which is emerging as Denver, the nominated city for 1976, goes through civic agonies in its efforts to meet a 10-day sports event still five years away. Denver is now driven by a civic dispute which is bubbling-hot in its arguments and intensities.

A powerful and growing protest movement has succeeded in scotching one key site at Evergreen, where the cross-country, skiing and jumping were to be held; and Mount Snictau, which was to have been the downhill site, is now found unsuitable. Snictau, a virgin mountain, needs so much technical development that no one can be found to put up the money.

Denver's Olympic Committee, which walked out of the International Olympic Committee, (IOC) meeting at Luxembourg refusing any comment, is now in a fearful trap. At least $600,000 have been spent so far, and the decisions are now awaited which will escalate costs to $24 million. But which sites and with what money?

State Puts Ceiling on Taxpayer's Aid

The state legislature has put a ceiling on the amount of taxpayers' aid. The IOC demands that sites shall not be more than an hour's transport away from the Olympic village. The International Skiing Federation (FIS) demands that alpine and cross-country skiing events must be held adjacently. The U.S. Ski Federation was partly alienated by sharp diplomatic moves which eliminated Jackson Hole as a world ski championship possibility.

Denver's Olympic Committee twists and turns under all these pressures, hoping someone will give. The conservationists obviously will not. To the IOC, meeting in Sapporo just before the XIth Olympics begin next February, will have to — or award the Games to another city. Sion, in Switzerland, and Vancouver, B.C., (both much preferred by FIS), could yet come back into the picture, though only Sion, a new resort in the Valais, has categorically stated they will take it on if Denver forfeits the Games — which itself would be an unprecedented event, and damaging to confidence all around.

Conservationists bitterly attack the Chamber of Commerce dreaming, which has put Denver in this predicament. Sigge Bergmann, secretary of FIS, speaking via telephone from Stockholm, said there was little doubt that Denver had underestimated the difficulties in putting its claims. FIS would accept nearby Steamboat Springs, Colo., as an alternative site for the skiing and jumping though finding it "a great pity."

Olympic Ideals Again Open to Attack

The only way out is for the IOC once again to accept that its decision-making process among 73 invited members can will the ends but not the means. If Denver does not have the means, then the ends will have to be changed. While Denver holds the ice hockey and skating, Steamboat Springs must stage the skiing. Grenoble and Innsbruck were heavily criticized for their dispersed centres. Denver will be far worse — since a dozen 14,000-foot peaks lie between it and Steamboat Springs.

Thus the Olympic movement again sees its ideals and hopes open to slur and criticism. Both Vancouver and Sion could have answered the need for close and integrated competition. But because Montreal was hosting the Summer Games, many thought that Canada would not have the Winter too.

Or perhaps the astronaut on Denver's campaign team encouraged a few decisive votes. Olympic voting is inscrutable — perhaps wrongly.

Donald F. Magarell, general secretary of the Denver Olympic Committee, says bravely: "This is going to be a source of national pride. You can't measure everything in terms of dollars." And Ted Farwell, the technical division manager, says: "Look what it cost us to play golf on the moon. It's an excellent way for Colorado to spend its money."

But with the state legislature now clamming up on the dollar flow, the expectation will have to be put to the proof with individual Coloradoans putting their hands in their pockets, or finally President Nixon offering last-minute medicaments.

George Respects Wayne

GEORGE REED
... after nine years

REGINA (CP) — Nine years of trying to outmanoeuvre Wayne Harris has instilled a great deal of respect for the agile Calgary Stampeders linebacker in George Reed.

"He's probably the best linebacker I've ever played against," said Reed, Saskatchewan Roughriders star fullback, prior to the second game of the best-of-three Western Football Conference final against the Stampeders.

"Seldom can you trick or fool him. He gives Calgary a superior type of defence. A big front four also keeps people off of Harris and lets him patrol the line."

That patrol more often than not is keyed on Reed and has been for the last nine years whenever the Stampeders and Roughriders clash.

Reed, the holder of numerous rushing and touchdown records in the Canadian Football League, will renew his old rivalry with Harris tonight when the two clubs meet at Taylor Field in Regina.

Stampeders opened the series with a 30-21 win in Calgary and have forced Saskatchewan against the wall. Game time is slated for 6 p.m., PST and it will be shown nationally on the CBC network.

Roughies Must Win Tonight

Reed joined the Roughriders in 1963 and has been a consistent top ground-gainer from the start. He has rushed for 1,000 yards or more in seven of those nine years and this year set career records in total yardage rushing, most touchdowns rushing and most carries.

When he joined the league, many people thought his 6-foot-one frame and 205 pounds was too small to stand up to the pounding a fullback must take.

You don't hear that kind of talk anymore.

"A lot of people think a good fullback should be big but you can be big and lack the desire," said Reed in an interview.

That determination is recognized by Calgary defensive back Frank Andruski who says of Reed:

"You can hit George, step on his face and spit in his eye . . . he just keeps plowing over top of you."

Much of Reed's success in the league has been his good health which he believes is attributable in part to "luck."

"Anytime you look at that you have to think you have had a good amount of luck."

Tradition Topples As Trotters Strike

PORT HURON, Mich. (CP) — Harlem Globetrotters, basketball's international goodwill ambassadors, refused to make an appearance for a scheduled exhibition game here Tuesday night.

Elliott I. Goodman, a Chicago lawyer who acts as bargaining agent for the Globetrotter players' union, said the team is on strike against management over "bad working conditions."

It was the first time in their long and colorful history the touring Globetrotters have voluntarily failed to appear for a scheduled exhibition game.

"The Globetrotters aren't going to play until the owners talk to them," Goodman said Tuesday.

Playing conditions, "That sparked the strike," head a long list of grievances, he said. The lengthy schedule from Oct. 1 to the end of March each year, when players were required to play seven days a week and sometimes twice on Sundays, also figures prominently in the discussions.

"They were given only one uniform a year and had to wash their own uniforms in their hotel rooms at night after playing over two hours of basketball," said Goodman.

The only days the players have off during the season is four days prior to Christmas when they can visit their families at the players' expense, regardless of where the team happened to be playing.

Other grievances include lack of a pension plan for the two Globetrotter teams.

MOD SOD OKAYED

TORONTO (CP) — Metropolitan Toronto council gave its assent Tuesday to laying artificial turf at Exhibition Stadium, home field of Toronto Argonauts of the Canadian Football League.

Only 13 of the 32 elected members of council were in the chambers to discuss a letter from the Canadian National Exhibition board of directors proposing installation of the mod sod at a maximum cost of $400,000.

The letter was left for Metro's executive committee to consider ways of financing the project.

Toronto will make a bid for the 1974 Grey Cup game during this year's national final festivities in Vancouver. The 1973 game went to Hamilton, which installed artificial turf this year.

ANGELS AGREE TO PAY TONY

ANAHEIM (AP) — California Angels announced Tuesday that they had agreed to place outfielder Tony Conigliaro on the disabled list and pay his full estimated $70,000-plus salary for the last season.

Christchurch Appears Likely to Lose Games

WELLINGTON (Reuter) — The 1974 Commonwealth Games will be lost to Christchurch unless the New Zealand city can give an assurance by Dec. 10 that all facilities for the Games will be ready by Oct. 1, 1973.

New Zealand's Olympic and Commonwealth Games Association tonight decided here that this deadline, set some weeks ago, would stand.

Dec. 10 is considered the latest a start can be made on constructing the main stadium and swimming facilities if they are to be finished in time.

The start of the building program is threatened by the prospect of a referendum on the proposal to raise a $3,890,000 loan ($4,344,000 Canadian).

The local authorities loan board today gave formal approval for the loan application. But more than five per cent of Christchurch's 60,008 ratepayers are reported to have expressed their objection to the loan.

The mayor of Christchurch, Neville G. Pickering, said the earliest such a referendum could be held was February next year.

The squabble over the Games has been going on in Christchurch almost since the city was awarded the Games by a 36-to-2 vote during the 1970 Games in Edinburgh.

If there is to be a change of venue, then the likely back-up venue would be New Zealand's biggest city, Auckland, which staged the successful 1950 Commonwealth Games.

Low-Cost Housing Draws Interest

Offers for two pieces of municipally-owned land were considered by Saanich lands and housing committee Tuesday night.

Both involve proposals for a recently-announced, 60-unit dispersed housing project for low-income families in Saanich. Tenders on this close Thursday.

The committee took no action.

In the first case, Krieger, Stricker and Co. offered $30,000 for a 3.2-acre property on a triangular wedge of land between Interurban and Violet.

The developers said they planned to develop a 20-unit row housing scheme, with a density of 6.5 units to the acre, which they would submit for the tri-government scheme.

Described as unique in the province, the over-all project aims to avoid large concentrations of apartments or townhouses by a dispersal concept.

Tender specifications call for 60 dwellings of two and three-bedroom units, detached, semi-detached and row housing, in groups of 20 or less.

COSTS SHARED

Capital cost will be financed 75 per cent by the federal government and 25 per cent by the province.

In its offer read at Tuesday night's meeting Krieger, Stricker and Co. said the sale price of $1,500 per unit for the municipal land would be reflected in the over-all price and quality of the housing.

PRICE

However, committee chairman Ald. Edith Gunning said she felt no action should be taken on the offer until tenders for the main scheme had been received and considered by Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation.

Otherwise, she said, "we may be making the choice ourselves by deciding who buys the land."

Officials pointed out that zoning approval had not been obtained for the site in question.

Acting municipal planner Gil Laurenson wondered whether the company could submit a firm proposal to CMHC under the low-cost housing scheme without owning the land or having a commitment to it.

But Mrs. Gunning said she felt this would be no obstacle to framing a submission.

It was finally decided that the company should be informed the property is not for sale at present, but that it would be posted at a later date.

BUILDER IDEA

The second offer, from the Victoria Home Builders Association, concerned a narrow plot on Alder Street.

Lands commissioner F. E. Harris said in a report the association planned to consolidate the plot with another parcel of land immediately to the south, and build a quadruplex development.

He said the municipally-owned land is "encumbered" by sewer and drain easements, can't be used in its present state and is "therefore unsaleable."

But in a separate report municipal assessor W. R. Craven recommended the association's offer of $3,800 be rejected and a counter-offer made, as he estimated the market value at $4,500.

In its letter the association said as well as entering for the low-cost housing scheme it was planning to sponsor an "educational construction program" on the site.

On this aspect Laurenson told the committee he understood the association would be developing the site according to the new National Building Code, and inviting building inspectors and others to view the construction.

Although Mrs. Gunning favored helping the association if possible, the committee decided it could do no more than recommend that the land be posted for sale with a minimum price of $3,800.

JAPAN, B.C. SHARE EDUCATION PROBLEMS

Members of a touring Japanese education mission now in Victoria are impressed by the similarity between their education system and B.C.'s.

They also appear to share the same problems.

Katsuzo Kato, a spokesman for the 24-member group, said Tuesday that over-all administration, structure and curriculum of Japanese schools is much the same as in British Columbia.

ONE DIFFERENCE

The main difference is the greater variety of subjects offered in Japan. However, the cost of this, says Kato, is the student doesn't learn any one subject as thoroughly as do Canadian students.

Statistics show that the size of classes in the two countries are almost the same.

The students, themselves, share similarities.

"We found that one of the greatest problems of your teachers, like ours," he said, "is the students' laziness. We have to work very hard to get the students eager to come to school and to learn there."

The education budget, although it is raised differently in Japan, like its B.C. counterpart, can always do with enlarging.

Kato is a teacher-consultant with the board of education for the prefecture of Iwate in northern Japan. He explained that education costs in Japan are financed jointly by prefectures (roughly similar to B.C. district school board), the federal government and the municipalities (smaller administrative units within the prefectures).

"But our province is not so rich," he added, "so we cannot get so much money from our prefecture.

TWO CHOICES

"Then we must either raise taxes, or ask the federal government for more money."

One big difference in Japanese and Canadian education systems is the way in which the Asian system is integrated into the community.

Community halls and youth centres are all part of the education department, encouraging such projects as debating and historical societies and the development of the residents' skills.

Leaving here, the mission will head for Seattle, then to Missouri where they will tour school systems in St. Louis and Jefferson City.

Returning to Japan Dec. 9, the mission will later make a trip to Europe, visiting schools in France, Denmark and other countries.

Sooke Water Battle Nears Peace

Sooke's battle to determine where its water supply should come from was all but wrapped up Tuesday during a special meeting of the Greater Victoria Water Board.

In a special meeting in city hall, the water board passed a motion assuring the Sooke water committee that the present 55-year-old flow line from Sooke Lake will be kept and maintained.

It also gave three readings to a bylaw for the financing of a $215,000, half-million gallon water tank at Sooke to provide a three-to-four-day supply in case of a flow line breakdown and for better fire protection.

PROTESTS

These concessions follow water commissioner Ron Upward's withdrawal of plans last week to replace the lake supply with a Sooke River pump unit. These plans had drawn protests from Sooke residents and opposition from the Greater Victoria Metropolitan Board of Health because of the polluted and discolored state of the Sooke River.

With his withdrawal of the river scheme, Upward countered with plans to build a 12-million-gallon, $500,000 dam at Charters Creek. But the board's approval of the water tank, which will increase storage by five times over the present 90,000-gallon tank at Sooke, will put off the dam proposal for a few years when it will likely be utilized for the long-range needs of the district.

The water committee will hold a general meeting with Sooke residents within the week to ratify the agreement with the board.

The board gave a quick three readings to the water tank bylaw so it can apply as soon as possible for winter works assistance for the project. However, Upward said a federal loan is unlikely and that construction of the tank will probably begin in the spring.

Howard Elder, Sooke representative on the Capital Regional District Board and a member of the water committee, said after the meeting that the last hurdle facing the committee will be the question of how to pay for the new water tank.

That will be decided by the Public Utilities Commission, and the committee is expected to press for the cost to be shared by the water district.

During the meeting, Elder, an engineer, offered technical advice to Upward, and at one point suggested a site he had found near Sooke where a 7 to 11 million gallon reservoir might be built in a draw between two hills.

On promopting by Mayor Frances Elford of Oak Bay, the board instructed Upward to investigate this site.

Lang Talks Tokyo Trade

TOKYO (AP) — Otto Lang, Canadian minister of manpower and immigration and minister with responsibilities for the Canadian wheat board, arrived in Tokyo from Vancouver today for a three-day visit to Japan.

Lang, accompanied by five government officials including commissioners D. W. Gibbings and R. M. Esdale of the wheat board, plans to confer separately in Tokyo with agriculture-forestry Minister Munenori Akagi and Kakuei Tanaka, minister of international trade and industry.

The Canadian embassy said their talks will be a follow-up to the discussions on grain and other farm products at the Canada-Japan ministerial conference held in Toronto last September.

Cedar Hill Hikes Fees for Juniors

Saanich municipality's Cedar Hill golf course will double its membership dues for junior players next year — to $50 from $25.

Ald. William Noel, chairman of the golf course management committee, said today the fee increase will bring the Saanich course more in line with other municipally-owned courses.

As examples, he cited the $78 charged on Vancouver courses and $60 in Burnaby.

But Noel pointed out that most areas lay down specific periods in which juniors can play, and do not allow weekend use of courses by junior members.

"We don't enforce these restrictions," he said. "If the course isn't busy it is left to the discretion of the pro whether juniors can play."

145 JUNIORS

Noel said there are at present 145 juniors at the Cedar Hill course, and he thinks it unlikely any will be deterred from playing by the increase.

"At a very conservative estimate we reckon the average junior plays about twice a week throughout the year, so the fee works out at 50 cents a game, or about 25 cents a game."

Junior fees at the three principal private courses in Greater Victoria range from $20 to $35.

There are no playing restrictions at the Royal Colwood club, where the fee is $20, but senior members have preference.

A spokesman for the Uplands club said the junior fee is now $25 but there is a motion for the club's annual meeting Nov. 25 to increase it by $15. Junior members are restricted to playing at certain times.

PIONEER COUNCILLOR WILL STAND

Ald. Nell Horth, who has been a member of North Saanich council since the municipality's incorporation six years ago, will stand for re-election in December.

Mrs. Horth is the appointed representative of Capital Regional Hospital District to the board of trustees of Saanich Peninsula Hospital. She is also chairman of the Vancouver Island Regional Board of Management.

"My policy will be the same as the one I have always followed," said Ald. Horth. "Integrity, an unbiased approach to all problems and consideration of what is right, not who is right, while striving to serve the community as a whole."

Harmony Aim Of Candidate

Mrs. Rubymay Parrott, 9620 Ardmore, will run for Saanich school board, representing North Saanich in the Dec. 11 election.

Mrs. Parrott, who was chairman of the board for two of four years served previously, says she feels she can restore harmony to the board and "allow it to get on with the business of educating children."

The former trustee added that there is a great need for someone to devote time and energy to problems of classroom-overcrowding and the school bus system.

Present North Saanich incombent, Charles MacNeill, 1492 Lands End, said today that he will stand for a third term.

B.C. Indian Groups Urged to Unite

A suggestion that Indians and non-status Indians unite to exert more political power at the polls was made Tuesday by H. A. Smitheram, president of the B.C. Association of Non-Status Indians.

There are 600,000 non-status Indians in B.C. and about 50,000 registered Indians, he told the annual conference of the association.

"If this organization merged with the Union of B.C. Indian Chiefs we could exert influence over candidates for public office," he said.

Non-status Indians are Indians who are not registered with the Indian affairs department because of voluntary relinquishnig of rights, failure to register, or in the case of a female, by a marriage to a white or non-status Indian.

Smitheram said his organization started in Vancouver with 10 members in 1968 and within one year six locals were established in various parts of the province.

This year the organization has 37 locals registered and more applying for affiliation in the organization, chartered under the B.C. Societies Act, he said.

Non-status Indians want to be recognized as registered Indians and to receive the same benefits as native bands.

He said many Indians became non-status Indians because they were living in extreme isolation and simply never registered.

Others became disenfranchised because they had no other alternative.

"They couldn't obtain a registered trap line, they couldn't vote and they couldn't enter into a business contract unless they relinquish their Indian rights," he said.

He said a section of the Indian Act which states that a female Indian who marries a person who is not an Indian, becomes automatically a non-status Indian, is discriminatory and in contravention of the Canadian Bill of Rights.

LAND PURCHASE PAPER DEFENDED

Gordon Michell, 2598 Island View, today defended a ratepayers' petition on the contentious issue of acquiring a Brentwood parcel of land for $53,100.

He claimed that criticism of it by Ald. Ken Stanlake at Central Saanich council meeting Monday was based on false information.

At the meeting, Stanlake said he had conducted his own survey of some who had signed the petition and found that they had "felt duped" because of insufficient information.

Michell said today: "I obtained 250 of the 1,060 names on the petition myself. I would like to make it clear that the wording of the petition merely asked that ratepayers be given a chance to vote on the matter."

Mitchell added that ratepayers were not necessarily against the land purchase.

Anderson Gets Talk Date With Democratic Leaders

Esquimalt-Saanich MP David Anderson has been given a big boost in his effort to stop oil from being shipped down Canada's west coast.

He has been invited to address the Democratic Reform Committee of the Democratic party in Washington.

The Democratic Reform Committee is one of the most influential legislative bodies in the United States. Composed of 60 state senators, governors and representatives, it is responsible for the large part of the reform legislation proposed by the Democratic party.

Anderson will speak to the committee Friday.

Anderson is trying to launch a suit along with several prominent U.S. conservationists to keep the U.S. from shipping oil by tankers along B.C.'s coastline. The groups proposes a pipeline through Canada instead of the tankers.

"I am especially pleased to have this opportunity to speak to the committee because it comes at a time when many Canadians feel the United States is not listening to what they have to say," Anderson said. "I doubt that many Canadians get an opportunity for such a forum."

BY INVITE ONLY

An uninvited guest at Victoria council's B committee meeting Tuesday refused to leave until asked if he wanted to embarrass a city hall employee.

Peter Hartnell, owner of the Queen Victoria Inn, was asked by chairman Clyde Savage to leave because he wanted only to listen to proceedings.

Savage said Hartnell had told him before the meeting he had a submission to make to committee.

Savage told Hartnell only invited guests can attend committee meetings and the press has a standing invitation. He said invitations are for the asking if a citizen has a submission to make.

When Hartnell refused to go, Ald. Peter Pollen said the procedures of committee should be upheld and therefore the police should be called.

Hartnell said he would leave only when the police came to remove him. He claimed a woman's voice from city hall had invited him to the meeting, and he wanted to know who it was.

Hartnell finally decided to leave after Mayor Courtney Haddock asked if he wanted to "embarrass" a girl who had made a mistake.

Seven Years in Jail For Strangling Wife

NANAIMO (CP) — Robert Thomas Copeland, 26, was sentenced to seven years Tuesday after a Supreme Court jury found him guilty on a reduced charge of manslaughter in the May 6 strangling of his wife, Barbara Gaye Copeland, 24.

Copeland was originally charged with non-capital murder. The jury deliberated three hours.

Ex-Russian Fears Deportation, He Tells Vancouver Judge

VANCOUVER (CP) — Cvetan Todorov, 29, told a provincial court judge Tuesday he escaped from immigration authorities after his arrest for shoplifting Nov. 8 because he feared deportation to his native Russia.

"A 20-year sentence awaits me if I have to go back there because I was in the army and I disobeyed them," he told Judge Nick Mussallem after pleading guilty to the escape charge.

Court was told Todorov lived in the United States for eight years before entering Canada at Windsor, Ont., last September. Immigration authorities took him into custody while he was free on bail on the shoplifting charge.

An immigration spokesman said a hearing has been arranged for Todorov next week, and if he is ordered deported, it will be to the U.S., not to Russia.

He was fined the minimum penalty of $50 or 30 days.

CAPTAIN ENDS LOVE AFFAIR

By DENNIS TRUDEAU

MONTREAL (CP) — For Captain Bill Williams, losing his ship means divorce and the end of a love affair.

So earlier this week he held a wake for the Empress of Canada which leaves Montreal today on its last voyage to England, ending regular passenger liner service between the two countries.

"People say every seaman is a bigamist," he told a hushed and sad audience in the ship's plush St. Lawrence lounge, "because he marries a ship first and then a woman.

The last voyage was also "the end of a 25-year love affair between myself and this port."

"Those years have seen many changes . . . but Montreal has been good to me. To a seaman it is a second home."

Canadian Pacific announced last week the ship was being sold because there was not enough business to make a profit.

The CP Ships fleet had dwindled from 14 passenger ships before the Second World War to a scant three at the beginning of the 1960s.

In 1954, the Empress of Britain was sold to the Greek Line and last year the Empress of England went to Shaw-Savill.

Burnaby Teachers Show Some Muscle

BURNABY (CP) — The Burnaby Teachers' Association said Tuesday night it will hold a strike vote if the number of teachers in the municipality is reduced at the end of the year.

"We will take a strike vote if necessary over learning and working conditions for ourselves and our students," said association president Don Kelley after a meeting of 800 teachers.

"Reductions in teaching staff, closure of classrooms, reshuffling of children to other teachers and the subsequent increase in class size would pose a threat to education that teachers just will not accept."

Sentence Deferred

VANCOUVER (CP) — A former assistant city prosecutor, James Edward Wilson, was found guilty by a county court jury Tuesday of theft of $34,000 from the estate of Reginald Nalutka of Vancouver. Wilson was remanded to November 25th for sentence.

The crown alleged that between July 1st and September 15th, 1970, Wilson wrote cheques totalling $34,000 against the estate which he was handling for Nalutka's widow.

MOBY DICK DAYS ARE GONE

Whalers Soon Extinct in U.S.

POINT RICHMOND, Calif. (AP) — Whalers go down to the sea for the last time in the United States next month. For Charles Caito, the end of the tradition-rich profession is bitter.

Caito is the last American to hold a licence to hunt whales. His licence expires Dec. 15 and the government does not intend to renew it.

In the Moby Dick days of the 1850s, the U.S. whaling fleet was the largest in the world, with 750 ships. But now only three rusty whalers are left, based at this lonely, weatherbeaten point on the northern leg of San Francisco Bay.

Commerce Secretary Maurice H. Stans ordered the ban on whaling last March 1 after former interior secretary Walter Hickel put all whales—the world's biggest animals—on the endangered species list. Importation of whale meat and oil to the U.S. also was banned.

BLAMES POLITICS

Caito blames the ban on "sheer politics to pacify the conservation groups."

"All they were doing was putting one small industry out of business."

He talked in the warehouse of his Del Monte Fishing Co., the only U.S. whaling operation since 1967. There, whales are hoisted up a chute from the sea to be butchered and processed into pet food.

"No butchering operation is pretty," said Dennis Hunter, whose father, C. A. (Gib) Hunter, is contractor for the seagoing end of the operation.

"These ecologists should realize that whatever meat they eat —roast beef, chicken—had to be butchered somewhere and it wasn't pretty."

He and Caito agreed that some species should be protected, such as the humpback and blue whale which have been reduced to less than five per cent of their populations of 50 years ago.

"But there's no evidence those we hunt—sperm, finback and sei—are endangered," Caito said.

Dale Rice, a federal marine researcher, said the purpose of the government ban is to permit whales to replenish themselves "and presumably the government will allow hunting again after the herds have built themselves back up to the optimum levels."

He estimated this could take 50 to 100 years.

OTHERS HUNT

Del Monte's average yearly catch is about 150 whales. Caito said this "doesn't even make a dent" in the world's whaleherds, especially when Japan and the Soviet Union together take more than 20,000 whales a year.

The International Whaling Commission, which governs the industry worldwide, is allowing Russia and Japan to hunt whales beginning next spring in international waters off the coast of the state of Washington, Caito said.

Walter Kirkness, acting director of resource management for the Federal Bureau of Fisheries, said the U.S. can only exert "moral persuasion" on the IWC.

Caito is seeking government reimbursement for about 35 employees who will lose their jobs and for the company which has invested $1.5 million. His company and the Hunters have other fishing interests but for some of their employees the future is uncertain.

U.S. Aid for Soviet Trade Seen

WASHINGTON (Reuter) — Commerce Secretary Maurice Stans leaves today on a trade drive that could lead to U.S. industry pouring millions of dollars into Soviet enterprises.

Trade officials said U.S. firms are interested in investing in Soviet natural gas and copper deposits to bring them into full commercial use.

The gas, shipped in liquid form, would have a wide open market in the United States where projects have been curtailed because of a gas shortage.

Stans, the first member of President Nixon's cabinet to visit Moscow, and a party of 10 arrive in Moscow Saturday after having two days of trade talks in Stockholm. After a 10-day stay in various Soviet cities the party will go on to Poland for more trade discussions.

The mission could lead to Nixon signing a formal trade agreement when he visits Moscow in May.

WILL EXPLORE

Stans told a news conference in New York Tuesday that he would explore in Russia the possibility of U.S. capital being used to develop resources in a joint venture.

He said there was some possibility of extending export credit to Communist countries, and cited what he described as Russia's need to develop its resources and increase its supply of consumer goods.

U.S. trade with Russia last year amounted to $200 million. Stans goes to Russia with already in his pocket a $135 million deal announced 12 days ago to sell grain to the Soviet Union.

Robert Smalley, a commerce department official and a member of the Stans party, said today that the visit was mainly on an exploratory mission, to see what the Russians want to sell and their terms.

"Mr. Stans could bring back a bagful of possibilities," he said. This will be followed by a series of U.S. trade missions expected to go to Moscow during the next few months.

Nixon to Retain Foreign Trade Powers: Senate

WASHINGTON (CP) — A day after disclosure that the United States showed a $12.1 billion deficit in its third-quarter balance of payments, the U.S. Senate has voted to retain in pending legislation broad presidential powers limiting foreign trade in an emergency.

Some senators opposing such a broad delegation of authority to the president feared it would signal to the world that the U.S. is becoming more and more protectionist, and lead to a trade war.

The Senate defeated by a vote of 53 to 29 Tuesday an amendment that would have removed from the catch-all tax bill a proposal giving President Nixon authority to impose quotas on imports into the U.S. and extend the import surtax to 15 per cent from the present 10 per cent.

As now written in the legislation, the president would have the power to impose the quotas or the tax or even both — after declaring an emergency balance-of-payments situation exists. The U.S. now finds itself in such a situation with growing deficits in each of the three-month periods of 1971.

While Nixon didn't ask for such authority, the White House has said he didn't object to it but hoped he would not have to use it.

COULD LIMIT IMPORTS

It would give the president authority to restrict imports on a country-by-country or product-by-product basis after declaring a balance-of-payments emergency.

While the legislation still has a long way to go and could be altered drastically by other amendments, it comes up for passage at a time when the eyes of many congressmen are on the 1972 general election.

With many of the big cities suffering unemployment of six per cent or more, the politics of protectionism is alive and kicking at this early stage. And the state of the economy is certain to be a major election issue.

Last Saturday, the Senate defeated a move to exempt Canada, the best customer of the U.S., and Mexico from the 10-per-cent import surcharge President Nixon imposed last Aug. 15 on dutiable imports.

This affected $3 billion worth of Canadian exports a year and brought bitter reaction from the Canadian government and public, but no retaliation.

Treasury Secretary John Connally insisted again Tuesday in a White House meeting with congressional Republican leaders that the surcharge is only a short-term measure but made clear it will be replaced by tough trading conditions.

DISCUSS DEFENCE PACT

In Ottawa Tuesday, a trade department spokesman disclosed that the defence production-sharing agreement which gives Canada a substantial trade surplus with the U.S., is being renegotiated.

James Grandy, the department's deputy minister, is in charge of the Canadian negotiating team. The talks have been going on for about a week, the spokesman said.

He called the discussions "delicate" and said: "There's been very heavy traffic of senior officials between Ottawa and Washington and talks are continuing at a very high level."

The exact amount of the Canadian advantage under the agreement, signed in 1959, is not known publicly since military exchanges between Canada and the U.S. have been kept secret since 1967. At that time Canada enjoyed a $190 million trade surplus from the beginning of the pact.

Part of the Canadian advantage comes from the fact that there is no duty on Canadian defence exports to the U.S. while Canada taxes purchases of American military hardware.

A confidential U.S. memorandum leaked to the Chicago Tribune last month listed a number of conditions the U.S. wanted alleviated before it would lift the 10-per-cent surcharge from Canadian exports.

PLAN OIL TALKS

One of them was defence production-sharing. The memo said Canada would have to lift its duty on U.S. defence products, end its buy-Canadian preference and purchase an American replacement for its aging Argus anti-submarine aircraft.

U.S. officials also made it known in Ottawa that talks between Canada and the U.S. will begin in a few days on oil exports. The Nixon administration is working on the 1972 oil import quotas with Jan. 1 as the target date.

External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp said the Canadian government is glad to "start talking about these things again," referring to resumption of talks on energy matters.

Canada broke off wide-ranging talks on trade in energy resources that had began in 1969 after imposition of the surcharge.

Senator Henry Jackson of Washington, a potential candidate for the Democratic presidential nomination, called Tuesday for the development of a broad North American energy policy that would include a joint Canadian-American energy board.

But he told a San Francisco news conference that Nixon's Aug. 15 economic program includes a potential roadblock to such a joint effort with Canada.

"We're off to a bad start with a surcharge being placed on Canada without any warning," he said.

It may shock you but it's true.

If a pregnant woman is addicted to heroin her unborn baby will also be addicted to it. Withdrawal symptoms are frightening for a grown person. You can imagine what they are like for a baby only a few days old.

This is one of the many human tragedies of heroin addiction that doctors see in increasing numbers throughout British Columbia. Heroin enslaves its user at a cost that can run to over $10,000 a year. An overdose can cause coma or death. Withdrawal causes severe symptoms of nausea, cramps and diarrhea.

Possession carries a penalty of up to 7 years in prison, and trafficking, up to life.

If you're hooked on heroin and want to get off, see a doctor or the Narcotic Addiction Foundation of B.C., 2524 Cypress Street, Vancouver. If you're tempted to try the drug, don't. The misery you will suffer just isn't worth it.

Lit Cigarette 'Death Meter'

KINGSTON, Ont. (CP) — A burning cigarette was used to determine if prisoners beaten during a riot last April at Kingston penitentiary were still alive, the non-capital murder trial of 13 convicts was told Tuesday.

A 24-year-old witness, who still is in prison, said James Oag, 23, of London, Ont., one of the accused, placed a glowing cigarette end against the faces of four or five convicts who had just been beaten.

When Oag burned Brian Ensor, 26, he got no response, the witness said. Oag's brother Donald, 20, another of the accused, then cut open Ensor's pant leg, and in doing so, slashed the victim's leg.

The 13 are charged with the murder of Ensor and Bertrand Robert, 34.

Ensor's body was found by prison officials in a cell block after the four-day riot ended. Robert died in hospital a month later.

WITNESS IS SIXTH

The witness, serving a four-year sentence for a 1970 conviction for robbery with violence, was the sixth convict to be called to give evidence. Mr. Justice William Henderson has instructed that names of prisoners or former prisoners who give evidence not be made public during the trial.

Witnesses have testified that the two dead men, along with other so-called undesirables, were tied in a circle of chairs and beaten by other convicts.

During the beatings, Tuesday's witness said, Robert Robidoux, 18, of Toronto, another accused, carried a fire extinguisher around the circle and pumped some of its contents into the mouths of three or four prisoners.

James Oag and Robidoux were identified by the witness along with five other convicts as the men who dragged the beaten victims from their cells and tied them to the chairs.

TELLS OF BEATINGS

He said the other five, all among the 13 accused, were William Shepley, 24, Windsor, Ont.; Harold St. Amour, 39, Pembroke, Ont.; Edward Fowler, 18, Toronto; Wayne McGurgin, 23, Toronto; and Glenn Morris, 24, Staunton, Va.

The witness testified that a total of about 15 prisoners were beaten with iron bars while tied to chairs.

In addition, he said, Robidoux and another convict whom he could not identify pushed over the chairs of some victims so that they fell face down on the floor.

Fowler, he said, struck some victims on the nose with an iron bar and McGurgin struck them on the legs and knees.

James Oag, he said, administered judo chops to the noses of five or six men.

The witness said St. Amour beat one inmate on the shoulder with a wooden pick-handle but that was the only man he struck.

Previous witnesses credited St. Amour with intervening to have at least two prisoners spared from the beatings.

CALLS IT 'NIGHTMARE'

Tuesday morning, another witness, 25, told lawyers questioning him after testimony that the beatings were "a nightmare" and a "chamber of horrows."

The witness, who was paroled last August, admitting participating in the wrecking of prison chapels during the riot, but said: "I'm sorry now."

He also admitted giving a "thumbs-down signal" to those assaulting prisoners, meaning a certain convict should be beaten.

"I didn't mind seeing them get punched a few times," he said. "It was a lot different at first than it was at the end.

When asked by a defence lawyer if he believed wrecking the chapels was less serious than the beatings, the witness said: "Yes, it is a lot less. Those are human beings, aren't they?"

Besides the eight identified by the witness, the others charged with non-capital murder are: Brian Beaucage, 23, London, Ont.; Brian Dodge, 27, Petrolia, Ont.; Ernest Bugler, 24, St. Thomas, Ont.; David Birt, 24, Charlottetown; and Edward Johnston, 22, Clarkson, Ont.

HANDLESS, NOT HELPLESS — that's the motto of 20-year-old Michael McKern of Eugene, Ore., who lost both his hands in a fire four years ago. Despite this, Michael has learned to hunt, fish, drag race and operate the controls of a plane.

IN GALLOWS' SHADOW

LONDON (AP) — For the first time since Parliament abolished capital punishment in 1965, a convicted murderer is under sentence of death in Britain.

But John A. Welch, a 21-yearold Englishman sentenced Monday on the island of Jersey, may still escape the noose. Home Secretary Reginald Maudling will decide whether the sentence is carried out, and in the past he has resisted all pressure to bring back hanging as a deterrent to murder.

Two parts of the United Kingdom with limited home rule retained the death penalty when it was outlawed for the rest of Britain.

They are Northern Ireland, where murder of a policeman or seditious conspiracy is punishable by death, and Jersey, the small island in English Channel, where any murder is punishable by hanging. Elsewhere in Britain life imprisonment is the maximum sentence.

Welch was convicted for murdering Marilyn Dray, a 17-year-old girl he met in a pub, took for a walk along the seafront, kissed and then strangled when she resisted his attempts at sexual intercourse.

Bailiff Robert LeMesurier told him he was imposing the only sentence available under the island's law, and "your future is now in the hands of the Queen." The Queen will commute the sentence if Maudling recommends clemency.

Jersey had its last hanging in 1959, and that one was the island's first execution in 52 years. The last hanging in Northern Ireland was in 1961. Despite the Roman Catholic-Protestant warfare of the last two years, no prisoners are in jail there now under sentence of death.

Syria: Year Without Coups

DAMASCUS (AP) — Syria's dour head of state, Lt.-Gen. Hafez Assad, does not spellbind the crowds the way other Arab leaders do, but he is proving to be an effective president. This week he has been in power a year.

With a policy based on national interests rather than the narrow, ideological concerns of the ruling Baath Socialist party, he has brought Syria back into the mainstream of Arab politics after years of isolation.

At home, Assad has restored a measure of political activity and returned a small amount of economic freedom to importers and dealers.

Assad's moves to redesign Syria's political landscape came as a welcome surprise to the populace, grown apathetic after dozens of coups in 20 years.

"He has turned the country away from the negativism and xenophobia of previous regimes," said one diplomatic source.

Teachers Seek Aid to End Dismissals by Transfer

The B.C. Teachers' Federation has asked Education Minister Brothers to prevent school boards from using teacher transfers as a "back door" route for dismissing teachers.

In a brief presented to the minister Tuesday, the federation asks for the right of appeal to a review panel or for an independent review by the minister or his deputy for teachers objecting to transfers.

The request was one of several amendments sought by the federation to a proposed new system of teacher tenure recommended earlier this year by a legislative committee.

Brothers is expected to introduce legislation at the next session instituting a system similar to the committee's recommendations.

FORCE RESIGNATIONS

The brief says that if dismissal of a teacher may be appealed but transfer cannot, a board occasionally may seek to force a resignation through transfer.

"This back door escape from the exercise of responsibility must be sealed," the brief states.

Other changes sought by the teachers include the exclusion of all active or retired department of education officials from review panels set up to hear appeals from teachers who have been dismissed.

The federation also suggested elimination of the committee's proposal for one member of the three-member review panels to be appointed by the minister. The third member should be appointed by the BCTF or the B.C. School Trustees Association or by the minister from a list of persons named by the two organizations, it said.

Members of review panels should be paid for their work to emphasize their independence from their organizations, the brief says.

A teacher whose tenure has been dealt with by a review panel should have a right to a copy of the report of that panel, the federation said.

The legislative committee recommended a system for dismissing teachers whose efficiency has been challenged by at least three reports including one by the district superintendent of schools and one by the superintendent of another district.

The teachers' brief proposes that one of the resports should be made by a team of highly respected members of the teaching profession.

Adam Robertson, president of the federation, said Brothers told the BCTF delegation that the teachers wouldn't be "too unhappy" about the final tenure proposals to be revealed later.

Multiple Listing Real Estate Sales Reported Up 53 Per Cent

In dollar terms sales rose 47 per cent from a year ago, while average selling price per unit dropped $823 from $23,613 to $22,790.

Average price considers only property sales made through the multiple listing service, which could be weighted by a few extraordinarily high-priced sales, or a large number of lower-priced units.

The board said October sales were 181 units worth a total $4.12 million, compared with 118 sales valued at $2.78 million a year earlier.

October sales also were better than September, which had 165 multiple listing sales worth just over $4 million.

The ratio of sales to October listings at 43.2 per cent was up substantially from the 30.7 per cent sales of listed properties a year ago.

So far this year there have been 2,036 multiple listing sales in Victoria compared with 1,658 in the 10 months last year.

They have been worth a cumulative $47.7 million compared with $36.7 million in 1970.

Total listings were 5,415, up slightly from 5,336 in the January-October period of 1970.

2,000 Mining Jobs

OTTAWA (CP) — The Canadian mining industry, especially in Northern Ontario, Alberta and the interior of British Columbia, will hire more than 2,000 workers before the end of this year, Manpower Minister Otto Lang said Tuesday.

However, Lang cautioned workers against going to these areas before obtaining detailed information on job openings and living conditions.

He said his department is ready to assist workers wishing to move to areas where such jobs may be obtained or attempting to develop mining skills to improve their chances for employment.

He urged interested workers to apply to the nearest Canada Manpower Centre for more information.

J. P. JOHNSON — BUSINESSMAN

All during the football season J. P. has been collecting and trading his Chevron Touchdown cards. Dad has been buying lots of Chevron gasoline with F-310* and entering the Qantas round-the-world contest many times. J. P. too, is happy, as he gets more trader cards.

The family won a Panasonic transistor radio, one of 13 daily prizes being given, by sending their entry blanks to CKWX/CJVI. That did it.

Now the whole Johnson family wants to win the Qantas round-the-world trip.

But it was J. P., the businessman of the family, who was the first to see the real values being offered. He bought both a football and a Quarterback Strategy Game with his allowance money. Go to a Standard Station or participating Chevron Dealer today. And watch for the old trader . . . J. P.

British Catholic Chief Has Flair for Unexpected

LONDON (CP) — John Cardinal Heenan, spiritual leader of Britain's six million Roman Catholics, recently startled the synod of bishops in Rome by suggesting the Vatican sell off some of its treasures to help the world's poor.

In fact Cardinal Heenan, though regarded by many progressive-minded British Catholics as a staunch traditionalist, has often proved a controversial figure in his rise to the See of Westminster. Some examples of his flair for the unexpected can be found in the first volume of his autobiography, Not The Whole Truth, published here by Hodder and Stoughton.

The cardinal, who explains his book's title by reminding readers of the discretion imposed on any priest, took the exceptional step, soon after his ordination, of visiting the Soviet Union in disguise to see for himself what conditions were like under Marxism.

This was in 1936, at the height of Stalin's reign of terror, yet Cardinal Heenan noted with an open mind that for the dedicated Communist, belief was more religious than political in its intensity and that criticism of Stalin to such a man affected him much as criticism of the Pope would an equally dedicated Catholic.

FELT NOSTALGIA

Although the young priest experienced the chilling grip of Stalin's secret police—hauled in for photographing an old beggar woman in rags—he nevertheless records feeling "a certain nostalgia" for Soviet life when he returned to the blaring commercialism of the West.

Cardinal Heenan, now a benevolent-featured 66, enjoyed a secure and happy childhood as the son of an Irish civil servant in Ilford, in Edwardian times an Essex rural town but now part of the faceless sprawl of suburban London. He made up his mind to be a priest at the age of 12, though there was a time in his late teens when he was strongly drawn to marriage instead.

He records frankly his clashes with authority in the shape of bishops, but the book gives little insight into the spiritual making of a priest, such as emerged vividly from the writings of the late Thomas Merton and Pope John's Journal of a Soul.

But as one reviewer observed, for a cardinal to write an autobiography is in itself a curiosity—in the past, he noted, literary-minded princes of the Catholic church have turned their pens to fiction rather than their own lives.

'MAJOR EVENT'

Describing Cardinal Heenan as "one of Britain's outstanding spiritual leaders . . . heeded and respected far outside the ranks of his own communion," Tory MP Norm John-Stevas, a leading Catholic intellectual, says an autobiography from such a man is "a major event."

The present volume takes the Heenan story up to his consecration as Bishop of Leeds in 1951, giving a modest account of the notable part he played as a parish priest in wartime blitz-battered east London. St. John-Stevas says in the suburb of Manor Park the priest's heroism "became a legend in his own time."

If there is a sequel, it may cast some fresh light on the turmoil within the Catholic church in the last decade, perhaps illuminating Cardinal Heenan's thinking behind the generally conservative pronouncements he has made on the great issues like contraception which have split the spiritual subjects of Pope Paul VI.

STEPS FOR HEALTH — 88-YEAR-OLD RETIRED DENTIST DR. JEROME G. HESS gave up his dentistry practice after 42 years because of his declining health in 1952.

Nine years later he started taking dancing lessons to get some regular exercise and ward off the aging process. It evidently worked. Last year Hess won a national fox-trot and tango title in Miami, Fla., and now—at the age of 88—is training hard to defend his title in April. "I'll be ready," promised the retired dentist, who has been going to Fred Astaire Studios twice a week for lessons since 1965.

Aerial Pollution Examined

LONDON (CP) — Britain has been sending an aircraft, known as the "flying vacuum cleaner," over the North Sea to suck up large volumes of air in a pioneering scheme to establish patterns of high-level pollution.

The regular flights by the Hastings aircraft from the Royal Aircraft Establishment at Farnborough are expected to pave the way to international co-operation on a large scale, with sampling aircraft from most European countries taking part.

The pollutant the plane is seeking is sulphur dioxide. The possible culprits here are factories and coal- and oil-fired power stations where the policy is to build tall smokestacks so that sulphur dioxide is discharged high in the air to achieve a good mix with clean air, well above neighboring houses.

It is technically possible to remove sulphur dioxide from the waste gases, but the cost of recovery far outweighs any incoming revenue from selling the sulphur. Dispersion has therefore taken precedence over removal.

WINDS REACH SWEDEN

From meteorological evidence, it is known that the winds which fan Britain tend to reach Sweden at a later date. Is the air reaching Sweden fresh and clean, or is it laden with unwelcome sulphur dioxide, sulphuric acid and other oxidation products, which are later brought down in acidic rain?

The object of the experiments with the Hastings aircraft is to discover the answer, by basing conclusions on firm scientific evidence. If Britain is guilty, the government needs to know, so that suitable action can be taken. If the sulphur dioxide travels only a little way before deposition, this also must come to light.

Preliminary evidence gathered on the early Hastings flights indicates that the proportion of sulphur dioxide from Britain that finally reaches Sweden is not large—contrary to popular opinion. However, the problem will not be fully resolved for some time to come.

The air sampling experiments are being carried out by the Warren Spring laboratory of the department of trade and industry, the British government's official watchdog laboratory on pollution.

SUCKS IN AIR

The Hastings has been adapted to include a tube which protrudes from a drain at the front of the aircraft. A pump is used to suck air through this pipe. A household gas meter, which has been slightly modified, records the volume of the air intake.

The air drawn in is bubbled through a solution which takes up more than 95 per cent of the sulphur compounds in the air being bubbled through it.

The aircraft cruises at a particular level over a chosen area of the North Sea, sampling the air. Back at Warren Spring, the solution has to be analysed to reveal the amount of sulphur and its compounds that has been captured on the flight.

The flights are breaking new ground in scientific history, and progress is being watched by other countries in Europe.

An international investigation of sulphur dioxide pollution is being planned among Britain, members of the Organization for Economic Co-operation and Development, and other countries in Europe. The OECD, apart from its main trade function, has a relatively small branch which deals with air pollution problems.

TAKES LEADERSHIP

It is taking the leadership in planning the sulphur dioxide aerial survey right across Europe to establish exactly what is happening to all the acidic and corrosive sulphur dioxide belched out by the chimneys of a multitude of countries. Are the more industrial countries guilty of wafting their pollution across those with less industry? And if so, how severe is this excess pollution? Until the fate of this pollutant has been studied across international boundaries, authorities say there can be no hope of international agreements on sulphur dioxide emission and control.

Britain's ground work using the Hastings aircraft to collect air samples could provide the outline methods for the large-scale international survey. Current results from Warren Spring are forwarded to the OECD body in Paris.

"We keep very closely in touch with them," a spokesman for Warren Spring said.

Three Priests View Celibacy family

WENDY DEY - EDITOR

Son Andrew helps Father Ivan Makuch

The man who feels called by God to the Catholic Church is faced with a difficult choice — the celibate priesthood or a wife and family.

Recently, there has been much controversy among priests regarding the vow of celibacy. Many priests feel they should be allowed to marry.

However, the third World Synod of Catholic Bishops voted earlier this month in Rome to uphold the church's current ban on ordaining married men into the priesthood.

The Rev. Father Ivan Makuch believes marriage does not interfere with the performance of priestly duties.

Ukrainian Rite

He is married with children. The Ukrainian Catholic rite, to which he belongs, has always allowed married men into the priesthood.

The married priest may even have some advantages over a single one, according to Father Makuch.

Like when it comes to marriage and family counselling. Personal experience will give the married priest insight into domestic problems, while the unmarried priest must rely on magazine articles for his understanding, he said.

What with raising three sons — Steven 19, Nestor 18, and Andrew 15, Father Makuch thinks he knows what other parents face raising children. Things like long hair don't worry him, he said.

More Willing

"He may ask a friend over for an hour or two, but it's not the same as having someone close to always turn to. A priest must be at home to receive calls and visits from his parishioners. When he has a family with him, he wants to stay home. But for a single man, it's hard to sit all alone within four walls."

The priest with a family is more willing to put down roots in one place and commit himself to community work, Father Makuch said.

He pointed out that it was not until the 17th century that the Vatican made the vow of celibacy a pre-requisite for those wishing to be ordained.

12 Disciples

"Of the 12 disciples, only St. John was not married. If Christ had not wanted married men in the Church, he wouldn't have chosen them for his disciples.

"A family does not distract a priest from his work, but is part of it. We are bringing up our children for God. The whole family works together for the church."

His wife, Kathleen, works with the women of the St. Nicholas Ukrainian Catholic parish, while his sons assist in serving Mass and participate in the youth activities.

Lack of economic security makes it difficult for a married priest to manage, he said.

"The priest lives on what his parishioners give him. The bigger the parish, the better off he is."

Not Enough

Father Makuch said the $245 he gets a month is not enough to support a family. To supplement the income, Mrs. Makuch works full-time as a nurse's aid.

Another priest discarded his clerical collar after 20 years of daily wear because he could no longer accept the teachings of the Church. Although he said that he had no particular quibble with the celibacy vow, he was married within a year of his departure.

He said the seminary prepared the priests-to-be for a life without women.

"The first year in particular was highly structured. We were kept busy from early morning to late night with studies, prayers, devotions and fasting. This didn't leave any time for mind wandering.

"The seminary routine set the pattern for life in the parish. You'd step on the wheel first thing in he morning and hop off at night.

"I didn't think about my own mind or desires. It was always the Church knows what's best. If one accepts the idea of sacrifice for Christ, that also becomes a strong motivating force.

Never Looked

"There were times, however, when I felt the need for the warm, wonderful quality that many women possess. But I never looked at a woman and thought 'well, I'd like to marry her'.

"The single life is not as hard on the priest who belongs to an order. At least he has the company of other clergy like himself. The priest who lives alone will find himself set apart from the rest of the community. That kind of life can be pretty destructive."

This priest's marriage lasted three months. He summed up the reason for the breakdown with one word — "naivete."

After counselling people on marital problems for years, he found himself experiencing their difficulties for the first time in his life. Giving others the "right" advice was much easier than trying to follow it, he concluded.

Active Priests

"Priests who are active in the community think they are really involved with people," he said. "You find out what real involvement is all about when you live with someone in daily confrontation."

He said that although the Vatican should reverse its stand on celibacy, the priest who has lived the bachelor life for a time would make a poor marriage partner.

"A man who has lived alone or with other males for a long period of time becomes set in his ways. Priests are also in the habit of being right. It's pretty hard living with someone like that."

Although marriage is not the main reason for priests leaving the church, many marry soon after giving up the ministry, said Monsignor Michael O'Connell of St. Andrew's Cathedral.

"By taking the vow of celibacy, a priest chooses certain priorities in his life," he said. "He dedicates his life to God and to serving people without any thought of personal reward. The absence of family responsibilities gives a priest the freedom to move around and devote all his attention to serving others.

Values Affected

"The cultural revolution has affected the values of the clergy as well," he said. "The traditional approach to the Church was that Christ came to establish an institution, the Church. A hierarchy of clergy was to maintain this institution and lead people to God.

"The modern approach defines Christianity as a movement. The emphasis is on personal development in love and understanding as the means of reaching God. In our society, a happy marriage and sexual life is related to a person's development.

Many Agree

"Many priests feel that marriage should be open to them also."

Monsignor O'Connell said the Catholic Church has been criticized as being overly preoccupied with sexual morality without showing enough concern for such immorality as war, poverty and injustice.

Some priests feel they can serve Christ better by becoming involved in issues such as the anti-war movement rather than being a celibate, he said.

O'Connell said he foresees that married men will eventually be allowed into the priesthood. The number of priests available will determine when this will happen.

CONVICTIONS NOT ANSWER

EDMONTON (CP) — Most drug offenders are like alcoholics, they're seeking affection and love, says Pierre Mousseau, Edmonton's chief narcotics prosecutor.

He said he had not met one person accused of a drug offence whom he disliked and said most had family problems.

It was difficult emotionally for him to prosecute many of the young and often bright narcotics offenders.

"There's no satisfaction in getting a conviction," said Mr. Mousseau, 35, who has prosecuted an estimated 1,400 cases during the last four years.

"Alberta has been a leader in reconciling the need for deterrence of offenders with the need for rehabilitation. The category that goes to jail is usually involved in trafficking.

"For the most part, I would think if they had anything going for them, if they were working or going to school, they got day parole. They didn't lose that facet of their lives."

Mr. Mousseau said he doesn't know whether there ought to be a change in Canada's drug laws and suggested that Parliament is in the same position.

Because of the uncertainties about whether the penal system is best, every time somebody went to jail "you wonder if some other avenue might have been open to deal with him."

This Woman Helps Young Offenders

WINNIPEG (CP)—Huddled in the corner of the cruiser car, a young offender waits for one of the police officers to speak. He knows glue sniffing is against the law, but everyone else is doing it. Why should he be odd man out?

Some fears are dispelled when the woman officer turns to him, places her hand gently on his and says: "No need to tremble, we're here to help, not hurt you."

At juvenile division in the police station, the lad is asked some questions, his parents are notified. He is hungry and is given a sandwich by the policewoman who has not left his side.

She talks, jokes and questions. But he knows she means business when she says certain things must change. He is agreeable when told he will have to attend weekly guidance classes as a first offender.

Some Unfortunate

Not every juvenile is fortunate enough to come to terms with a drug habit in this manner, but there are enough to make a policewoman's job worthwhile.

Since the First World War, Winnipeg police save employed women as constables in the morality and juvenile branches. From 1941 to 1956, there was only one. In 1956 the number increased to four and now it stands at eight.

Qualifications for the job are not precise, says acting chief Jack Webster.

"At one time a policewoman had to be at least 25 years old, then we lowered the age to 21 and now there is no age limitation."

The eight women, who range in age from 23 to 60, have undergone the same basic 14-week recruit training as the men. Within the year, they are often up for promotion. When they reach the rank of first constable, they are earning $10,000 a year, the same wage as the men.

Cruiser Patrol

At any given time, a policewoman can be found on cruiser car patrol; conducting investigations in juvenile cases; working with the narcotics squad; or trying to track down an illicit gambling operation.

They wear no official police uniform, although the acting chief said he would like to see them wear one on a regular basis to "identify them to the public."

Lucienne Gelinas, a 12-year veteran of the force, explained why she preferred to be without the uniform.

"Most of the people I deal with know me without a uniform. As far as juveniles go, it would act as a barrier. We don't want them to think of us in terms of a uniform, but rather as concerned people who are trying to help."

However, "we are not social workers although we do some counselling. More often than not we will refer them to the proper agency."

In the juvenile branch, the police officer's work generally takes the form of preventive programs or the investigation of offences.

Women's Sleepwear Unsafe, Expert Says

NEW YORK (UPI) — Women's nightgowns need redesigning if they're to keep the wearers from being involved in a maiming or fatal accident from fire, says the former chairman of the U.S. National Fire Protection Association.

Prof. James M. Church, of Columbia University, said in an interview that donned or doffed over the head as they are, nightgowns, when catching fire have a capability of turning the wearer into a torch.

Church, internationally known as an authority of textiles and developer of flame retardant clothing for GIs during the Second World War, would like to see all nightgowns button down the front, like a man's pajama coat. That way, he figures, in the event it catches fire, the woman could get out of it quickly enough to escape serious injury.

More Women

The professor said he believes the design of women's nightgowns has something to do with the fact that more women than men are involved in burn-related injuries involving flammable fabrics.

He said approximately 4,000 deaths and 175,000 injuries of that nature occur annually. Sixty per cent of the victims are under the age of 12. Thirty per cent are women, 10 per cent, men.

With Herman B. Glaser, chairman of the American Trial Lawyers Association (ATLA), Church participated in a flammability demonstration in New York the other day. A child's 100 per cent cotton nightgown made of the material the ordinary woman's nightgown is made of — was set afire by a match from a matchbook. It was reduced to ash in less than a minute. Church said it "burned with three times the intensity of heat produced by burning paper."

Better Laws

A set of child's pajamas, treated to retard flames, was just scorched when a butane blow torch was aimed at it. It was scorched where the flame touched the fabric.

The ATLA demonstration was to call attention to the need for better legislation on flame-retardant nightwear.

"All nightwear sold in the United States should be made of flame resistant fabric," Church said.

Present regulations of the 1954 Flammability Fabrics Act and more stringent regulations scheduled to become effective in July, 1972, don't go far enough, according to Herman B. Glaser, chairman of the ATLA personal injury (TORT) section.

The more stringent regulations will require a flame-proofing of nightwear for children up to the age of five, stopping at size six X.

Campaign Set

The ATLA is launching a campaign to require flame-proofing of all nightwear. Church said it wouldn't add more than 20 to 50 cents to the price of a garment to make it of flame retardant fabric. In many instances the treatment could be combined with permanent press and wash and wear treatments.

"England," Church said, "is far ahead of America when it comes to safe sleepwear. For the last several years England has required that fabrics for sleepwear must be flameproofed. That includes ticking on mattresses, sheets, blankets, pillow cases."

Church would like to see more than nightwear flame-proofed, especially for women and children.

Tale of the North

Have you ever experienced a white out? Indeed, do you know what a white out is?

Gwen Lundie, recently returned from a two-year stint with the Northwest Territories department of welfare and now back with Family and Children's Service youth division here, can tell you about such things.

She explains: "You're driving in a world of snow. All of a sudden the whole scene has a quality of fog. The road seems to disappear. Everything is white. You float in this atmosphere of unreality. Mesmerized. It's terribly dangerous."

That's why people up there must wear yellow tinted glasses. It's also one big reason why it's mandatory for all who drive for the territorial government to take a survival course.

First six months in the territories Mrs. Lundie was the only welfare supervisor in all of its 270 thousand square miles.

"Consequently I got around a bit," she says. "I went all over the Yukon, up into the Arctic . . . to Dawson City, Old Crow, Inuvik, Mayo, Cassiar . . . it was a terrific experience.'"

Eventually two more supervisors were named and her work was then centred around Whitehorse.

'Young Country'

It's a "young, young country" up there with "perhaps 75 per cent of the population under 40." There are no Eskimos.

Because a treaty was never made with them, the 3,000 or more registered Indians do not live on reserves. They live in their own villages.

Many of them do not like welfare but it is difficult for them to get away from it, mainly because of the children.

"Before civilization caught up with them they were nomads and moved their families from place to place as they hunted and fished," Mrs. Lundie explains. "They kept those families small. There was rarely more than three children."

They are still hunting and fishing. "But today, with hospitals for maternity care, schools for their children and permanent houses in their villages, it's common to find nine or 10 children in a family."

Mrs. Lundie speaks enthusiastically of a new YWCA building opened in Whitehorse this month. It's outstanding in her opinion because of a unit system for boarders.

The units, arranged around a handsome central block, are built to accommodate six girls in attractive single rooms with shared kitchen and bathroom facilities.

Lonely Girls

"This creates an atmosphere of companionship that appeals especially to lonely Indian girls who must come into the city to work or to study."

As the population of Whitehorse is less than 20,000; there is no YMCA. So the new "YW" is organized to house a certain number of young men as well as girls.

Women in the territories take more than a fair share of volunteer and public service work, Mrs. Lundie says. They also held elected and appointed offices.

There's a woman in charge of education in the new territorial government. "Her position is equivalent to our minister of education." there is also a woman Justice of the Peace in Whitehorse. "She acts as a judge in magistrate's court and also sits in juvenile court."

"It's a stark country," Gwen concedes. "It can go from 90 above to 76 below in a matter of hours and if a wind is blowing it can hit 100 below."

At the same time she insists it is a "Wonderful country" where you have thousands of miles to wander as you wish, alone or with friends. "You can skidoo, hike, hunt, fish, drive or canoe on the beautiful Yukon River."

As for the people "they are the friendliest in the world!"

She drove home over the Alaska Highway by herself. "The road was in good condition. Only casualty was my windshield. It was pretty well stone-pocked . . . up there they call such marks, Yukon stars."

BUDAPEST, Hungary (AP) — With the waters of the Danube at their lowest level in 24 years, the Budapest city council ordered major industries Monday to cut their water consumption by 25 per cent.

Natural Means Healthy

Instead of counting on a trip to the beauty salon to have everything put together, women adopting the natural look will have to do it on their own. For best results they will have to reorganize their time and health habits.

Expert Cut

The accent is on simple, shiny hair and sparkling eyes. An expert cut that needs no setting is the first step. This must be followed by a regime of daily shampoos and brushing.

Stringy, oily looking hair can ruin the effect of the most expensive cut.

There is also no point in using liner or one of the new fluorescent eye shadows if they have to compete with dark circles and bloodshot eyes.

Smart girls will follow the example of fashion models and make sure they get eight hours sleep a night for that clear-eyed look.

Many Sins

Heavy makeup can hide a multitude of sins in a minimum of time. The natural look allows no such shortcuts. It means relying on good health habits instead of a make-up box.

A clear skin is one of the first necessities. Girls with less-than-perfect skin should plan on scrubbing with warm soapy water at least three times a day — even if this means carrying soap and towel to office or school.

Today's 'natural look' can often be costly and time-consuming

Letter 'Infuriates' Martha

WASHINGTON (CP) — Martha Mitchell, outspoken wife of the U.S. Attorney-General, said this week she was infuriated by a Scottish earl's criticism of her for not curtsying to the queen.

Mrs. Mitchell said she had received what she called a terribly disagreeable letter from the Earl of Lindsay, a 70-year-old Scottish nobleman, denouncing her for her failure to curtsy to the queen at a Buckingham Palance garden party.

"It just infuriated me," Mrs. Mitchell told a reporter, referring to te earl's letter.

Mrs. Mitchell, who said she had always wanted to meet a queen, and especially the Queen of England, said she did not curtsy because custom did not require it of someone who was not a British subject.

The controversy followed an article in an American magazine which appeared under Mrs. Mitchell's name after she accompanied her husband, Attorney-General John Mitchell, to England earlier this year to attend meetings of the American Bar Association.

In the article, Mrs. Mitchell explained her decision not to curtsy like this: "A curtsy is optional for Americans. Each woman has to decide for herself whether she will or won't . . . "I did not, because I feel that an American citizen should not bow to foreign monarchs."

The Earl of Lindsay, a member of the Queen's bodyguard, called Mrs. Mitchell a stupid woman and told reporters in Britain:

"It was a very insulting remark to make and I felt she had to be put in her place."

The letter said, in part, ". . . I would suggest that you refrain from visiting Buckingham Palace or any similar establishments in the future, but remain at home in Keokuk, or Kalamazoo, Mich., or wherever it was that you originated."

'Stop Discrimination With Legislation'

VANCOUVER (CP) — Legislation ensuring that women achieve equal opportunities for jobs will have to be adopted to end sexual discrimination, Barbara Castle, former British Labor cabinet minister, said here this week.

Mrs. Castle said in an interview that she was working on such legislation just before the Labor Party was defeated in the last British general election.

Women have a "tremendous" psychological barrier to overcome when seeking jobs with higher responsibilities, she said.

To help them defeat this barrier, specific legislation is needed ensuring that there is no discrimination against women.

Such legislation would bring about a change in attitude by the whole of society.

Mrs. Castle, married to a Fleet Street newspaper editor, said it is a question of providing all people in society with an opportunity to do what they want to do.

"There are plenty of women who don't want to go out of the home," she said. Many others were "deadly bored living a life by the kitchen sink."

British unions were beginning to recognize that women should receive equal opportunity for all jobs although the male rank and file was reluctant to move.

She said companies would practise discrimination unless there were specific laws covering areas of employment for both men and women.

The two arguments against women working, she said, are from those claiming there are not enough jobs now and from those who say women cannot do all jobs because they are not as physically strong as men.

The same argument had been used against legislation outlawing racial discrimination, and it made as little sense there as it makes with laws outlawing sexual discrimination. Before the last election, Mrs. Castle was Secretary of State for employment and productivity and introduced the equal pay act which requires employers to pay all workers the same wages for the same type of work.

Mrs. Castle is in Vancouver to deliver two lectures at the University of British Columbia.

Bizarre Request Turned Down

DEAR ABBY: I am interested in the letter from the bachelor who refused the request of his best friend and the friend's wife who asked him to attempt to impregnate her. It seems to me that the bachelor was inordinately selfish, as is true of most bachelors.

Should the bachelor have agreed, the attempt might have resulted in a conception and birth, making at least three people happy, the husband, the wife and the offspring. Respectfully — A Louiseville M.D.

DEAR M.D.: Surely you jest! The possibilities of multiple regrets in such a bizarre arrangement are endless. Man is not like the May fly, whose only purpose in life is to propagate, and having performed that function once, he drops dead.

DEAR ABBY: I know you don't use names or locations, so I'll be perfectly candid. I am in my late 30s and divorced. No children. I am very well off financially because of my divorce settlement. My husband wanted the divorce, not I. (Another woman.) I loved and trusted him and was disillusioned and hurt when he told me.

A few months ago I renewed my acquaintance with a handsome, charming gentleman. Gary (not his real name) is intelligent, sensitive, kind and warm. He is talented and self-supporting, and I love being with him. We've talked of marriage and I am considering it.

Now the problem: Gary is a homosexual, which I knew all along. He is satisfying in every way, and I am not jealous of his male friends. I was so deeply hurt by my husband, I never want that kind of love again. Give me your honest opinion of marriage between Gary and me. — Considering It.

DEAR CONSIDERING: I have often said, "All that is necessary for a marriage to succeed is that the two people really need each other."

Be sure you and Gary "need" each other for reasons that will endure. It is possible that you were so deeply hurt by a husband who replaced you with another woman that you'd feel more secure in a marriage which is not likely to the threatened by another woman. Enjoy Gary's company for the time being, but pany for tse time being, but don't marry him unless you are sure of your own motivations.

DEAR ABBY: I can sympathize with "Cries a lot." I'm emotional too, and had the same problem. I went to my obstetrician-gynecologist and he gave me a gigantic dose of estrogen, which really put me back on my feet in one visit.

I'm still very emotional, however. Beautiful music really gets to me. And when I see others cry, I join them.

I have a remedy which often helps. I pull out my keys and run my fingers along the grooves and try to memorize the dips and rises. It seems to take the edge off my emotionalism. One I didn't have a key, so I counted the holes in the insulation. That worked to.

I used to love to cry. I went to see Mrs. Miniver and cried all the way through it. — Mary In Fullerton

What's your problem? You'll feel better if you get it off your chest. Write to ABBY, Box 69700, Los Angeles, Calif. 90069. For a personal reply enclose stamped, addressed envelope.

Free Day Care for Poor Proposed

WASHINGTONG (WP) — A Senate-House conference committee recently reached a tentative compromise agreement on providing day care services for children.

The compromise agreement calls for free day care for all children from families of four with less than $4,320 annual income. Children from families with between $4,320 and $6,960 will be partially subsidized.

For example, a family with $6,600 dollars income would pay only $228 a year for day care services worth about $2,000.

The tentative agreement on the child development act is subject to revision this week. The Nixon administration, already on record in opposition to an earlier compromise, has not indicated its position on the new proposal.

Both the Senate and House passed legislation which would for the first time provide federally subsidized quality day care services to millions of children from both low-income and middle-income families. The legislation, which is part of the Anti-poverty Bill, calls for day care to include education, nutrition and health care components.

The Senate-passed bill provided free day care for families with less than $6,900 annual income, and partially subsidized day care for families with higher incomes. The House-passed bill cut off free day care at $4,320 income and provided subsidized care above that amount.

The Nixon administration has insisted that free day care be provided only for families with less than $4,320 income, and that services be given primarily to welfare mothers who would be put to work.

The compromise version decided on represents an effort of the conference committee to avoid a threatened presidential veto of a more expensive day care package.

However, a number of conservative organizations oppose the legislation on grounds that the government would have too much influence on a child's early development.

The conferees will meet again in an effort to work out differences on another aspect of the Anti-Poverty Bill which would create a legal services corporation.

Estate Auctioned

TORONTO (CP) — Antique dealers from Canada, the United States and Britain are gathering in Toronto this week for an eight-day auction of furnishings from Eaton Hall, the sumptuous estate of the late Sir John Craig Eaton.

The $1.5-million estate, in King Township north of Toronto, now is the property of Senaca College, which plans to use the property for its King City campus early next year.

Sir John commissioned construction of the Norman-style chateau shortly before his death in 1922 and it was built during the 1930s. His wife, Lady Eaton, resided there until her death in July, 1970, at the age of 91.

'I'm Quitting Because the Kitchen Is on Fire'

HORN
. . . 'public doesn't care'

By DONNA CLEMENTS
Times Staff

MAPLE BAY — Kurt Horn's resignation from SPEC Tuesday has so far been met with the same "apathy and indifference" that caused him to quit after two years of fighting pollution.

Horn, who has been president of the Cowichan-Malahat SPEC group since its inception two years ago and provincial vice-president for the past year, said this morning there has been no reaction to his announcement.

"Maybe everyone is just indifferent," he said. "Or maybe it is a little too early to get a reaction. I hope that I can sneak through without any big reaction."

Horn, who said he resigned in frustration and despair in the light of increasing apathy and indifference to an environmental situation that is fast approaching critical," realizes that he can be called a quitter.

"I may be a quitter by definition but one has to console oneself that when he has been hitting his head against a brick wall long enough, as I have been for the last couple of years, it feels quite delightful to quit."

Horn said he decided to resign while a member of the 29-man crew on board the Greenpeace Too at the time of the Amchitka detonation Nov. 6.

"I held back thinking I might reconsider," he explained. "I cannot conceive of a future battle that will attain the power and calibre the Amchitka fight received. The opposition came from highest political and scientific levels right down to the man on the street and still proved futile."

Horn noted he has come to the "reluctant conclusion that our approach has been entirely wrong. Since the sooner a catastrophe occurs the more the likelihood that some will survive. We should have concentrated our efforts in aiding and abetting that occurrence."

Horn hopes that the major catastrophe hits soon before "permanent damage is such a magnitude that there is no turning back. As Dr. Ehrlich suggests 'People won't react until they see the bodies'."

"An honest appraisal of our efforts on other environmental issues would reveal that with the exception of a small increase in public awareness, we have failed entirely in our attempts to halt or reverse our inexorable plunge to catastrophe. We have won a few minor skirmishes and lost every battle."

Horn said he is "not getting out of the kitchen because I can't stand the heat . . . I'm getting out because the kitchen is on fire. I can see no further point in expending my health, energies and money in a totally futile battle."

The 40-year-old father of three girls said now he will be able to have time for his family, himself and is business which have been neglected during his pollution battles.

Horn, owner of Kurt's Marina at Maple Bay, said that in the two years of constant battles against pollution he spent over $150 a month in travelling expenses and other activities. During the summer months he had to hire someone to take his place at the marina and "I have no idea how much winter business I lost by not being there."

It would be impossible to determine the hours Horn put in but he said he was either partially or totally involved in SPEC every evening as well as many complete days.

"All I got out of it was a perforated ulcer," Horn said.

Horn said he doesn't regret the time he has put in because "we learn by our own mistakes."

When Horn first joined SPEC he said he was "scared skinny then and I still am. As far as I am concerned mankind is doing an excellent job of wiping himself off the face of the earth. I believed it then and I believe it more so now."

Horn said where he used to think mankind could beat the continuing increase in population at an alarming rate, meet the demand of feeding the population, stop the exhausting of natural resources, stop the proliferation of nuclear plants and the general destruction of the environment by industry.

"I have resigned myself to the fact we can't. People won't respond. Without people government and industry won't respond."

In the past year membership of the Cowichan-Malahat SPEC group has dropped from 300 to less than 150. Membership of the Lake Cowichan branch has dropped from 72 to 22. Horn said this is a province-wide trend. "If the public isn't interested, what the hell is the purpose of a handful of people trying?"

Horn feels that the public interest has dropped off because many people feel the battle has been won because of "such token achievements as the government's Litter Act and industry's attempts to institute clean-up projects.

"The public just isn't ready to accept the harsh facts of reality. It is obvious we have failed totally."

Indian Housing Plan Can't Satisfy Demand

DUNCAN — The Cowichan Indian band will never be able to take care of everybody through its housing plan, housing project manager Abner Thorne said Tuesday.

Thorne said when a survey was conducted several years ago on the band's housing needs and the building program was set up in 1966 they neglected to take new families into account.

Thorne said the building program is "pretty well to plan but we will never be able to take care of everybody."

10 STARTED

In the past five years 67 houses have been built at the Khowutzun subdivision on Boys Road immediately south of Duncan and an additional four elsewhere on the reserve. Additions were made to three other houses.

Eight more houses will be completed this weekend. Three weeks ago construction started on 10 new houses under the 1971-72 housing program. Thorne said this may incease to 14.

The band receives $135,000 per building season from the federal government.

The houses, which range from three to four bedrooms with some having basements, range in price from $8,500 to $12,000.

CONTACT INDIANS

Thorne said there are about 30 famililies on the waiting list. He noted that some peple do not want to move into the subdivision and are hoping that they will get a new house built at their present location. He said that the government funds are mostly for new houses and there is not enough money to carry out repairs.

Thorne's explanation of the band's housing program is the result of recent statements by Independent MLA for Oak Bay Scott Wallace who termed living conditions on the reserve appalling.

Wallace asked Indian Affairs Minister Jean Cretien to correct conditions on the reserve. He received a reply by telegram stating "Cowichan chief and band council accepted responsibility for housing on reserve. I suggest you contact them regarding any complaints received."

Wallace said he saw eight houses "which could more properly be called shacks, with leaking roofs, holes in the walls and floors and no inside running water."

He said sanitation and water facilities were such that they invited disease.

Is Your Breath What It Used To Be?

Bad breath has a number of causes. Age is a factor—so are dentures, caps, bridgework, gum trouble and so on. But Steri/sol Oral Antiseptic does much to control "aging breath" problems. You see, Steri/sol is the only mouthwash with Hexetidine—the powerful germ killer that deprives mouth bacteria of thiamine. Without thiamine, the mouth-germs that cause bad breath cannot live.

When you are worried about "aging breath", rinse with Steri/sol. Steri/sol is specially designed to combat these particular breath problems. The germ killing action of Hexetidine starts immediately, and within 15 minutes up to 95% of bad breath bacteria are eliminated. And because the Hexetidine in Steri/sol clings to mouth and gum tissues, the bactericidal action keeps on working up to 10 hours to help you feel really sure about your breath.

Put Steri/sol to work on bad breath right away. It does cost more than you might usually pay for a mouthwash, but then Steri/sol is not your usual mouthwash. Sold only at pharmacies.

Five Running for Duncan Council

DUNCAN — Five persons will compete for three two-year and one one-year aldermanic seats December 17.

Incumbents Jay Powley, John Horner and Tom Kilpatrick will seek re-election.

INFANT'S DEATH UNEXPLAINED

DUNCAN (CP) — RCMP said Tuesday an autopsy report shows David Plester was a victim of "sudden unexplained infant death syndrome."

The three-month-old boy died Sept. 11 in a car parked at a shopping centre. Police said James Plester left his son to summon emergency assistance but the baby died soon after reaching hospital.

Police said the autopsy report showed no apparent cause of death although there was some congestion of the infant's lungs.

Charles de Gaulle Exonerated

French Book's Claim

DE GAULLE . . . exposed Quebec crisis

PARIS (CP) — Gen. de Gaulle did not invent the Quebec problem, he merely exposed it to the world when he made his historic visit to Montreal in 1967, says Maurice Couve de Murville, former French foreign affairs minister.

Writing in his recently-published book, A Foreign Policy, 1958-1969, he says Gen. de Gaulle's visit was a catalyst for the events which followed in Quebec history.

"By his visit, de Gaulle created the occasion. His sentiments were well-known, he never hid them. His name alone, not to mention his presence, sufficed to create French criticism.

"The Quebec Libre cry which the general threw out in the frenzy of an unforgettable day provoked a whole series of events, but at that time the general was hardly conscious of the fact he was using the words of the Quebec separatists."

Couve de Murville, who served under the general, devotes six pages of his book to the problem of the French in Quebec.

IN ISOLATION

Until 1960, he says, the French sector of Quebec society lived in almost total isolation, "multiplying themselves, preserving their identity and not blending with foreign immigrants."

In 1960, when Couve de Murville visited Quebec with the general, "the Union Nationale, the archaic party of Maurice Duplessis, was in power."

"It was happy just being there, constant in support of language and religion, indifferent to everything else, particularly to those factors which would promote the French community and remedy its backward situation with relation to the flourishing and dominant English-speaking community in the province."

Although the welcome for the French visitors was warm, it lacked enthusiasm, says Couve de Murville.

"There was no trace of the explosion that was to come.

"Things in Quebec changed almost overnight, first the political regime. A few months after our visit, the Liberal party won the elections under the leadership of Jean Lesage, a man of integrity and great esteem who, in a few short years, was to change the foce of Quebec."

MET FRENCH

Lesage was engaged in a new undertaking which meant he had to meet with the French, says the author. In October, 1961, Lesage visited France.

"What other country could offer the province the necessary scientific, cultural and technical aid it required? Who else could rejoice in the spontaneous and authentic awakening of the French-Canadians which manifested itself in a desire to free themselves, assert themselves and to undertake projects?"

At that time a cultural agreement between Quebec and France was signed with Ottawa's approval "because no one wanted to create any difficulties."

"What the Quebec French wanted was to take their destiny into their own hands.

"The debate moved into the constitutional field, questioning even the structure of Canadian Confederation. Lesage was a moderate, attached to the existing institutions. First artisan of the Quebec revolution, he was soon left behind by events.

UN RETURNED

"After several years, a renewed Union Nationale came back to power under the leadership of Daniel Johnson, an ardent, capable, and resolute man whose program was to bring even more radical transformations."

At this point relations between France and Quebec came even closer. Johnson visited France in May, 1967, and two months later General de Gaulle visited Montreal for Expo 67.

Couve de Murville then explains the changed atmosphere of Quebec which so affected the general.

"The difference between 1960 and 1967 was astonishing. In 1960 everything was French but it didn't manifest itself. In 1967 it was noise, joy, the enthusiasm of a long-contained passion."

Gray Calms Taxmen Over Ottawa Proposals

VANCOUVER (CP) — Revenue Minister Herb Gray attempted Tuesday to allay tax specialists' fears about a major restructuring of Canada's tax laws, but he conceded that there will be problems with the transition.

Mr. Gray was applauded when he announced two department policies—covering advance rulings on tax questions and changes in fiscal-year dates —which will be significant to tax experts and businessmen.

The federal minister was speaking to an audience of 800 at the annual meeting of the Canadian Tax Foundation, which concludes its three-day conference today.

The federal legislation, which the government hopes to implement on Jan. 1, will change most aspects of the Income Tax Act.

"Once tax reform comes into effect, the increased need by taxpayers for rulings and interpretations will make greater demands on the limited numbers of staff engaged in this work," Mr. Gray said. "I am concerned about the problem involved in finding the additional staff that will be needed."

Advance rulings on tax questions have been provided in the past by the department so taxpayers will know what the impact will be of decisions which might affect their tax status.

WILL CONTINUE SERVICE

Mr. Gray said news reports had suggested that the federal tax-collection agency planned to discontinue the service but the department had no such intention.

However, because of the complexity of the new bill and the anticipated volume of requests for advance rulings it is unlikely that it will be possible initially to issue rulings in less than three months, he said.

Mr. Gray said the department will accept up to Dec. 31 requests from companies or individuals wanting to change the date for the end of their fiscal year from a date in 1972. This would allow taxpayers to end their tax year under the old rules and it would give them a full year before having to file a year-end tax statement under the new rules.

Mr. Gray said his department had been reorganized in anticipation of the change in tax laws and there may be more adjustments as a result of amendments during parliamentary consideration.

Earlier Tuesday, panelists at a session on taxation of individuals said taxpayers will lose more from changes in the definition of taxable income on the average than they will gain from new tax deductions.

The panel was one of 15 discussing all aspects of the new legislation during the conference, which has a registration of about 1,430.

Prof. D. H. Jones of the University of Alberta law faculty outlined some of the major areas of income and expense which taxpayers will have to consider when filling out income tax forms.

Personal use of a company car will mean that the user will have to add to his income an allowance for that use. If the employer owns the car a "reasonable charge" to the employee's income would be one per cent of the new cost of the car per month. It appears that this provision will not apply to trucks or other vehicles.

Child-care expenses for a working parent will be tax deductible.

Heirs Could Get Easier Tax Deal

OTTAWA (CP) — Farm families and others inheriting property would get a gentler tax break than expected through an amendment proposed by the government Tuesday to its big tax bill.

The amendment would allow heirs up to six years to pay the new capital gains tax on the property. The bill originally called for payment within one year of the owner's death.

The change would bring the proposed capital-gains tax provision in line with the existing federal estate tax, which also allows six years for payment. The tax bill would abolish the estate tax.

The proposed change, introduced by Pat Mahoney, parliamentary secretary to Finance Minister E. J. Benson, would go at least part way to meet complaints from both sides of the House that a sudden capital gains tax could break up family farms—forcing heirs to sell all or part of the farm to pay the tax.

GAPS IN CONTRACTS

Mr. Mahoney said outside the House that a gap in railway labor contracts left workers with the expense of living while on the road.

That change, also came after appeals from MPs, including railway engineers John Skoberg (NDP—Moose Jaw) and Charles Turner (L—London East).

Six other amendments proposed by the government were housekeeping changes.

Tuesday's eight amendments brought to 148 the number of changes the government has proposed in the 707-page bill since debate started in September.

CALLS FOR EXEMPTION

John Burton (NDP—Regina East) called for exemption of farmland from capital gains tax under three conditions: when it is passed on to another family member for continued farming; when the proceeds from its sale are used to buy another farm, and when the proceeds are invested in a retirement savings plan.

Mr. Burton said a blanket exemption of all farmland, proposed by Conservative Marcel Lambert (Edmonton West) Monday, would lead to speculation and encourage the growth of corporation farming.

The tax the government proposes would apply to half the increase in value of property or company shares between valuation day—to be set sometime this fall—and the day the asset is transferred to another owner by sale, gift or will.

MPs also complained about the impact of the tax on investors in stocks.

Douglas Harkness (Calgary Centre), former Conservative defence minister, said no tax should be exacted from long-term investments.

Fast-buck speculators and non-Canadian firms investing in Canada should pay the full capital gains tax, Mr. Harkness said.

But Canadians leaving their money in stocks for 10 years should be exempted fully. The tax should drop by 2½ per cent a year up to 10 years, he said.

Steve Otto, parliamentary secretary to Supply Minister James Richardson, agreed the government should make the distinction between speculators — who simply buy and sell property without adding to its value — and those who actively improve the value of their investments.

The former should pay the capital gains tax, he said. The latter should be exempted.

Mr. Otto said that before recent U.S. economic programs, including trade restrictions, the capital gains tax was a good idea.

But now Canada could not afford "this kind of equity"—there was not enough to share. Growth was the prime goal.

He said it makes no sense to go on debating the bill, ignoring the impact of the U.S. economic policies.

As the MPs debated the bill, Finance Minister Benson was telling provincial premiers at the federal-provincial conference that he was sticking to the planned Jan. 1 implementation date for the new tax law.

IRISH TACTICS MAY EASE

LONDON (CP) — Quick to defend existing interrogation methods of persons interned in Northern Ireland, the British government nevertheless may be moving towards gentler pressures now that some details of the system have been disclosed.

Three privy councillors, headed by former chief justice Lord Parker, will review the interrogation code and decide whether changes are necessary. The Guardian suggests that in the meantime the army may employ softer tactics.

The Compton commission report made public Tuesday confirmed that some suspected Ulster gunmen were subjected to ill-treatment during interrogation, but it rejected charges of brutality.

Defence Secretary Lord Carrington said the report reflected great credit on the army. He said an enormous amount of information was obtained from those interrogated. This information had saved lives among troops, Ulster police and civilians.

IRA TACTICS ROUGHER

While the three-man commission, headed by Ulster ombudsman Sir Edmund Compton, told of suspects being subjected to bread-and water diets, lack of sleep, and long sessions of enforced postures against a wall, The Daily Express headlined what it described as "tortures" employed by the Irish Republic Army against its victims and informers.

Quoting the army, the paper said the IRA branded its victims with hot pokers, subjected some to electric shocks while others had their legs doused with paraffin which was set on fire.

The Daily Express said that no army in the world could have come out of such an investigation as well as the British Army had done.

"The IRA can thank its lucky stars it is not engaged against the Russians or the Chinese," said The Express.

The Sun said it had to be recognized that bombers and gunmen had killed at least 104 civilians, 12 policemen and 38 soldiers since August, 1969.

The use of some form of pressure on suspects to make them talk aroused controversy in British political quarters with spokesmen for Roman Catholic minority groups calling the tactics as barbarism. However, Home Secretary Reginald Maudling said the methods employed by the army in no way reflected adversely on the conduct of the security forces.

A special three-hour emergency debate on the Compton report is scheduled for the House of Commons today.

ASKED FOR DEBATE

It was requested by Robin Chichester-Clark, leader of the Northern Ireland Unionist members of Parliament.

The debate was expected to centre on what methods of interrogation are permissible in keeping with protecting lives and property in Ulster.

Tory Wins Manitoba Byelection

MINNEDOSA, Man. (CP) — David Blake, a bank manager who ran a low-key campaign, won the west-central Manitoba riding of Minnedosa in a provincial byelection Tuesday, retaining for the Conservatives the seat that former premier Walter Weir held for 12 years.

Mr. Blake, 46, of Minnedosa, led from the start and, with all 55 polls reported, had 3,509 votes, compared with 2,346 for New Democrat Emil Shellborn and 1,098 for Liberal Hugh Stephenson. There were 8,650 eligible voters.

The results left the Conservative opposition with 21 seats. The NDP, which ousted Mr. Weir from government in the 1969 general election, has 31 seats in the 57-seat legislature while there are three Liberals, one Social Credit and one independent.

The predominantly rural riding became vacant with the resignation of Mr. Weir, who moved to Toronto to become Canadian president of a United States-based chain of funeral homes.

Sidney Spivak, Mr. Weir's successor as party leader, hailed the victory as a rebuke to the 29-month-old NDP government.

"They ran on their record and they were rejected," he said. The results "augur well for the Conservative party and for those people who want a change of government in Manitoba."

PREMIER DISAPPOINTED

Premier Ed Schreyer, in Ottawa for the federal-provincial conference, was disappointed in the results, the first NDP loss in three byelections held since the party took power July 15, 1969.

"I was expecting it to be a little closer."

Liberal Leader I. H. Asper, who does not have a seat in the legislature, interpreted the results as evidence of "growing disenchantment with the NDP government."

The turnout, with mild weather conditions, was about 80 per cent of the eligible voters, a rise over the response in 1969 when Mr. Weir easily held the seat with 3,525 votes.

Mr. Shellborn, 44, an Erickson dairy farmer, was second in that election with 1,713 votes and Liberal Donald McNabb trailed with 1,028.

UNITED CHURCH 'FOR SALE'

WINNIPEG (CP) — A "For Sale" sign has been posted in front of the Deer Lodge United Church this week, but money won't get you the ownership papers.

Members of the congregation have decided to sell the community on the church, and vice-versa, by seeking contributions of time, talent and money.

So the "For Sale" sign is to sell the church to the community . . . figuratively. The sign reads: For Sale . . . to the community, from the congregation.

'I WAS A SHOPLIFTER FOR 5½ HOURS'

By JIM MAYBIE
Lethbridge Herald

LETHBRIDGE, Alta. (CP) — I was a shoplifter for 5½ hours.

I boosted $522.26 worth of merchandise from four city stores. The value of the goods stolen was actually a little more than that but what price does one put on a store's demonstration stereo tape or on the case for Inspector Ralph Michelson's spectacles?

I phoned the stores before I started shoplifting, telling them what I planned but they didn't know when I was going. The managers said no one would be tipped.

One store I stole from had said earlier that shoplifting losses were about half a per cent of gross sales and staff thefts slightly more than half a per cent. One Lethbridge store security officer said that one out of every 15 persons that enters the store is a shoplifter.

The figures, I thought, were astounding. I cannot ever recall shoplifting, not even as a child. I cringe when my wife steals a grape in the supermarket.

MAN YSTEAL

A survey of friends and office staff showed to my horror that everyone had shoplifted at one time or another. Some had the pants scared off them after they were caught and never di dit again. Others had more than one experience.

My experiences will last a lifetime. On a Monday I spent two hours stealing a 20-gallon garbage can costing $7.49, a $5.39 sheet and a quarter-inch rotary rasp worth 99 cents for a boost of $13.87.

I made two trips out of the store. I shook all the time I was in the store, after I left the store, and my stomach went around and around as I tried to get supper down.

LIFTED BICYCLE

Tuesday I stole a $299.95 component stereo from another store. I went back in and stole a $1.65 pair of pliers, a $1.29 lock, coasters worth 49 cents and a 69-cent measuring tape for a boost of $307.07. That took 1½ hours. I still shook.

Thursday I boosted a $110 10-speed bicycle from a third store. I secreted it away, went back and took a huge $66.98 shop vacuum cleaner bigger than a garbage can. The jobs took half an hour.

I went to a fourth store, was followed by a plain-clothes security officer for a while who admitted later he didn't see me hide anything.

I left the store with a $20 jade cuff-link and tie-tack set, six pairs of women's bikini panties, size medium, worth 93 cents each, a bottle of aspirin at 53 cents and the demonstration stereo tape. The job took 1½ hours.

After discussing shoplifting with Insp. Michelson and a police sergeant, I left Insp. Michelson's office with the case for his glasses.

All the merchandise was returned to the owners.

I was satisfied in my own mind that the reported losses and the number of thefts are no exaggeration.

CONSUMER PAYS

Based on average net profit, the four stores would have had to sell $20,000 worth of merchandise to make up for the $522.26 worth of goods I stole.

If a $5 retail article which represents a 10-cent profit is stolen, a store would have to sell 50 of the same items just to make up the loss suffered.

Who pays for these thefts, these losses?

The consumer of course.

If thefts by customers and employees could be stopped, prices could be reduced considerably, one city store manager told me.

'Crime Doesn't Pay' But City Bags $1.7M

But that all depends upon what end you are looking at it from.

Police Chief M. J. Kent predicts $1.7 million will be collected this year from court fines, traffic violations and impounding fees.

About $1.3 million comes from fines for criminal offences such as dangerous and impaired driving, theft, shoplifting, bookmaking and other offences.

The rest comes from traffic violations like illegal parking, jaywalking and disobeying traffic signals.

All the money collected goes to offset the cost of operating the police department, about $10 million annually.

Plan Adopted

WINNIPEG (CP) — Manitoba Labor Minister A. R. Paulley announced Tuesday the provincial government has decided to enter the federal unemployment insurance plan effective Jan. 1, 1972.

Paulley told a news conference that Manitoba was the first province to declare its intentions to join the scheme but added that Alberta, Saskatchewan, Prince Edward Island and one or two other maritime provinces were expected to make a similar move.

Quotas Studied

REGINA (CP) — Saskatchewan might have to consider setting a quota on the number of big game hunting licences available to hunters, Natural Resources Minister Eiling Kramer said Tuesday.

Kramer was commenting on a report of unprecedented numbers of American hunters swarming into Southeastern Saskatchewan for the opening of the deer season. The increase was blamed on a closed season in Minnesota and severe cutbacks in both North and South Dakota.

U.S. Policy Has Made Vietnam Desert

Victoria Times
WEDNESDAY, NOV. 17, 1971 49
FOURTH SECTION

United States policies of defoliation and crop destruction in Vietnam have turned 3,000,000 acres into desert, some of it irreversibly, a leading authority on the ecological effects of the war said Tuesday night.

University of Montana zoologist Dr. E. W. Pfeiffer was speaking in the University of Victoria Student Union Building.

He also pointed out that the use of herbicides for defoliation purposes has left South Vietnam a legacy of millions of dead and rotting trees and is a suspect factor in the rising incidence of human birth malformaties.

Pfeiffer said the military assault on the Vietnam environment has been accomplished in three ways: by chemical defoliation, pattern bombing and bulldozer clearing.

STILLBIRTHS DOUBLE

He said that in Tay Hinh province, where chemical defoliants were used extensively, the rate of stillbirths was 64 per thousand compared with a national average of less than half that figure. He claimed there has been a disproportionate rate of such deformities as cleft palate and "open spine" in newborn babies.

The chemical defoliation program, limited by presidential order as a result of evidence it is responsible for birth deformities, cannot be evaluated in terms of its eventual consequences yet, Pfeiffer indicated, because it is a relatively new approach to war.

In a paper he prepared following an earlier tour of the war area in 1970, however, he wrote:

"We consider that the ecological consequences of defoliation are severe. Enough is now known to reveal that a significant fraction of mature trees in most forests are killed by single applications of herbicides and that almost complete kill including destruction of seedlings and saplings, is to be expected if repeated sprayings are made.

"Because of military demands for respraying, we must expect virtual elimination of woody vegetation of defoliated sites as a common result of the military use of herbicides."

LAND DEVASTATED

"For the most part, the high explosives used in the Indochina War have devastated the land rather than major cities," his report to Environment states, "but the destruction has seriously damaged forests and soil on which the Vietnamese depend.

"For example, bulldozers equipped to clear jugles to the forest floor and thus deny cover to the opposing soldiers have already destroyed more than $40 million worth of timber and rubber trees."

Pfeiffer in an interview prior to his talk said this mechanical defoliation program has so far resulted in the destruction of 800,000 acres and it continues at the rate of 1,000 acres a day.

The result, he said, is flash flooding, erosion and the replacement of valuable timber by useless weed cover and bamboo.

In a report to Environment, a magazine produced for Scientists' Institute for Public Information Pfeiffer said: "It cannot be denied that there are advantages to the bulldozing, given the conditions of this grim war. First, bulldozing largely clears areas of land mines, an ever-present horror . . . to all who attempt to reutilize a war-visited area."

NEW "BIG BOMB"

Pfeiffer said the war has so far created approximately 10 million bomb craters on the face of Vietnam.

"The standard weapon of the B-52s," he reported, is a 500-pound bomb; each B-52 carries 108 and each bomb produces "a hole 20 to 50 feet wide and five to 20 feet deep, depending on soil conditions."

The craters, which are usually permanently water-filled, are unfit for cultivation and in addition provide new breeding spots for disease-carrying mosquitoes, he said.

Pfeiffer also described a devastating new "big bomb" in limited use which he said is second in destructive power only to a nuclear blast.

Little more than an explosive bulldozer, one of these 15,000 pound monsters will clear an area of dense jungle of about two acres. A mushroom cloud rises 6,000 feet and according to army officials all terrestrial and arboreal life (plants, animals and humans) within a circle more than a mile across is killed instantly.

Pfeiffer has been to Indochina four times in the past three years, and his most recent trip, in August, was sponsored by the Scientists' Institute for Public Information.

He was accompanied by Windham College biology professor Dr. Arthur H. Westing and their findings will be published in three parts.

Pfeiffer illustrated his discussion with photo slides and film taken during his most recent visit.

Fraser River Model

OTTAWA (CP) — A $150,000 hydraulic model of a 2½-mile section of the Fraser River will be constructed to aid in studies of navigation and dredging problems, the federal works department announced Tuesday.

An earlier study using a river-section model, begun in 1949, is credited with the success of the trifurcation project completed in 1969.

The trifurcation project involved the building of walls and other structures to enable the river channel to dredge itself and thus eliminate the large amount of dredging previously necessary to keep the deep-sea shipping channel open and free of silt.

The present project will use a model of the Mungo Bend-Tilbury Reach section of the river and will seek to reduce or eliminate present dredging costs.

The study will be carried out by Western Canada Hydraulic Laboratories Ltd., of Port Coquitlam.

GARDENING
hilda beastall

A View to Creating An Exciting Design

Today let us suppose you have a garden whose main planting goes back about 25 years. At that time permanent plants were likely to be rather run-of-the-mill unless you were already an experienced and advanced gardener.

You have since progressed to more aesthetic ideas but because of the established old shrubs you have never really felt the results were fitting into your scheme.

The family uses of garden area are likely to have changed too so that you can now redesign the lot with your own interests on top of the heap of ideas.

While you will be wise to retain a "skeleton" of the older plant material to provide winter wind protection and possibly a bit of summer shade, you have decided to discard an old lilac, a forsythia, a philadelphus (Mock-orange) or a chaenomeles (Japanese quince) which has become worn out with years of existence.

In your new plan you can see some lovely shrub shedding an aura of beauty in place of the gaunt scraggy branches of the present incumbent.

Heavy work of this kind is much more easily done in cool weather, so go to it now.

First cut down some of the branches at ground level; leave some 18 inches high to act as levers when you start digging out roots.

When you go into the house for coffee, the view of the gap you are creating may appal you, but quickly will follow the excitement of visualizing the new and more elegant replacement.

If you have in the past been strictly a "flower gardener" think now in terms of evergreens to give more permanent effects.

After all, you want the newly designed garden to last another 25 years—and with less continuous labor than was expended in the first twenty-five.

Be sure to get an estimated eventual height and spread for each coniferous evergreen you buy, for they vary from permanent dwarfs of six to ten inches to the graceful forest giants of 60 to 100 feet.

All, dwarfs and giants, are cute little shrubs when small, but after three years in your garden the roots have really taken hold and the big ones begin to show their potential size.

True dwarfs will maintain their half-inch or so of growth per year, while the big fellows make a foot or more in the same time.

The broadleaved evergreen shrubs having also a season of flowers and some a fall season of berries, will give you varying textures and colors throughout the year at a slower rate of growth.

SOLUTION THURSDAY

The Bridge Expert

By FRED KARPIN

One of the long-standing myths believed in by the broad masses of bridge players has been the presumed infallibility of bridge experts. This myth is on its way to extinction, having been negated by "facts."

The reason for its coming demise is that experience has demonstrated that experts are mere mortals — they make errors at the table, even as you and I. Admittedly, they make them less frequently than we do, and they own a warehouse of enormous talents. But, at times, they are quite capable of committing enormous "goofs."

As an example, observe today's deal, which arose in the European Championships of 1956. Sitting North and South, respectively, were Pietro Forquet and Guglielmo Siniscalco, of the World Championship Italian team. They were playing against one of Europe's strongest pairs, Pierre Jais and Roger Trezel, of France. East-West vulnerable. West deals.

The bidding:

West	North	East	South
1 ♡	4 ♠	Pass	4 NT
Pass	6 ◇	Pass	6 ♠
Pass	7 ♠	Dbl.	7 NT
Dbl.	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: King of ♡.

East made a poor call when he doubled North's seven-spade contract. Had he not doubled, Forquet almost surely would have gone down, since he could not have been that clairvoyant that he would have taken a first-round finesse against East's guarded jack of trumps. But, with the double, he would have been a shoe-in to fulfil the grand slam, since he would have assumed that East was doubling on a potential trump trick.

But Siniscalco, in the South seat, thought that East, for his double, had a sure trump trick. Siniscalco, of course, realized that Forquet, for his seven-spade bid, could win the opening lead in the adversely-bid heart suit. However, it probably never dawned on him that Forquet was void of hearts — he thought that North had the heart ace.

So Siniscalco retreated to seven notrump, banking on his solid club suit to bring home the contract. As is evident, he miscalculated. When the smoke had cleared, the defenders had taken the first six tricks, inflicting an 1100-point set on North-South.

However, as is characteristic of all champions, the Italian team was undaunted by the catastrophe, for they went on to win this European Championship — and in the following year captured their first world championship by defeating the United States.

FUN WITH FIGURES

By J. A. H. HUNTER

Jane was clearing the table for supper. "What's all this?" she asked, picking up some papers. "It's not homework."

"Not really, Mom," Mike replied. "I was figuring something. If you put your age after mine, to make a four figure number, you get twice our two ages multiplied together."

(Answer tomorrow)

Yesterday's answer: READ was 1537.

New Probe In Orbit

NAIROBI, Kenya (Reuter) — An Italian team successfully launched Monday a United States scientific satellite from a platform off the Kenya coast.

An official at the San Marco platform in Formosa Bay said by telephone the satellite, launched on top of a U.S. Scout rocket, had gone into orbit.

The 114-pound satellite is to study the earth's inner magnetosphere.

U.S. space agency officials have described the earth's magnetosphere as an enormous teardrop-shaped region surrounding the earth and formed by the solar wind—a supersonic stream of particles "blowing" on the earth's magnetic field.

Pottstown's Dick Tracy Ripped Off

POTTSTOWN, Pa. (UPI) — Dick Tracy's car was stolen from a railroad station parking lot here.

Tracy is not only the name sake of the comic strip detective, he is also the Pottstown police chief.

Tracy said he cannot understand why anyone took the trouble to break into his 1963 station wagon to steal it when there are so many newer cars around.

Kissinger Wins CIA Power Struggle

By RALPH HARRIS

WASHINGTON (Reuter) — A drastic shake-up in the globe-circling U.S. intelligence network has put more power in the hands of White House adviser Henry Kissinger.

Kissinger, already perhaps the most influential administration official except for President Nixon himself, has the president's ear on all foreign policy and security problems.

Now, the 48-year-old former professor has been given the key job of providing guidance and direction to Central Intelligence Agency Director Richard Helms. Helms, in turn, has been given new authority to co-ordinate the military and civilian branches of the intelligence apparatus, which have sometimes been rivals in the past.

Kissinger now is in an unchallengable position as head of a new National Security Council committee to oversee the secret information which he uses to recommend policy decisions to the president.

Reorganizing of the intelligence services was announced by the White House Nov. 5 after a study of the triumphs and failures of the CIA and the military intelligence agencies—and the battles between them over interpreting information.

The U.S. intelligence apparatus is unofficially reported to employ 200,000 people and to cost $5 billion a year.

High-ranking officials were known to feel it had grown too big and costly and that some of its mistakes had proved expensive in terms of national prestige.

A main reason for the sweeping changes ordered by the White House now apparently is President Nixon's unhappiness over the military intelligence planning that went into an abortive raid on a prison camp in northern Vietnam in November of last year.

The camp was believed to hold American prisoners. Helicopter-borne teams of assault troops swooped on the Son Tay camp near Hanoi after months of painstaking planning and intelligence-gathering only to find there were no prisoners there to be rescued.

Japan Airs Food List

TOKYO (AP) — Japan's food agency purchased 149,868 tons of wheat and 29,700 tons of barley in its weekly tender for imported grains today.

Of 115,584 tons of wheat for human consumption, the government agency said, Australia will provide 57,442 tons, the United States 44,142 tons and Canada 14,000 tons. Australia also will supply 34,284 tons of wheat for livestock feed.

The entire bulk of barley for feed will be supplied by Canada, officials said.

The agency said the wheat and barley shipments will leave for Japan January.

YOUR HEALTH: Dr. Walter Alvarez

The Mystery of Infantile Autism

I have just received a fine booklet from the Vista Hill Psychiartic Foundation in San Diego, Calif., that tells a great deal about autistic children. As the parents of a child with infantile autism know to their sorrow, for some reason which no one as yet understands, the child seems to be cut off from the world around him and shut into a "dream world" of his own. (The word autos in Greek means "self.") He reacts to other children and adults — even his parents — as if they were nothing more than objects like chairs or tables.

In the past, autism has been considered a form of childhood schizophrenia, but Dr. Bernard Rimland, a psychiartst who has made a special study of these children, and has written a book about them, says that the autistic child is in some ways different from young schizophrenics and also from other psychotic children. The syndrome (collection of symptoms) is unique and unmistakable.

The mother of an autistic child often notices — almost from the moment of his birth — something "different" about him. Especially if she has had other children, she will sense that he is not as responsive and "cuddly" as a normal infant. He won't want to be held, and he won't "mold" himself to her body.

Dr. Rimland says that in some cases, the symptoms do not show up until later, when the mother will notice that the child stares into space for hours, or he may rock incessantly or become preoccupied with a toy or an object to the exclusion of all else. By the age of two, when he should be learning to walk, he may not speak at all, or he may just parrot what he hears without seeming to have any understanding of what the sounds mean.

One of the curious things about these children is that often they are unusually beautiful, well-formed and physically healthy. Yet they can terrify their parents and drive them nearly to distraction by sudden unexplainable outbursts of rage, stamping, tears and kicking. As one mother wrote, "Much of Danny's days are spent in rocking, spinning, and screaming tantrums which he may stop abruptly when some little thing catches his eye . . . At times it must be terrible, as if (he is) being chased by ghosts. Yet, at other times, he appears to be in a tranquil trance."

Dr. Lee Kanner, a world-renowned psychiatrist who in 1943 first described this condition, and named it infantile autism, noted that these children are often born to highly intelligent parents who are scientists, physicians, writers or artists. The child himself may show unusual ability in some areas.

According to Dr. Rimland, "The autistic child is very frequently able to walk, climb and engage in other kinds of motor (physical) activities with considerably greater skill than is a normaml, unimpaired child. Furthermore, these children often show remarkable ability in such areas as music, arithmetic calculation and memory." And very hopefully, he adds, "The retarded child will not recover, whereas autistic-type children sometimes do recover and sometimes perform very well on intelligence tests and in school when they grow older."

What causes this strange disease? An autistic child may be born into a family where there are two or three normal, well-adjusted children. Dr. Rimland says that "A number of studies have definitely shown biological and biochemical differences between autistic-type children and normal children."

HOW TO WRITE

A GOOD

CLASSIFIED ACTION AD

1—IT'S BEST to start your ad with the name of the article or service you have to offer. If you have an apartment, room, etc. for rent, or property for sale; start your ad with the location.

2—BE CLEAR. Readers respond more quickly and favorably when given complete, definite information. Always include the price in your advertisement. Don't allow the reader to speculate.

3—MAKE IT EASY for the reader-prospect to reach you. Always give your telephone number or your name and address. If you do not have regular hours, state a preferred time for the prospect to get in touch with you.

4—PLAY SAFE. You get the greatest reader attention by using consecutive insertions. A six-day order is best and costs less, and you can, of course, stop your ad as soon as you get the results you want. You pay only for the days your ad appeared. Lower yearly rates are available to those who wish to keep their services or products before the public every day.

5—PLACE YOURSELF in the reader's position and ask yourself what you want to know about your offer. The answer you give will make a good Want Ad.

6—GIVE YOUR PROSPECT every inducement you can with good copy. Classified action ad readers have the money and are already interested in buying the merchandise or service you have to offer; the details and information you give are the most important.

7—WANT ADS THAT FAIL TO bring the desired results do so usually, not through a lack of readership, but because they are poorly worded or contain inadequate information.

8—TO PLACE YOUR AD, call 386-2121, your direct line number to fast Want Ad action. A courteous, efficient ad-visor will be glad to help you word and place your order. And remember, Classified Action Ads afford you the most complete coverage. Telephones are open daily, Monday through Saturday 8:00 a.m. to 8:00 p.m. for you call.

Perrin Celebrates Three Extra Years

TORONTO — Perrin Johnson, 57, and his wife Margaret are celebrating a very special anniversary. It was three years ago today that a St. Michael's medical team, headed by Dr. Clare Baker and Dr. James Yao gave Mr. Johnston a heart transplant. The Johnstons left Toronto Monday on a two-week vacation.

WASHINGTON — Alaska's fishermen are taxing themselves a penny a fish to finance a court action against the proposed trans-Alaska pipeline which, they claim, would dstroy their livelihood. "Oil and fish are not compatible," said Knute Johnson, a fisheries' union chairman. His 450 members say that heavy ship traffic through the Valdez arm would inevitably lead to spills destroying crabs, salmon and other fish.

GLENDALE, Calif. — "Captain Bligh met Mr. Christian again this week after a break of almost two centuries. Maurice Bligh, a fifth-generation descendant of the captain of HMS Bounty, met Thomas Christian whose famous 18th century ancestor Fletcher led the mutiny aboard the British warship. The modern Christian, now a book dealer in Kent, England, is on a Pacific visit to make contact with descendants of the Bounty mutineers of 1790.

VANCOUVER — Morality may not be the quality one usually associates with taxation. But, according to University of California professor George F. Break, the federal tax bill scheduled to come into effect Jan. 1 looks after some taxpayers' morality too.

'You can have a tax-free rollover with your wife but with no other woman" the professor told the annual meeting of the Canadian Tax Foundation. Accountants use the term rollover for the capital gains tax-free transfer of investment assets from husband to wife.

COLUMBUS, Ohio — A robber picked the wrong victim when he walked up to tobacco-chewing Bill Parsons and demanded money. "I had this big chew of tobacco I let it go right in his face," said Parsons, 74, who thought the man might have had a gun in his pocket. The frustrated bandit fled.

HENLEY ON THAMES, England — Dame Gladys Cooper, a leading British actress whose career spanned 66 years died at her Henley home today after a long illness. She was 81.

Thailand Coup

By PETER O'LOUGHLIN

BANGKOK (AP) — Premier Thanom Kittikachorn assumed absolute power in Thailand today by abolishing parliament, dissolving his cabinet and suspending the constitution.

Tanks surrounded the parliament building and paratroop reinforcements were brought into Bangkok, but the city was calm.

Thailand is strongly anti-Communist. The 60-year-old premier, who came up through the military and has the rank of field marshal, told the country he is heading a revolutionary council. He said its personnel will come from the armed forces and the police, with some civilian elements.

Thanat Khoman said some legislators' behavior had hampered the government. He has been attacked frequently in the lower house.

The premier's actions amounted to a coup d'etat against parliament and was in effect a return to the conditions that prevailed before parliament was reconstituted in 1969. There were 10 years of military rule before that. Thanom's predecessor, Sarit Thanarat, was also a field marshal. He died in 1963.

TAX CHEQUES 'JUST TRASH'

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. (UPI)—For the third time in little more than a year, a huge sum of mislaid money has been found in Illinois' capital city.

The find this week amounted to $2,327,791—all in uncashed cheques written to pay state income tax. The cheques and accompanying 1970 tax returns filled 17 cartons found in an assortment of trash at the state's tax centre building.

Officials of the department of revenue would not disclose the exact circumstances of the discovery of the funds, nor the identity of the firms which had submitted the cheques. Two of the payments were for $680,000 and $900,000.

The cheques were rescued from the trash Monday and the find was disclosed Tuesday.

As to how the cheques wound up in a trash pile, revenue director George E. Mahin said, "I'm trying to find out myself."

Bush Slams China

UNITED NATIONS (UPI) — In a statement approved by the White House, U.S. ambassador George Bush hit back at the new Chinese Communist delegate to the United Nations Tuesday night with the charge that his attacks on the United States were "intemperate language."

Instead of making a speech from the floor, Bush issued a statement to delegates following a quick trip to Washington, apparently to see President Nixon who is scheduled to visit China next year.

10th PLANET HINTED BY NEPTUNE WANDER

CAMBRIDGE, England (UPI) — A 10th planet may be orbiting the sun out beyond the planet Plutio a Cambridge University astronomer said today.

Dr. David W. Dewhirst, chief observer at Cambridge University Observatory, said irregularities in the orbit of Neptune, eighth planet from the sun, indicated the possible presence of another body.

"But I must emphasize that at present this is only a notion, the result of theoretical studies by a group of scientists here and by a colleague in the United States," Dewhirst said.

Escaping Charge Withdrawn

A 21-year-old William Head inmate had a charge of escaping custody withdrawn in court Tuesday because prison officials decided to treat the case as a disciplinary matter.

Judge Edmond St. Jorre withdrew the charge against Howard Edward Riley on application of prosecutor J. W. Anderson.

After court, prison officials said the inmate was apprehended Monday evening immediately after climbing over the fence of the minimum security prison.

Prison superintendent Gamaliel Milner said the matter was before an institutional disciplinary court for hearing on attempted escape.

Riley, from Ladysmith, was serving two years, 11 months for theft, driving while suspended and driving without insurance. He recieved the sentence last March.

Three Parties For Children

Volunteers from the Canadian Forces Fleet School in Esquimalt will give three parties Thursday, Dec. 16 for physically handicapped, mentally retarded and underprivileged children in Greater Victoria.

The parties will be held in the dockyard gymnasium, beginning at 10 a.m., 1 p.m. and 4 p.m.

Senate Gives DISC Approval

WASHINGTON (CP) — The Senate Wednesday voted approval of the DISC proposal, a scheme Canada has said could hurt her export business and also add to Canadian unemployment.

Approval came as the Senate voted 59 to 28 against an amendment that would have knocked the Domestic International Sales Corporation idea out of the bill now under debate and replaced it with a more moderate idea.

The amendment, proposed by Senator Fred Harris (Dem. Okla.) would have carried little or no threat to Canada.

Canadian officers have said the plan as now written could harm Canada by encouraging U.S. exporters to export heavily to Canada and give the U.S. an edge in markets where the U.S. and Canada compete.

Finance Minister E. J. Benson of Canada has said that in influencing the relocation home of U.S. plants now operating in Canada, the plan could lead to a massive exodus of manufacturing jobs from Canada.

DISC A LOOPHOLE

Harris and other U.S. critics have charged that the DISC plan, under which firms manufacturing for export could defer tax payments on much of their income, amounts to a billion-dollar tax loophole for business.

His plan also would have encouraged subsidiaries to relocate back to the U.S. and employ Americans, but would have removed what DISC critics term a tax bonanza for big business.

Since the DISC plan was not included in the House of Representatives version of the tax bill it will come up for discussion at a House-Senate conference to reach a compromise on the two versions.

The compromise tax bill must be approved by both chambers and signed by President Nixon before it becomes law.

But since the Senate, House and Nixon administration all favor DISC in one form or another, some version is expected to gain final approval.

DISC critics have said that since the plan would permit tax deferral for maybe 15 years, it in fact would amount to a tax exemption

School Budget Up by 15.7%

Sooke School Board has approved a provisional budget of $5,388,514 for 1972, an increase of $732,881 or 15.74 per cent over 1971.

Despite the increase, the board predicted that the mill rate will "compare favorably with adjacent districts."

The increase was attributed to a 5 per cent rise in student population, unemployment insurance for teachers, electricity rates and debt charges.

NORAD Defence Machine Poised, Ready for Action

COLORADO SPRINGS, Colo. (Reuter) — "Ringmaster to Looking Glass, how do you receive? Over."

"Receive you loud and clear, Ringmaster." The reply is crisp and startlingly immediate.

It is a routine communications check between two war command posts, one buried deep inside a mountain, the other constantly airborne high above the central United States.

"Ringmaster" is the command post for NORAD, the Canada-U.S. North American Air Defence command whose headquarters occupies 4½ acres gouged out of the solid granite of Cheyenne Mountain, overlooking Colorado Springs.

"Looking glass" is a KC-135 aircraft, a converted Boeing 707, which serves as back-up command post for the U.S. Strategic Air Command. If SAC headquarters at Omaha, Neb., were knocked out in a missile attack, battle commanders aboard "Looking Glass" would immediately take charge of the situation.

In these days when talk even of "cold war" seems out of fashion, when Russia and the U.S. are discussing arms limitation, North America's defence machine remains oiled and instantly ready.

HAS HIGH SECURITY

For the last 10 years, hollowed-out Cheyenne Mountain, in the front range of the Rockies, has shielded the cornerstone of North America's air defence.

A ½-mile-long tunnel horseshoes clear through the mountain, the rock walls pinned in place by steel bolts, some driven 32 feet back into the mountain.

Half-way along, a giant, 25-foot steel door swings open. Fifty feet inside another, identical door, closed. Time locks ensure the doors are never open at the same time. It's just one of a battery of security devices.

Behind the doors lies the headquarters section, a village of 11 mostly three-storey steel structures, windowless, painted cream-yellow. Each is free-standing, mounted on rows of massive coiled springs, each weighing 1,000 pounds.

The springs would cushion the buildings, their 16 computers and other delicate electronics gear—and the people who operate it—against the shock of earthquake or nuclear bombardment.

COULD SURVIVE HIT

An escort boasts that the section could survive all but a major, direct hit by a nuclear bomb. "And even that might not be the end. . . ."

Food stocks for the 1,800 staff of NORAD headquarters would last at least 30 days. The air is filtered. Four reservoirs in the mountain hold a total six million gallons of water.

One giant cavern stands empty, awaiting eventual installation of the nerve centre for the U.S. Safeguard anti-ballistic missile system.

Finally, through a door with a push-button combination lock, into the very heart of the complex, the combat operations centre or war room. Here, in time of war, would gather the air defence chiefs.

Centre seat in the second of the room's three tiers is reserved for the NORAD commander-in-chief, U.S. Air Force Gen. Seth J. McKee. Beside him would sit Canadian Forces Lt.-Gen. Edwin M. Reyno, deputy commander-in-chief.

On the wall opposite, a 16-by-12—foot screen to display a map of North America—or any other selected area—would show the threat: Incoming missiles, bombers perhaps—a series of blips moving fast as tracking from more than 120 radar sites is piped into NORAD's space defence centre.

GET LITTLE WARNING

The generals and their battle staff would have 15 minutes to assess the attack, alert the interceptor forces and warn the continent.

At least one of the NORAD chiefs must always be at hand — just in case.

On the lower level of the combat operations room work the command directors, five officers hand-picked from all branches of the services, U.S. and Canadian.

On the top tier, two booths for other members of the battle staff. And a third, glass-fronted booth for the national warning centre whose occupant last Feb. 20 caused a major hue-and-cry. He mistakenly put out a real alert to the radio stations on the emergency broadcast system, instead of a practice alert.

Confusion, rather than panic, ensued. Some stations simply failed to notice the alert. Others chose to ignore it. The real alert tape now is locked up so that it can't be accidentally switched for the practice one.

A 20-channel closed-circuit TV system serves headquarters. By pushing two buttons, a call to SHAPE (Supreme Headquarters, Allied Powers, Europe) located near Brussels came through just as swiftly and clearly as "Ringmaster's" check with "Looking Glass."

Looked at cynically, the sudden crop of reports of ever-increasing Soviet strike power could be designed to set the scene in which Congress will take it's annual look at the defence budget.

But to the men inside Cheyenne Mountain, it all boils down to a simple equation:

"Deterrence equals offence plus defence: As long as we can provide aerospace defence, we will fulfil a part of the equation which gives us a credible deterrence."

Bohemian Facade of Soviet Spy Successful to End

MOSCOW (Reuter) — Soviet master-spy Col. Rudolf Ivanovich Abel, who died Monday, headed his country's espionage network in the United States for nine years from behind the facade of a quiet Bohemian artist.

Thin, nondescript and middle aged, he achieved acceptance by his neighbors in Brooklyn, N.Y. He pretended to be a photographer and painter without much talent, old-fashioned in his views and with an interest in music of Bach and the paintings of Rembrandt and Van Gogh.

He kept his double identity secret with such skill that after his arrest in a small hotel in Manhattan in June, 1957, none of his acquaintances came forward to say they suspected anything at all about the kindly, modest man they knew as Emil R. Goldfus.

The only charge which he admitted to was that he had illegally entered the United States.

DENIED HIS EXISTENCE

The Soviet government denied any knowledge of him for years after his arrest and it was only in 1966, when he was back in the Soviet Union, that he received recognition.

He was awarded the Order of Lenin, the Soviet Union's higsest civilian award, for "outstanding service" marking his 30 years as an intelligence agent.

His nine years at the head of what has been described as the most efficient spy ring ever planted in the U.S. came to an end through something he must have feared but could not prevent—one of his own men gave him away.

His deputy, Lt.-Col. Reino Hayhanen, told the story to the American authorities after being ordered back to Moscow by his superiors.

It was his evidence in court —plus such spy tools as screws with cavities, nails with removable heads and coins with hollowed-out sections discovered by the FBI—that brought Abel a conviction of 30 years' imprisonment.

The principal charges included conspiracy to transmit atomic and military information to the Soviet Union.

In his Brooklyn studio were short-wave receivers for taking instructions from Moscow and modern apparatus for coding and concealing messages.

He took over the North American network—his activities covered both the U.S. and Canada—soon after slipping into the U.S. from Canada in 1948, leaving his wife and daughter in the Soviet Union.

It was a time of enormous spy activity in the United States. In 1950, the FBI arrested Americans Julius and Ethel Rosenberg as participants in an atomic spy ring. They were later executed.

Precisely what his organization gathered and transmitted to Moscow during the nine years remain a mystery.

But the Soviet Union's interest in Abel eventually emerged into the open when the Russians suggested and obtained an exchange of the master-spy for Francis Gary Powers, pilot of an American U-2 high-level reconnaissance aircraft brought down in Russia May 1, 1960.

BETRAYER KILLED

Powers served 18 months of his 10-year sentence in the Soviet Union. Abel served four years and 2 months of his 30-year sentence.

man who gave him away was killed in a still mysterious motor accident in 1961.

After returning to the Soviet Union, Abel lived a quiet, unpublicized existence until fairly recently.

One of his rare appearances was at one of the strangest reunions held in recent times. He and other former Soviet spies gathered in a bleak East Berlin street to honor the memory of Richard Sorge, one of the greatest Russian master-spies, who was arrested in Tokyo in 1941 and executed three years later.

Abel and other surviving former Soviet spies stood to attention as a street in East Berlin was renamed Richard Sorge St.

IF YOU DRIVE . . . DON'T SMOKE

BRISBANE, Australia (Reuters)—Heavy smokers have been warned to think twice about driving.

The Queensland director of air pollution control, A. Gilpin, says anyone who smokes 20 or more cigarettes a day suffers from impaired vision and judgment.

He told the annual conference of the Australian Automobile Association Tuesday: "If you smoke heavily, think seriously before taking your car on the highway, and if you smoke and drink you shouldn't be able to drive at all."

Gilpin said that road safety campaigns concentrated on alcohol and ignored the hazard of the smoking driver, but a smoker at the wheel breathed in more carbon monoxide from his cigarette than from his car.

B.C. Hydro 'Disappointed'

VANCOUVER (CP) — British Columbia Hydro electrical workers will receive a 15.8 per cent wage increase over two years under the terms of an arbitration report issued today by Mr. Justice Nathan Nemetz of the B.C. Court of Appeals.

The binding decision gives the 2,400 members of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers a 7.9 per cent increase retroactive to last April 1 when their previous contract expired and another 7.9 per cent starting Jan. 1.

The appointment of Mr. Justice Nemetz brought about the end of a province-wide strike earlier this year after months of fruitless negotiations. The union had sought a 22-per-cent increase and Hydro had originally offered 12 per cent.

In his report, Mr. Justice Nemetz said both sides agreed to the two-year term of the new agreement.

On the issue of contracting out by Hydro, the crown corporation must in the future require contractors using unorganized labor to maintain the same standards of wages and working conditions as the union agreement.

"It is apparent that the Hydro is now distributing its work among larger numbers of small contractors, many of whom have no collective agreements with organized labor," the report said.

On isolation allowances, Mr. Justice Nemetz ruled that it would not be advisable to make any change in the index prior to a scheduled review of the system next year.

"I have every confidence that after receipt of that (review) the parties will be able to establish an equitable cut-off point on the revived isolation index before the termination of the new agreement," he wrote.

In Vancouver this morning, a B.C. Hydro spokesman said: For Hydro, this award is a great disappointment."

"It will add greatly to inflationary pressures and will increase costs to our customers, who must pay an additional $3.3 million per year in wages alone to our 2,000 electrical workers — the most highly paid of any electrical utility workers in all Canada.

Partridge Quits UVic Presidency

By BRIAN BUTTERS
Times Staff

Bruce Partridge announced his resignation Tuesday as president of the University of Victoria, saying his effectiveness "has been impaired by personal attacks."

Partridge made his announcement to a special meeting of the university faculty. He leaves the post Jan. 31, 1972.

Lloyd G. McKenzie, chairman of the UVic board of governors, said Partridge had reached his "outer limit of endurance" after a series of "sustained, remoreseless, venomous attacks."

HIS OWN

Asked if Partridge's decision was influenced in any way by members of the board, McKenzie said: "Really, it was his personal decision.

"But, in a case like this, the decision has to be a collective decision. The board was conscious of the situation at the university and so was the president. For that matter, so were the faculty, the public and students."

McKenzie said "generous" arrangements had been made with Partridge concerning terminal salary.

Asked if Partridge will receive something besides the proportion of his yearly salary due to the end of January, McKenzie said: "Yes, there will be something extra. There has to be in terminal arrangements like this."

REASONABLE

"They have to be reasonable arrangements and, in fact, they have to be generous," McKenzie said. "It can't be done in any other way."

Partridge said he doubts very much that he'll stay in academic life but has no job to go to. Dean of education Dr. Hugh Farquhar has been appointed acting president until a replacement is found.

Gill Auchinleck, vice-chairman of the board of governors, said he agreed with Mc-

'Now Is The Hour'

The following interview took place Tuesday night in the office of University of Victoria president Bruce Partridge, who had resigned earlier in the evening:

Times: Was there any single turn of events which influenced you into deciding to resign?

Partridge: No, not really. From the time I came to the University of Victoria it was a question not of whether I was going to resign but when I was going to resign. I don't think a president of a university should stay on in his job too long. It just seems that now is the hour.

Times: Do you have any other job lined up now?

Partridge: No, I do not have another job waiting. I felt it wouldn't have been fair to the university to seek something else before announcing my resignation. Some people will think I'm crazy not to, but I'm not.

Times: Do you plan to stay in academic circles?

DO OTHER THINGS

Partridge: No, I doubt it very much. I will now literally start thinking about other things to do.

Times: Do you have any specific location in mind for the future?

Partridge: That depends on what turns up, but we do like B.C.

Quebec No 'Have-Not'—WAC

OTTAWA (CP) — Premier W. A. C. Bennett of British Columbia today continued his opposition to equalization payments, especially those to Quebec, as the federal-provincial confernce on the economy and fiscal arrangements entered its final day.

He said in an interview before entering the morning session that Quebec should not be considered a "have-not" province because its natural resources are as great as any other province.

He blamed the federal government for the situation, saying "at the present time we haven't got a national government in Ottawa, we have a government of Quebec."

Mr. Bennett's comments followed what Quebec Premier Robert Bourassa termed a "lively exchange of argument" between himself and the B.C. premier in the closed conference room Tuesday.

In an interview outside the conference, Mr. Bourassa said Mr. Bennett appeared to regard Quebec as the "coddled child" of Confederation.

"I don't know what he has against Quebec or against the equalization formula," Mr. Bourassa said. "He said that we should abolish the equalization payments formula."

In his opening brief to the conference Monday, Mr. Bennett said the equalization payments, which redistribute wealth from richer to poorer provinces, should be replaced by a national guaranteed income plan for individuals to be paid for by Ottawa.

However, a predicted fierce battle over Canada's equalization payments turned into a mild skirmish Tuesday. It apparently ended after Prime Minister Trudeau firmly announced there was no new territory up for grabs.

The present system of channelling tax money from the richer provinces to the poorer ones will continue as it has. And if the warring provincial premiers were disappointed, they were also relieved that they didn't lose some of their existing grounds.

Grits Probe Leak

OTTAWA (CP) — The federal government Tuesday launched an investigation into the leak of a confidential cabinet document on foreign domination of the Canadian economy, regarded as one of the most serious security breaches since Prime Minister Trudeau took office three years ago.

External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp said the government would call in the RCMP if necessary in efforts to find out how the document, dated July 29, was acquired by Southam News Services.

Trudeau said today he personally ordered an investigation into the leak about cabinet discussions on the issue of foreign ownership.

He added in an interview that he instructed Revenue Minister Herb Gray to start an investigation.

He declined to say whether the RCMP is involved.

Initially, the investigation concerned publication by The Canadian Forum, a Toronto monthly magazine, of a version of the report on foreign ownership made to the cabinet by Mr. Gray.

The prime minister repeated that the cabinet wants to make an announcement on foreign ownership as soon as possible. This had been held up by the Aug. 15 U.S. imposition of a surtax on imports.

Trudeau said he still hopes an announcement can be made this fall. But a lot would still depend on U.S. economic moves.

Trudeau was asked whether the government policy will still include some sort of screening mechanism for foreign investment.

He said the public will just have to wait and see.

He was careful, however, not to deny that the cabinet had approved in principle a screening agency, at least initially, or that such an agency will be part of the policy announcement, whenever it is made.

The Gray report was a study prepared by civil servants for cabinet consideration while the document published Tuesday was an actual record of cabinet proceedings, usually the subject of stringent security safeguards.

Hundreds of civil servants had access to the Gray report, but only the prime minister, his 29-man cabinet and a handful of aides, advisers and top civil servants had access to the cabinet document.

IRA Vows Revenge

BELFAST (AP) — The Irish Republican Army threatened today ruthless reprisals against British intelligence men whom it accused of torturing guerrilla suspects. (See also page 41.)

An IRA statement, commenting on a British government inquiry into interrogation methods, demanded an investigation by a team of international jurists.

It added: "Torturing by British troops is still going on and nothing short of a full disclosure of the truth will shock the British public into disowning the infamous policy of their government.

"The Irish Republican Army has compiled a list of names of those engaged in torturing. Ruthless action will be taken against them in due course."

In Dublin, the Irish Republic's prime minister, Jack Lynch, said he is considering taking the issue before the European Court of Human Rights in Strasbourg, France.

HEFTY SHAKE URGED FOR UN

NEW YORK (UPI) — A top United Nations official called today for "shock treatment" — including staff cuts of up to 50 per cent — to revitalize the world organization.

Maurice Strong, the Canadian secretary-general of the UN conference on the human environment, described the United Nations as "a flagging organization which is somehow out of the tune with the needs and the moods of the times."

Pakistanis 'Repulsed'

NEW DELHI (UPI) — Government spokesmen today charged that a patrol of Pakistani troops invaded India's west Dinajpur district but was repulsed by Indian soldiers. They also said shelling attacks along the East Pakistan border killed 11 Indian civilians.

Old Fire Back At Labor Meet

VANCOUVER (CP) — The British Columbia Federation of Labor snapped out of an introspective mood Tuesday to adopt an aggressive set of policies on economic, environmental and political issues.

The old fire crackled most briskly over a resolution flatly rejecting any form of wage-and-price controls as an affront to working people.

It also flared up, however, in a standing ovation for David Barrett, leader of the provincial New Democrats, at the end of a frankly nationalistic speech attacking the free-trade proposals of Premier W. A. C. Bennett.

The opening Monday of the week-long convention was largely a self-criticism session with federation executives and delegates listing the shortcomings of the labor movement.

In the debate on wage and price controls, U.S. labor was damned for the extent of its cooperation with the economic policies of President Nixon.

U.S. labor's acceptance of a three-month wage-and-price freeze was as severe a blow to working people as its earlier support for the war in Vietnam, the convention was told by Ray Haynes, secretary-treasurer of the B.C. Federation.

Also approved was a resolution urging the Canadian Labor Congress to assist affiliates seeking greater autonomy.

Bowl Suit Filed

A number of B.C. companies and businessmen associated with the now-defunct plans for commercial development of Cypress Bowl in West Vancouver have been named as defendants in a legal action launched by another B.C. firm.

The plaintiff, Valley Royal Development Company, seeks damages in excess of $1 million for what it claims is breach of warrantees under which the firm would have developed Cypress Bowl into a recreation centre.

The writ was filed Oct. 28 in the Supreme Court of British Columbia but was brought to public attention today by Opposition Leader Dave Barrett.

Mafia Friends Vital to Sinatra

By NICHOLAS GAGE
(Third of a Series)

"Friendship is everything," says the Mafia don in Mario Puzo's novel The Godfather. "Friendship is more than talent. It is more than government. It is almost the equal of family. Never forget that."

The Mafia leader addresses this advice to a character named Johnny Fontane, an Italian singer who revives his sagging career with a straight action role. Many readers consider the career change to be one of numerous similarities between the fictitious Johnny Fontane and singer Frank Sinatra, who revived his career in 1953 with his Academy Award-winning performance in From Here to Eternity. (The successful comeback allowed Sinatra to announce his retirement early in 1971 while at the top of his profession.)

But those who know Sinatra well would realize that the similarity between Johnny Fontane and Frank Sinatra is superficial. Sinatra, for instance, would not need the lecture on friendship from the Mafia don. For Sinatra has, for 30 years, honored his friendships with Mafia leaders even though they have tarnished his image, damaged his business interests, and cost him his amiable relationship with the late President John Kennedy.

It is not at all unusual for singers to have to deal with gangsters, who have a stake in many of the nightclubs where entertainers get their start. But no other entertainer has ever built such acquaintances into enduring friendships.

Although Sinatra has never been accused of participating

Lively Passage Cut From Hansard

By PETER McNELLY
Times Staff

British Columbia's 1971 Hansard was published last week, seven months after the legislative session ended, with one of its liveliest exchanges missing.

The provincial Hansard, called Debates of the Legislative Assembly, routinely does not include debates of estimates or third reading of bills.

Barrett: We know who's got the authority.

Speaker: Order please.

Barrett: Do you want to threaten to throw me out, again? You run the House that way, threatening the Members, threatening to silence them, threatening them all the time.

This statement is followd by the Speaker's printed comment about not wanting to threaten anybody.

Questioned about editing procedures Tuesday, Murray first said "Nothing was taken out of the text, nor was anything added to the text."

Murray later said he checked a typescript of the debate for March 23 and found a section had been omitted because it was "con-

TODAY'S GRAIN PRICES

WINNIPEG (CP) — Rapeseed prices remained barely firm in a fair volume of trade at the close on the grain exchange today. Trading in that commodity was mostly local and commission house with light exporter buying interest.

UVic Officials Urged To Remain at Posts

Following is a statement by Lloyd McKenzie, chairman of the board of governors of the University of Victoria, delivered to a meeting of staff and faculty of the university Tuesday afternoon:

The board of governors announces, with regret, that it has received and accepted the resignation of the president of the university, Bruce Partridge, effective Jan. 31, 1972.

In view of this development, the vice-president academic designate has decided not to confirm his acceptance of the appointment.

In light of the above decisions, the prospect of changes in other senior administrative offices, and the state of instability in the governance of the university, the board of governors has decided to request incumbent senior administrators, in so far as possible, to remain to their present positions until Jan. 31, 1973.

STABILITY

The board will be reluctant to make any administrative appointments, particularly of external candidates, before that date or until a higher degree of stability becomes apparent on the campus.

The board of governors announces the appointment of Dr. Hugh E. Farquhar, dean of the faculty of education, to the position of president, pro tem, effective Feb. 1, 1972. Dean Farquhar will work closely with Partridge over the next two months to ensure a smooth and effective transition of responsibility within the president's office.

Partridge

CO-OPERATION

The board of governors seeks the co-operation of all members of the university community to ensure that the University of Victoria is going to survive.

Besides the formal statement issued to the staff and faculty, McKenzie released the following statement:

"My formal statement as chairman of the board of governors describes the steps taken consequent upon the resignation of president Bruce Partridge. This is a sad occasion. He brought to his most difficult office the highest intelligence, experience, enthusiasm, energy and integrity. He possesses man's superior qualities to the highest degree. Despite this, in the weird world which is the contemporary university, he has found it impossible to continue.

"He has been exposed to sustained, remorseless, venomous attacks and has withstood them with the utmost manliness. All men however, have their outer limits of endurance and this has been reached.

"I have supported him from the beginning and I support him now and wish him well. I will support Dr. Hugh Farquhar when he assumes, for the time being, the president's chair, and I ask this community and this university to do the same. We cannot stand to lose another good man."

Statement by Partridge

"During the past two and a half years a number of changes have occurred in the university. Changes are never easily made; they exact a toll in personal relations and in the sense of confidence and security of those most directly affected. In the past year my effectiveness as president has been impaired by personal attacks, which have also diverted the attentions and energies of many from the important tasks of addressing and solving the fundamental questions which confront the university.

"If we could anticipate a continuation for a year or two of the pattern of growth we have enjoyed in recent years, it is probable that institutional composure could be readily regained. We know, however, that the years immediately ahead hold severe tests for this university as well as for other universities. Difficult decisions will have to be made, and their application will demand all of the patience and good will a university can muster in even the best of circumstances. With anything less it is doubtful whether the university can adequately respond from within to meet the external pressures which will develop.

Mackenzie

"In such times, it is more important than ever for the president to look to the future and to ask himself whether he can function at optimum effectiveness. If not, then to continue would be to do the university a disservice.

"I have concluded that it is now best for the university, for me, and for my family, that I resign, with my resignation to become effective as soon as the board can conveniently make appropriate arrangements for transfer of responsibilities.

"I arrived at this decision with some sense of regret because it would have been more satisfying personally to have seen the university completely through the transition which is now under way. I would not have left last spring because to have done so would have been to undo much that had been done by the many, who have been working to build a strong university. As I see the mounting evidences of a constructive mood on the campus, I no longer feel that constraint.

"At its regular meeting yesterday, the board of governors accepted my resignation, effective Jan. 31, 1972, and discussed arrangements to provide a smooth transition. These arrangements are described in the accompanying communication from the chairman of the board."

Kenzie that Partridge's decision to resign was a "collective" one.

"That's a fair statement to make," Auchinleck said.

DISAPPOINTED

"I'm disappointed and sorry to see Dr. Partridge go," he said. "I'm sorry that the pressure got too great for him to stay on. And I am hopeful that students and faculty will support Hugh Farquhar to the limit."

Auchinleck said Partridge's decision was "his own" but that "with the pressure he's been under, there was no alternative but to accept that decision. There comes a point when a man can't take any more and he should step down."

Partride said in a statement following his resignation: "It wasn't an easy decision, but I believe this is the time for it.

"One compelling factor was that in the past month or so, my wife and I have seen signs in ourselves that we might be growing cynical or bitter. That would be a price we wouldn't want to pay.

CRISIS ENDED

"The university has passed through a crisis. Now is a good time for the university to seek new leadership, and for me and my family to build a new life."

UVic chancellor Roderick Haig-Brown said he is sorry to see Partridge leave.

"He has done a lot of good up there," he said.

Haig-Brown said he found the president's resignation "pretty surprising" at the time he first heard of it, but said the decision "had been well thought-out."

NO REPLACEMENT

No replacement for Partridge is in mind at this time, Haig-Brown said.

Dr. Charles Doyle, president of the UVic faculty Association, said Partridge's decision was "the best thing that could have happened to the university."

Doyle said when the actual moment of resignation arrived "there was the realization that an individual was involved and I couldn't help feeling sorry for him. It must be very difficult."

But Doyle said the situation on the campus "continued to deteriorate since the advisory board report. I got the feeling, and so did many others, that there couldn't really be a change until there was a change at the top."

SOONER OR LATER

Doyle called the tenure dispute at the university "a big element" in Partridge's decision to resign. "It had to happen sooner or later," he said.

Partridge was appointed president in November, 1968, and took office in July 1969. Since that time, and even before, the university has been embroiled in various disputes over non-renewal of contracts of some faculty members.

The dispute came to a head late in the last academic year, when students and faculty both voted non-confidence in Partridge as president. In May, the Canadian Association of University Teachers, which had represented the faculty members involved, passed a motion of censure against Partridge.

BOARD NAMED

Also in May, a three-man advisory board was appointed by the board of governors to look into the cases of three non-renewed faculty members. Hearings took place over a month at UVic, but the professors, the CAUT the faculty association and students boycotted them.

The advisory board released its report Sept. 22 and strongly backed the administration's poisiton in the dispute while criticizing the CAUT for its role.

Doyle said faculty of the university were not satisfied with the report but had nowhere to go.

Less than three weeks ago, he said, Partridge was strongly criticized in a meeting of faculty for a speech he made to a local Rotary club on "the pursuit of excellence" and its interpretation at UVic.

"Until that moment, when the speech was delivered, I think the administration may have felt it had weathered the storm," Doyle said.

On Jan. 28, the university newspaper, the Martlet, reported that Partridge's doctorate degree had been obtained from Blackstone College, a home-study college based in Chicago.

Partridge replied the next day that he had obtained both his doctorate in law and bachelor's degree from Blackstone as an external student. The UVic board of governors came out in full support of him.

Feelings of hostility on the campus grew to such an extent last spring that almost 90 per cent of the graduating class students at one meeting asked Partridge not to sign their degrees.

This request developed into yet another controversy when the omission of Partridge's name on the students' diplomas (used for ceremonial purposes) was noted on the students' academic transcripts (used for job applications).

Partridge came to UVic from Johns Hopkins University in Baltimore, where he had been a vice-president in charge of finance.

Cedar Hill Hikes Fees for Juniors

Saanich municipality's Cedar Hill golf course will double its membership dues for junior players next year — to $50 from $25.

Ald. William Noel, chairman of the golf course management committee, said today the fee increase will bring the Saanich course more in line with other municipally-owned courses.

As examples, he cited the $78 charged on Vancouver courses and $60 in Burnaby.

But Noel pointed out that most areas lay down specific periods in which juniors can play, and do not allow weekend use of courses by junior members.

"We don't enforce these restrictions," he said. "If the course isn't busy it is left to the discretion of the pro whether juniors can play."

145 JUNIORS

Noel said there are at present 145 juniors at the Cedar Hill course, and he thinks it unlikely any will be deterred from playing by the increase.

"At a very conservative estimate we reckon the average junior plays about twice a week throughout the year, so the fee works out at 50 cents a week or about 25 cents a game."

Junior fees at the three principal private courses in Greater Victoria range from $20 to $35.

There are no playing restrictions at the Royal Colwood club, where the fee is $20, but senior members have preference.

A spokesman for the Uplands club said the junior fee is now $25 but there is a motion for the club's annual meeting Nov. 25 to increase it by $15. Junior members are restricted to playing at certain times.

PIONEER COUNCILLOR WILL STAND

Ald. Nell Horth, who has been a member of North Saanich council since the municipality's incorporation six years ago, will stand for re-election in December.

Mrs. Horth is the appointed representative of Capital Regional Hospital District to the board of trustees of Saanich Peninsula Hospital. She is also chairman of the Vancouver Island Regional Board of Management.

"My policy will be the same as the one I have always followed," said Ald. Horth. "Integrity, an unbiased approach to all problems and consideration of what is right, not who is right, while striving to serve the community as a whole."

B.C. Indian Groups Urged to Unite

A suggestion that Indians and non-status Indians unite to exert more political power at the polls was made Tuesday by H. A. Smitheram, president of the B.C. Association of Non-Status Indians.

There are 600,000 non-status Indians in B.C. and about 50,000 registered Indians, he told the annual conference of the association.

"If this organization merged with the Union of B.C. Indian Chiefs we could exert influence over candidates for public office," he said.

Non-status Indians are Indians who are not registered with the Indian affairs department because of voluntary relinquishnig of rights, failure to register, or in the case of a female, by a marriage to a white or non-status Indian.

Smitheram said his organization started in Vancouver with 10 members in 1968 and within one year six locals were established in various parts of the province.

This year the organization has 37 locals registered and more applying for affiliation in the organization, chartered under the B.C. Societies Act, he said.

Non-status Indians want to be recognized as registered Indians and to receive the same benefits as native bands.

He said many Indians became non-status Indians because they were living in extreme isolation and simply never registered.

Others became disenfranchised because they had no other alternative.

"They couldn't obtain a registered trap line, they couldn't vote and they couldn't enter into a business contract unless they relinquish their Indian rights," he said.

He said a section of the Indian Act which states that a female Indian who marries a person who is not an Indian, becomes automatically a non-status Indian, is discriminatory and in contravention of the Canadian Bill of Rights.

LAND PURCHASE PAPER DEFENDED

Gordon Michell, 2598 Island View, today defended a ratepayers' petition on the contentious issue of acquiring a Brentwood parcel of land for $53,100.

He claimed that criticism of it by Ald. Ken Stanlake at Central Saanich council meeting Monday was based on false information.

At the meeting, Stanlake said he had conducted his own survey of some who had signed the petition and found that they had "felt duped" because of insufficient information.

Michell said today: "I obtained 250 of the 1,060 names on the petition myself. I would like to make it clear that the wording of the petition merely asked that ratepayers be given a chance to vote on the matter."

Mitchell added that ratepayers were not necessarily against the land purchase.

Anderson Gets Talk Date With Democratic Leaders

Esquimalt-Saanich MP David Anderson has been given a big boost in his effort to stop oil from being shipped down Canada's west coast.

He has been invited to address the Democratic Reform Committee of the Democratic party in Washington.

The Democratic Reform Committee is one of the most influential legislative bodies in the United States. Composed of 60 state senators, governors and representatives, it is responsible for the large part of the reform legislation proposed by the Democratic party.

Anderson will speak to the committee Friday.

Anderson is trying to launch a suit along with several prominent U.S. conservationists to keep the U.S. from shipping oil by tankers along B.C.'s coastline. The groups proposes a pipeline through Canada instead of the tankers.

"I am especially pleased to have this opportunity to speak to the committee because it comes at a time when many Canadians feel the United States is not listening to what they have to say," Anderson said. "I doubt that many Canadians get an opportunity for such a forum."

Harmony Aim Of Candidate

Mrs. Rubymay Parrott, 9620 Ardmore, will run for Saanich school board, representing North Saanich in the Dec. 11 election.

Mrs. Parrott, who was chairman of the board for two of four years served previously, says she feels she can restore harmony to the board and "allow it to get on with the business of educating children."

The former trustee added that there is a great need for someone to devote time and energy to problems of classroom-overcrowding and the school bus system.

Present North Saanich incombent, Charles MacNeill, 1492 Lands End, said today that he will stand for a third term.

BY INVITE ONLY

An uninvited guest at Victoria council's B committee meeting Tuesday refused to leave until asked if he wanted to embarrass a city hall employee.

Peter Hartnell, owner of the Queen Victoria Inn, was asked by chairman Clyde Savage to leave because he wanted only to listen to proceedings.

Savage said Hartnell had told him before the meeting he had a submission to make to committee.

Savage told Hartnell only invited guests can attend committee meetings and the press has a standing invitation. He said invitations are for the asking if a citizen has a submission to make.

When Hartnell refused to go, Ald. Peter Pollen said the procedures of committee should be upheld and therefore the police should be called.

Hartnell said he would leave only when the police came to remove him. He claimed a woman's voice from city hall had invited him to the meeting, and he wanted to know who it was.

Hartnell finally decided to leave after Mayor Courtney Haddock asked if he wanted to "embarrass" a girl who had made a mistake.

Profits Dip

CALGARY (CP) — The Calgary Exhibition and Stampede Ltd. had a net profit of $264,000 during the year ended Sept. 30, a decrease from $296,000 a year earlier.

Besides the 10-day rodeo, the company operates a hockey arena, an annual sweepstakes, curling and exhibition facilities and horse races.

Seven Years in Jail For Strangling Wife

NANAIMO (CP) — Robert Thomas Copeland, 26, was sentenced to seven years Tuesday after a Supreme Court jury found him guilty on a reduced charge of manslaughter in the May 6 strangling of his wife, Barbara Gaye Copeland, 24.

Copeland was originally charged with non-capital murder. The jury deliberated three hours.

Time to Give CBC-TV Back to Its Owners

Having examined the schizophrenic dilemma of the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation in television —the ardent wooing of sponsors through peak-time, often United States, programs of inferior quality to raise money for the production of quality programs in times of minimal viewing — we now propose to show them the way out.

The way out is to re-tool the television apparatus in Canada into two distinct national, networks, one commercial the other non-commercial.

Ideally the commercial network should be under public ownership so that its profts could be used for the subsidizing of the non-commercial network and to prevent the monopolistic private ownership of the single most influential medium of communication in this nation. But perhaps we've come too far down the road for such a structural change and let's put that, for the moment, at the bottom of the agenda.

This commercial network and its affiliates, as CTV is presently constituted, would remain responsible to the Canadian Radio and Television Commission in such matters as the duration and frequency of commercials and Canadian content. Its primary function would be to entertain and amuse, to cover sporting and special events, to satisfy the casual appetites of those who seek mainly divertissements. In news coverage, documentaries and magazine style programs it would have the same opportunity for excellence to complement its purely commercial output, the loss leaders that are already a part of the commercial television image.

The CBC, as the non-commercial television network, would be financed entirely by its share of the parliamentary grant which, for the past two years, has been fixed at $166 million. Hopefully this grant would be increased with recognition of the vital new role of the network to make up for the loss of some $47 millions that presently come from sponsors and that, as we've seen, accounts for the trash in the prime-time viewing hours.

In this new role the CBC would embark on a policy of educational, informative programming. There would be no attempt to judge the worth or determine the scheduling of programs on the arbitrary basic of their ratings, but simply on the assumption that there are a great many Canadians who think that it's time television grew up and that a sustained diet of serious, adult fare is long over-due.

Anyone who has been exposed to the television service of the British Broadcasting Corporation or the Scandinavian networks or, more recently and closer to home, the Public Broadcasting Service in the United States, will know that the words "serious" and "adult" are not to be taken as synonymous with boring or culturally pretentious. I have never had such pure enjoyment as a viewer since discovering the Seattle channel of PBS. The BBC, for all the jokes made about it, makes the mass of American commercial television seem downright infantile.

In its new, non-commercial format the CBC would abandon its pathetic and futile efforts to imitate or be competitive with the United States networks. There'd be no elaborate mounting of productions, no star system, no self-conscious show business, no effort whatever to pander to the viewer who turns to the small screen as an anaesthetic or escape from reality. The hours of transmission would be limited, depending upon the available budget. Each program would answer the test of whether or not it was a public service. The present staff of nearly 9,000, a truly ridiculous establishment, would be cut to the bone.

We need only look to the American Public Broadcasting Service to see what can be done for very little money with a direct, simplistic approach. Their instructional programs, using experts in every field, scientists, professors, musicians, artists, informed commentators, critics, are always absorbing. Each week Robert Cromie sits there with an author, just talking, and you learn more about current literature in a half hour than you'll learn from CBC-TV in a year. Far and away the most informative news hour on the screen anywhere is called World Press Review and consists of half a dozen qualified men and women analyzing the week's news as it has been recorded in the foreign press.

There are vast, virtually untapped resources for the CBC in this new format. Every major television network in the world, east and west, has a reservoir on film of drama, music and documentaries that could provide our own network with an international flavor to counteract creeping Americanism. The CBC does occasionally tap that source, as it did last week in the BBC's masterful presentation of Sean O'Faolain's "In the Bosom of the Country," only to emasculate it by a series of nauseating commercials.

Domestically we need a continuing series of hard-hitting programs on consumer affairs, nightly if possible, if only as an antedote to the poison of false and misleading advertising that pervades every chnnel.

We need national exposure of the undiscovered talent outside of Toronto and, more urgently, national exposure to some opinion-makers other than Gordon Sinclair, Pierre Berton, Betty Kennedy and that other small coterie of "personalities" who perform like a repertory company. It is probably CBC's greatest failure that it has provided no more than token representation to any area west of Toronto and east of Montreal.

Let the commercialism go on, in short, because there seems no way of ending it, because there may even be a demand for it. But, please, let's begin to think, at least, about returning the CBC to the people.

Harbor Fuel Tanks Nearing Approval

By CLEMENT CHAPPLE
Times Staff

Fuel storage tanks planned near fisherman's wharf are one step from approval by city hall despite a confidential report that says tank farms in Victoria harbor are a serious hazard to the city.

The Victoria Advisory Planning Commission on July 2, 1970, tentatively ruled out tank farms from the industrial zoned harbor shores, describing the facilities "a constant risk to the city."

But the APC in March of this year decided in favor of creating new tank farm zoning and at the same time approved an application by Imperial Oil Ltd. to build a 70,000-gallon facility of Huron Street on an abandoned Home Oil site.

Last Thursday council stopped short of approving the zoning changes when Ald. Peter Pollen requested a delay awaiting further information on safety procedures for the new tank farm.

At a B Committee meeting Tuesday, Pollen told officials and Imperial Oil representatives he was unsatisfied with safety precautions.

Pollen told fire chief Eric Simmons the latter had informed the APC last year that he was opposed to tank farms on the Harbor waterfront.

Simmons replied he did not recall such a meeting.

The APC report, in the form of notes taken from the APC meeting in July, 1970, calls for a written report from Simmons and his appearance before the APC, "at which time the whole matter will be given serious study."

The notes conclude: "because of the problems involved the preceding information to be treated with strong security measures."

The notes say "it is felt that the harbor area is not the ideal place for heavy oil storage as it remains a constant risk to the city.

"Other places suitable for this use would probably require truck haul or pipe-line," the report says.

It adds that the fire chief "has been considering upgrading of standards" for tank farms.

"It was finally decided that the commission be asked to consider ruling out tank farms in the M-3 (heavy industrial) zoned lands within the harbor area.

"Existing farms would remain as non-conforming uses, and would come under direct control of the fire marshall."

The report also says the commission considered the "advisability of recommending amendments to zoning bylaw to incorporate a proposed M-3T zone (tank farm zone).

"M-3 Heavy Industrial, the present zoning, allows any heavy industrial use as long as it does not create pollution, noise, dust, hazard.

"Tank farms are considered a definite hazard."

Pollen, at that time community planning chairman, was recorded on the notes as being on vacation.

The meeting was attended by chairman Joe Cunliffe and assistant city planner Peter Crisp was present.

The report says the commission earlier rejected an application for a tank farm south of the Songhees Road after Simmons reported it would be difficult to fight a fire in the area.

"City's plans for the harbor" was also given as a reason for the rejection.

"If tank farms are permitted down by the water this becomes extremely difficult and fire-fighting would require a barge job. Also to consider is spill-over danger, even with dykes."

The Imperial Oil farm planned for the old Home Oil site would replace one now in use on the McKay-Cormack waterfront which is closer to the city.

Imperial Oil representatives said Tuesday the precautions built into the new oil dispensing equipment were adequate and Simmons said he was satisfied with the plans.

The bylaw to allow the new tank farm went as far as a public hearing last week but council has yet to make a final decision on the measure. The Imperial Oil reprtsentatives said they wanted a larger tank farm than the 70,000-gallon structure now planned but they were settling for it.

Questioned by planning chairman Harold Olafson, they said they would be willing to give assurances in writing they have no intention of building a bigger facility.

Planning assistant Peter Crisp pointed out in a letter to committee that a larger farm could be built with approval from council and the fire chief.

Answering questions from Pollen, an Imperial representative said to install a tank farm well back from the shoreline would be economically "unfeasible."

Pollen replied that Imperial will pay "almost anything" to build a servicing outlet.

Pollen added that in the State of Washington, "this unit is obsolete" because of the possibility of an earthquake breaking open the tanks and sending inflammable fuels up harbors on a rising tide.

ELDERLY WOMAN THIEF'S VICTIM

A 70-year-old woman was the victim of a thief Monday when he grabbed her purse from a shopping bag she was carrying as she walked along Rockland Ave.

Mrs. Frances Wilcox, 820 Cook, told police there was about five dollars in the purse at the time.

Police said the purse-snatcher, joined by a friend, ran through a lane to Burdett and was chased to Yates by two construction workers who were working in the area.

The culprits escaped but the purse was recovered.

Indians Prepared To Teach Democracy

Indians some day may have to teach white Canadians all over again about democratic government Tony Belcourt, president of the Native Council of Canada, told the annual meeting of the B.C. Association of Non-Status Indians at the Empress Hotel today.

Belcourt said Canadians have lost democratic government because of their apathy and lack of awareness of what is going on in Ottawa.

"The government today is nothing more than a power structure with backroom boys making the decisions," he said. "Both Liberal and Conservative parties have gone stale."

He said at one time party associations in federal constituencies met to determine policy. "They now only meet once a year or every four years merely to support a candidate who has been chosen for them by the powers in Ottawa," he said. The associations mainly exist to prevent grass-root policies."

Belcourt said elected representatives mainly worked for their own interest or those of their friends.

"Oppose any efforts to rule from the top," he said. "Some day when white Canadians have forgotten what democratic government is, we may be able to tell what it is all about."

Belcourt lives in Ottawa.

Brothers Can Have List If He Insists: Trustees

The Greater Victoria School Board will turn over individual teachers' salaries if Education Minister Donald Brothers insists upon it, chairman Allan McKinnon said today.

"Legally he is entitled to do it," McKinnon said.

He added, however, that he couldn't understand why Brothers wants a pay list now since the school board submits annually a list of individual salaries to the provincial government under the requirements of the Public Bodies Information Act.

On Tuesday Brothers said he was prepared to force school boards to give him such a list following a refusal by the Victoria board to comply because it feared the salaries would be published.

Brothers said he may publish the salaries in a booklet.

McKinnon said the board's opposition to Brothers' request was for the record and to show that publication of the salaries would be done "without our complicity."

He said the board did not want to be party to the same kind of unpleasantness that developed between the doctors and Health Minister Ralph Loffmark when he published their salaries for the first time last year.

Byron Barker, president of the Greater Victoria Teachers Association, both praised and condemned Brothers' move.

He added that on one hand Brothers is continuing "to meddle" with school board affairs, but on the other, if the salaries are published, it will "serve to refute wild statements by employees of the school board that Victoria teachers are the second highest-paid in B.C."

He said it has been publicly stated that teachers here average $14,000 a year when in fact the highest a teacher can be paid is $13,975. He added that Victoria teachers are 51st in average pay out of 81 school districts.

Brothers said the Victoria board's budget least year was about $21 million, 57 per cent of which was covered by grants from the prvincial government. He said 71 per cent of the budget was taken up by teachers' salaries.

Curtis to Set Up Centre Talks

Saanich Mayor Hugh Curtis said today he will arrange a meeting with members of the Gordon Head Mutual Improvement Society to discuss their complaints about the municipality's new Gordon Head Recreation Centre.

Curtis said he was "surprised" at the criticism expressed at the society's annual meeting earlier this week, as the group had made no approach to council for some months.

Jack Groves, past president of the society, told the meeting the rental rates for the auditorium at the centre were too high for youth and other groups to afford.

He also said the society has been informed the new hall was not suited "for our so-called rambunctious youthful activities," such as Scouts' and guides' meetings.

As a result, Groves said, the society had decided to renovate the old Gordon Head community hall on Tyndall Avenue at a cost of $3,980.

The hall is scheduled to open for rental Nov. 30.

In an interview Tuesday Groves said society members were "very unhappy" about the administration of the facilities at the Gordon Head centre.

"We feel the hall is not being used to the extent it should be, or for the purpose for which it was designed," he said.

"I understand it does a whale of a business for dances and wedding receptions but was the centre intended for a dance hall and as competition to private enterprise in catering?"

Saanich recreation director Bill Young said the society's youth activities were offered the use of the hall during certain hours, but it was thought they should not monopolize it.

Donors Exceed Day's Objective But Blood Shortage Still Acute

An impressive turnout of blood donors in Victoria Tuesday pushed the Red Cross clinic past its objective and a spokesman urged the public today to keep up the momentum.

Objective at each of the clinics this week is 125 a day. Mohday's turnout was only 85.

Of Tuesday's donors, 167 were O group, effectively meeting a newspaper appeal from Charles MacNeill, supervisor of the Victoria donor program, to meet a shortage for this type of blood. There are currently three hospital patients, two in Vancouver and one in Victoria, requiring massive transfusions of O group blood.

"We're most grateful to them," MacNeill said today of Tuesday's donors. "This response to the appeal has helped relieve the acute shortage.

"But we still require donors at Thursday's and Friday's clinics."

A clinic was held today at Royal Roads Military College.

The clinic Thursday is in the Georgian room of The Empress from 2 to 5 p.m. and 6.30 to 9 p.m. Friday the clinic will be at the Saanich fire hall on Vernon Avenue, from 9.30 a.m. to noon and 1.30 to 4.30 p.m.

Q: I understand the size of the official Canadian football changed this year. Could you tell me what are the new dimensions of the ball and where I could buy one?— G.R.G.

A: The official ball being used in 1971 is slightly smaller than those used in previous seasons. For several years the size specifications for the ball have allowed for a tolerance of ¼-inch in circumference. However, whereas the ball previously has been tailored to the maximum specification, this year the minimum is being used. The 1971 rule book lists the circumference long axis from 28¼ to 28½ inches; short axis from 21¼ to 21 ½inches and the length of the long axis from 11 to 11¼ inches. Any sporting goods store should be able to supply the ball.

He Robbed Atlantic to Pay Pacific

"ALTHOUGH IT MIGHT BE unwise to get our hopes up too soon, it does appear that this could be our last centennial year for quite a spell. But before the lengthy procession ends, permit me a backward glance at the final moments of the big one which brought Canada to her hundredth birthday within Confederation.

As the New Year uttered its first hoot, the Rev. Harold Allen of 2140 Kings Road reached to his pocket for a carefully-stoppered plastic bottle. . . .

But we're getting ahead of the story, which began when retired United Church minister Allen set out for Expo and points east in the golden summer of '67 with that same container tucked into his luggage.

Expo visited, he continued on across a Confederated land to the Maritimes. Arrived at Sydney, N.S., he emptied the bottle into North Sydney Harbor.

"It held Pacific water," Allen explains this symbolic footnote to history, "and since it would be on my conscience if I disturbed the balance of the oceans, I borrowed a refill from the Atlantic and added it to Victoria's Inner Harbor at the stroke of midnight on New Year's Eve."

When a motion picture with Australian setting happens along, we're conditioned to expect a hearty, earthy, beery production in which lean men of the outback drive cattle or shear sheep. Something like The Sundowners, a film which lingers on as a TV perennial.

Now comes Walkabout, a subtle, brilliant Australian excursion playing at the Royal, to make hash of our pre-conceived ideas.

We hadn't much more than settled ourselves for an evening of uncomplicated Down-Under adventuring when it became apparent that we were in for a treatment that didn't go to the tune of Waltzing Matilda.

What we got instead, in excellent color, was a movie sometimes nightmarish, occasionally idyllic, and never less than gripping. It gave us puzzles to solve and meanings to grope for, and sent us home talking a blue streak.

Its background is the Great Victoria Desert, a hostile and sun-cursed never-never land. Characters are a young white girl, her little brother, and an aboriginal of about her own age.

White meets black. For the black boy on "walkabout" a lone roving with spears and boomerangs which is his prelude to manhood — the journey ends in tragedy.

I'm not going to tell you more about the story, since to do so might lessen the impact of sequences that curled our toes. Enough that Walkabout, like it or detest it, is the strongest picture we've seen in a considerable time.

Question here. A poem figures in the payoff. Thanks to a candy-paper rustler in the next row, I caught only a few words . . . something about "an air that kills." Can any reader clue me on it?

This takes a little remembering, but there was a time when our front porch mailbox would open with a clang and close with a bang about midway through each Saturday forenoon.

It was kind of nice, having a Saturday suburban mail delivery, and I missed it when it ended. As a matter of fact, I still miss that visitation, and am wondering when, if ever, we can expect to have it restored.

A Post office Department that is making a pretty good thing out of its customers should be able to work out a solution within the framework of a unionized service. It would be cheering to know that an attempt was being made.

At seven cents a letter — a rate due for a one-cent hike next January — I think we should be getting Saturday mail for our money.

Nemetz Report Awards Union 15.8% Pay Raise

B.C. Hydro 'Disappointed'

VANCOUVER (CP) — British Columbia Hydro electrical workers will receive a 15.8 per cent wage increase over two years under the terms of an arbitration report issued today by Mr. Justice Nathan Nemetz of the B.C. Court of Appeals.

The binding decision gives the 2,400 members of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers a 7.9 per cent increase retroactive to last April 1 when their previous contract expired and another 7.9 per cent starting Jan. 1.

The appointment of Mr. Justice Nemetz brought about the end of a province-wide strike earlier this year after months of fruitless negotiations. The union had sought a 22-per-cent increase and Hydro had originally offered 12 per cent.

In his report, Mr. Justice Nemetz said both sides agreed to the two-year term of the new agreement.

On the issue of contracting out by Hydro, the crown corporation must in the future require contractors using unorganized labor to maintain the same standards of wages and working conditions as the union agreement.

"It is apparent that the Hydro is now distributing its work among larger numbers of small contractors, many of whom have no collective agreements with organized labor," the report said.

On isolation allowances, Mr. Justice Nemetz ruled that it would not be advisable to make any change in the index prior to a scheduled review of the system next year.

"I have every confidence that after receipt of that (review) the parties will be able to establish an equitable cut-off point on the revised isolation index before the termination of the new agreement," he wrote.

In Vancouver this morning, a B.C. Hydro spokesman said: For Hydro, this award is a great disappointment."

"It will add greatly to inflationary pressures and will increase costs to our customers, who must pay an additional $3.3 million per year in wages alone to our 2,000 electrical workers — the most highly paid of any electrical utility workers in all Canada."

IF YOU DRIVE . . . DON'T SMOKE

BRISBANE, Australia (Reuters)—Heavy smokers have been warned to think twice about driving.

The Queensland director of air pollution control, A. Gilpin, says anyone who smokes 20 or more cigarettes a day suffers from impaired vision and judgment.

He told the annual conference of the Australian Automobile Association Tuesday: "If you smoke heavily, think seriously before taking your car on the highway, and if you smoke and drink you shouldn't be able to drive at all."

Gilpin said that road safety campaigns concentrated on alcohol and ignored the hazard of the smoking driver, but a smoker at the wheel breathed in more carbon monoxide from his cigarette than from his car.

Partridge Quits UVic Presidency

By BRIAN BUTTERS
Times Staff

Bruce Partridge announced his resignation Tuesday as president of the University of Victoria, saying his effectiveness "has been impaired by personal attacks."

Partridge made his announcement to a special meeting of the university faculty. He leaves the post Jan. 31, 1972.

Lloyd G. McKenzie, chairman of the UVic board of governors, said Partridge had reached his "outer limit of endurance" after a series of "sustained, remorseless, venomous attacks."

HIS OWN

Asked if Partridge's decision was influenced in any way by members of the board, McKenzie said: "Really, it was his personal decision.

"But in some like this, the decision has to be a collective decision. The board was conscious of the situation at the university and so was the president. For that matter, so were the faculty, the public and students."

McKenzie said "generous" arrangements had been made with Partridge concerning terminal salary.

Asked if Partridge will receive something besides the proportion of his yearly salary due to the end of January, McKenzie said: "Yes, there will be something extra. There has to be in terminal arrangements like this."

REASONABLE

"They have to be reasonable arrangements and, in fact, they have to be generous," McKenzie said. "It can't be done in any other way."

Partridge said he doubts very much that he'll stay in academic life but has no job to go to. Dean of education Dr. Hugh Farquhar has been appointed acting president until a replacement is found.

Gill Auchinleck, vice-chairman of the board of governors, said he agreed with Mc-

'Now Is The Hour'

The following interview took place Tuesday night in the office of University of Victoria president Bruce Partridge, who had resigned earlier in the evening:

Times: Was there any single turn of events which influenced you into deciding to resign?

Partridge: No, not really. From the time I came to the University of Victoria it was a question not of whether I was going to resign but when I was going to resign. I don't think a president of a university should stay on in his job too long. It just seems that now is the hour.

Times: Do you have any other job lined up now?

Partridge: No, I do not have another job waiting. I felt it wouldn't have been fair to the university to seek something else before announcing my resignation. Some people will think I'm crazy not to, but I'm not.

Times: Do you plan to stay in academic circles?

DO OTHER THINGS

Partridge: No, I doubt it very much. I will now literally start thinking about other things to do.

Times: Do you have any specific location in mind for the future?

Partridge: That depends on what turns up, but we do like B.C.

Grits Probe Leak

OTTAWA (CP) — The federal government Tuesday launched an investigation into the leak of a confidential cabinet document on foreign domination of the Canadian economy, regarded as one of the most serious security breaches since Prime Minister Trudeau took office three years ago.

External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp said the government would call in the RCMP if necessary in efforts to find out how the document, dated July 29, was acquired by Southam News Services.

Trudeau said today he personally ordered an investigation into the leak about cabinet discussions on the issue of foreign ownership.

He added in an interview that he instructed Revenue Minister Herb Gray to start an investigation.

He declined to say whether the RCMP is involved.

Initially, the investigation concerned publication by The Canadian Forum, a Toronto monthly magazine, of a version of the report on foreign ownership made to the cabinet by Mr. Gray.

The prime minister repeated that the cabinet wants to make an announcement on foreign ownership as soon as possible. This had been held up by the Aug. 15 U.S. imposition of a surtax on imports.

Trudeau said he still hopes an announcement can be made this fall. But a lot would still depend on U.S. economic moves.

Trudeau was asked whether the government policy will still include some sort of screening mechanism for foreign investment.

He said the public will just have to wait and see.

He was careful, however, not to deny that the cabinet had approved in principle a screening agency, at least initially, or that such an agency will be part of the policy announcement, whenever it is made.

Quebec No 'Have-Not'—WAC

OTTAWA (CP) — Premier W. A. C. Bennett of British Columbia today continued his opposition to equalization payments, especially those to Quebec, as the federal-provincial conference on the economy and fiscal arrangements entered its final day.

He said in an interview before entering the morning session that Quebec should not be considered a "have-not" province because its natural resources are as great as any other province.

He blamed the federal government for the situation, saying "at the present time we haven't got a national government in Ottawa, we have a government of Quebec."

Mr. Bennett's comments followed what Quebec Premier Robert Bourassa termed a "lively exchange of argument" between himself and the B.C. premier in the closed conference room Tuesday.

In an interview outside the conference, Mr. Bourassa said Mr. Bennett appeared to regard Quebec as the "coddled child" of Confederation.

"I don't know what he has against Quebec or against the equalization formula," Mr. Bourassa said. "He said that we should abolish the equalization payments formula."

In his opening brief to the conference Monday, Mr. Bennett said the equalization payments, which redistribute wealth from richer to poorer provinces, should be replaced by a national guaranteed income plan for individuals to be paid for by Ottawa.

However, a predicted fierce battle over Canada's equalization payments turned into a mild skirmish Tuesday. It apparently ended after Prime Minister Trudeau firmly announced there was no new territory up for grabs.

The present system of channelling tax money from the richer provinces to the poorer ones will continue as it has. And if the warring provincial premiers were disappointed, they were also relieved that they didn't lose some of their existing grounds.

IRA Vows Revenge

BELFAST (AP) — The Irish Republican Army threatened today ruthless reprisals against British intelligence men whom it accused of torturing guerrilla suspects. (See also page 41.)

An IRA statement, commenting on a British government inquiry into interrogation methods, demanded an investigation by a team of international jurists.

It added: "Torturing by British troops is still going on and nothing short of a full disclosure of the truth will shock the British public into disowning the infamous policy of their government.

"The Irish Republican Army has compiled a list of names of those engaged in torturing. Ruthless action will be taken against them in due course."

In Dublin, the Irish Republic's prime minister, Jack Lynch, said he is considering taking the issue before the European Court of Human Rights in Strasbourg, France.

HEFTY SHAKE URGED FOR UN

NEW YORK (UPI) — A top United Nations official called today for "shock treatment" — including staff cuts of up to 50 per cent — to revitalize the world organization.

Maurice Strong, the Canadian secretary-general of the UN conference on the human environment, described the United Nations as "a flagging organization which is somehow out of the tune with the needs and the moods of the times."

Pakistanis 'Repulsed'

NEW DELHI (UPI) — Government spokesmen today charged that a patrol of Pakistani troops invaded India's west Dinajpur district but was repulsed by Indian soldiers. They also said shelling attacks along the East Pakistan border killed 11 Indian civilians.

Old Fire Back At Labor Meet

VANCOUVER (CP) — The British Columbia Federation of Labor snapped out of an introspective mood Tuesday to adopt an aggressive set of policies on economic, environmental and political issues.

The old fire crackled most briskly over a resolution flatly rejecting any form of wage-and-price controls as an affront to working people.

It also flared up, however, in a standing ovation for David Barrett, leader of the provincial New Democrats, at the end of a frankly nationalistic speech attacking the free-trade proposals of Premier W. A. C. Bennett.

The opening Monday of the week-long convention was largely a self-criticism session with federation executives and delegates listing the shortcomings of the labor movement.

In the debate on wage and price controls, U.S. labor was damned for the extent of its cooperation with the economic policies of President Nixon.

U.S. labor's acceptance of a three-month wage-and-price freeze was as severe a blow to working people as its earlier support for the war in Vietnam, the convention was told by Ray Haynes, secretary-treasurer of the B.C. Federation.

Also approved was a resolution urging the Canadian Labor Congress to assist affiliates seeking greater autonomy.

Bowl Suit Filed

A number of B.C. companies and businessmen associated with the now-defunct plans for commercial development of Cypress Bowl in West Vancouver have been named as defendants in a legal action launched by another B.C. firm.

The plaintiff, Valley Royal Development Company, seeks damages in excess of $1 million for what it claims is breach of warrantees under which the firm would have developed Cypress Bowl into a recreation centre.

The writ was filed Oct. 28 in the Supreme Court of British Columbia but was brought to public attention today by Opposition Leader Dave Barrett.

Mafia Friends Vital to Sinatra

By NICHOLAS GAGE
(Third of a Series)

"Friendship is everything," says the Mafia don in Mario Puzo's novel The Godfather. "Friendship is more than talent. It is more than government. It is almost the equal of family. Never forget that."

The Mafia leader addresses this advice to a character named Johnny Fontane, an Italian singer who revives his sagging career with a straight action role. Many readers consider the career change to be one of numerous similarities between the fictitious Johnny Fontane and singer Frank Sinatra, who revived his career in 1953 with his Academy Award-winning performance in From Here to Eternity. (The successful comeback allowed Sinatra to announce his retirement early in 1971 while at the top of his profession.)

But those who know Sinatra well would realize that the similarity between Johnny Fontane and Frank Sinatra is superficial. Sinatra, for instance, would not need the lecture on friendship from the Mafia don. For Sinatra has, for 30 years, honored his friendships with Mafia leaders even though they have tarnished his image, damaged his business interests, and cost him his amiable relationship with the late President John Kennedy.

It is not at all unusual for singers to have to deal with gangsters, who have a stake in many of the nightclubs where entertainers get their start. But no other entertainer has ever built such acquaintances into enduring friendships.

Although Sinatra has never been accused of participating

Lively Passage Cut From Hansard

By PETER McNELLY
Times Staff

British Columbia's 1971 Hansard was published last week, seven months after the legislative session ended, with one of its liveliest exchanges missing.

The provincial Hansard, called Debates of the Legislative Assembly, routinely does not include debates of estimates or third reading of bills.

The debate took place March 23. Had the omitted section been included it would have appeared on Page 766 of Hansard.

In the printed version of the debate, Barrett was asking Bennett to take a second look at the bill. Hansard records that Barrett was interrupted after which the Speaker is recorded as saying:

"I don't intend to threaten any Member, but I'm going to get back to the principle of this bill"

The deleted material shows Barrett was having a heated exchange with Bennett who was interrupting and ignoring calls for order from the Speaker.

This is whas has been omitted:

Speaker: Order please.

Barrett: Mr. Speaker, may I submit humbly, obviously nothing stops the Premier speaking any time he wants. He breaks the rules of this House by jumping up when he doesn't have the floor by interrupting when he doesn't have the right.

Speaker: Order please.

Barrett: He doesn't understand the rules of the House. He makes his press conferences here in the House.

Speaker: Order please.

Barrett: He breaks the rules and he sits down and smiles about it. You know, Mr. Chairman, we see the Premier abusing the House time and time again.

Bennett: Oh no, we know who gets thrown out.

Speaker: Order please, We're on the second

Barrett: We know who's got the authority.

Speaker: Order please.

Barrett: Do you want to threaten to throw me out, again? You run the House that way, threatening the Members, threatening to silence them, threatening them all the time.

This statement is followed by the Speaker's printed comment about not wanting to threaten anybody.

Questioned about editing procedures Tuesday, Murray first said "Nothing was taken out of the text, nor was anything added to the text."

Murray later said he checked a typescript of the debate for March 23 and found a section had been omitted because it was "con-

Bizarre Request Turned Down

DEAR ABBY: I am interested in the letter from the bachelor who refused the request of his best friend and the friend's wife who asked him to attempt to impregnate her. It seems to me that the bachelor was inordinately selfish, as is true of most bachelors.

Should the bachelor have agreed, the attempt might have resulted in a conception and birth, making at least three people happy, the husband, the wife and the offspring. Respectfully — A Louiseville M.D.

DEAR M.D.: Surely you jest! The possibilities of multiple regrets in such a bizarre arrangement are endless. Man is not like the May fly, whose only purpose in life is to propagate, and having performed that function once, he drops dead.

DEAR ABBY: I know you don't use names or locations, so I'll be perfectly candid. I am in my late 30s and divorced. No children. I am very well off financially because of my divorce settlement. My husband wanted the divorce, not I. (Another woman.) I loved and trusted him and was disillusioned and hurt when he told me.

A few months ago I renewed my acquaintance with a handsome, charming gentleman. Gary (not his real name) is intelligent, sensitive, kind and warm. He is talented and self-supporting, and I love being with him. We've talked of marriage and I am considering it.

Now the problem: Gary is a homosexual, which I knew all along. He is satisfying in every way, and I am not jealous of his male friends. I was so deeply hurt by my husband, I never want that kind of love again. Give me your honest opinion of marriage between Gary and me. — Considering It.

DEAR CONSIDERING: I have often said, "All that is necessary for a marriage to succeed is that the two people really need each other."

Be sure you and Gary "need" each other for reasons that will endure. It is possible that you were so deeply hurt by a husband who replaced you with another woman that you'd feel more secure in a marriage which is not likely to the threatened by another woman. Enjoy Gary's company for the time being, but pany for tse time being, but don't marry him unless you are sure of your own motivations.

DEAR ABBY: I can sympathize with "Cries a lot." I'm emotional too, and had the same problem. I went to my obstetrician-gynecologist and he gave me a gigantic dose of estrogen, which really put me back on my feet in one visit.

I'm still very emotional, however. Beautiful music really gets to me. And when I see others cry, I join them.

I have a remedy which often helps. I pull out my keys and run my fingers along the grooves and try to memorize the dips and rises. It seems to take the edge off my emotionalism. One I didn't have a key, so I counted the holes in the insulation. That worked to.

I used to love to cry. I went to see Mrs. Miniver and cried all the way through it. — Mary In Fullerton

Free Day Care for Poor Proposed

WASHINGTONG (WP) — A Senate-House conference committee recently reached a tentative compromise agreement on providing day care services for children.

The compromise agreement calls for free day care for all children from families of four with less than $4,320 annual income. Children from families with between $4,320 and $6,960 will be partially subsidized.

For example, a family with $6,600 dollars income would pay only $228 a year for day care services worth about $2,000.

The tentative agreement on the child development act is subject to revision this week. The Nixon administration, already on record in opposition to an earlier compromise, has not indicated its position on the new proposal.

Both the Senate and House passed legislation which would for the first time provide federally subsidized quality day care services to millions of children from both low-income and middle-income families. The legislation, which is part of the Anti-poverty Bill, calls for day care to include education, nutrition and health care components.

The Senate passed bill provided free day care for families with less than $6,900 annual income, and partially subsidized day care for families with higher incomes. The House-passed bill cut off free day care at $4,320 income and provided subsidized care above that amount.

The Nixon administration has insisted that free day care be provided only for families with less than $4,320 income, and that services be given primarily to welfare mothers who would be put to work.

The compromise version decided on represents an effort of the conference committee to avoid a threatened presidential veto of a more expensive day care package.

However, a number of conservative organizations oppose the legislation on grounds that the government would have too much influence on a child's early development.

The conferees will meet again in an effort to work out differences on another aspect of the Anti-Poverty Bill which would create a legal services corporation.

Estate Auctioned

TORONTO (CP) — Antique dealers from Canada, the United States and Britain are gathering in Toronto this week for an eight-day auction of furnishings from Eaton Hall, the sumptuous estate of the late Sir John Craig Eaton.

The $1.5-million estate, in King Township north of Toronto, now is the property of Senaca College, which plans to use the property for its King City campus early next year.
